FRANKFORD (Special) — Volunteers are needed to assist with teenage sports, according to a recent survey to determine what recreational activities and programs are required in the community.

A questionnaire was circulated to determine the different types of resources, both human and public, now existing in the area. A follow-up meeting, May 8, at Frankford School was held to seek volunteer assistance. It is hoped to begin an organized program by September.

Museum Preview Sunday, May 20

PICTON — The Prince Edward County museum, under renovation for more than a year, will be opened on Sunday May 20, from 2 to 4 p.m. to permit the public to enjoy a preview visit. As yet no displays have been set up in the building, formerly the old Anglican church, Target date for the official opening is July 1, 1973.

Museum officials expect that a canon or the new organ attraction will be selected at a meeting tonight and The Macaskay Museum of Prince Edward County is among those suggested. This name incorporates reference to Picton's first Anglican minister who financed the construction of the church from his own pocket.

The brick portion of the church, the nave, was built from 1825 to 1827. In 1864 a stone addition for the choir was completed at the east end of the building and a stone tower with a spire added at the west end in the 1870s.

Picton mayor Harvey J. McFarland will donate a stained glass window to the county museum in memory of his mother and an artist's sketch of it will be on view at next Sunday's open house.

It is planned to restore the chancel as it was when the church was open as a place of worship. Many of the original stencilled decorations remain although the starry blue ceiling was lost when the pastor fell. One original light fixture still hangs above the choir loft.

Curator for the museum is Mrs. Jack Weisman of RR2, Picton.

Memberships Can Save Nature Trail

With booming urban populations putting pressure on the outdoors, Canadians must act now to preserve recreational space, James Staveley, Hastings - Prince Edward Recreational Trail Association president said Friday.

At the annual meeting of areas like the Quinte district — highly - prized as a recreation resource — must be prepared to share their resource with all comers, he told Centennial Secondary School students at the school's festival on Canadian theme.

One answer to both situations was a project like the trail — stretching 235 miles through Hastings and Prince Edward counties.

"Its value as a recreational asset can't be overlooked, he said.

Seeking financing, the trail association has approached local governments and tourist organizations. Its request for $500 was turned down this week by Hastings county council. Aside from local public sources, its only income would derive from membership fees.

But despite widespread use of the multi - purpose route—up to 2,000 snowmobiles have been counted on it during winter weekends — few people have joined the association, said Mr. Staveley.

He said the association has consulted Minister without Portfolio Margaret Birch responsible for provincial government youth affairs — on the possibility of using the trail as a summer job-maker for students.

The trail was built with a Local Initiatives Program grant. But the association has designed it to grow and meant to obtain other funds for maintenance and development. Memberships can be purchased by writing the association secretary W. G. Harvey at 966-3417.

Security Officer Course Offered

Security officers will be trained at Loyalist College in the future, with a one - year course that is the only one of its kind in Ontario.

Graduates will be security officers who can provide "in house" services to curb crime and loss of property and ensure the protection and safety of persons in commercial and industrial buildings, construction sites and institutions.

Enrolment in September will be limited to about 25 people. As much as possible, teachers will simulate real life encounters, so that graduates will be fully equipped to deal with all aspects of their jobs. Subjects will include Canadian Law, security practices, psychology, sociology, first aid and unarmed combat.

David Dewar, co-ordinator of the two-year law and security management program at Loyalist, will supervise the new program. Mr. Paine served with the Metropolitan Police Force in London, England, for 7½ years and has a wide background in security work in both the British and Canadian armed forces.

Firearm Definition Ruled on by Judge

The definition of a firearm came under scrutiny in Provincial Court Monday during the trial of a Point Anne man charged with pointing a double-barrelled shotgun at a Belleville youth.

The charge against Benjamin William Howell, operator of a Main Street variety store was dismissed by Judge J. L. Clendenning when no evidence was produced to show the gun fell within the legal definition.

"There is nothing before me that clearly brings this object within the definition of a firearm," said Judge Clendenning, pointing to the four-foot long shotgun introduced as evidence.

Under the Criminal Code, a firearm is defined as "any barrelled weapon from which any shot, bullet or other missile can be discharged."

Judge Clendenning said that without proof from an expert witness, the Crown could not request conviction for pointing an offensive weapon.

Four Belleville teenagers earlier testified that Mr. Howell levelled a gun at them from a window of his store on April 8. He was alleged to have shouted at one youth, Robert Melbourne, "Move your car or else."

The teenagers said a group of about 12 young people had gathered along the road and in Mr. Howell's driveway for a gab session. One youth said he heard clicks while Mr. Howell was pointing the gun.

Belleville Provincial Police officer later recovered the shotgun from Mr.. Howell's kitchen.

Ice Early In Arenas

It's going to be a short summer at Belleville's two arenas.

The ice at the Belleville Memorial Arena and at the Dick Ellis Rink has been on for less than a month and Recreation - Arena Committee members have directed that weather permitting, the two arenas be again operational for winter programming as soon as possible after Sept. 1.

Ice removal dates next spring have been set for April 14 at the Memorial Arena and April 28 for the Dick Ellis Rink.

The date for ice removal at the Memorial Arena, however, will be dependent on whether Belleville hockey teams are involved in provincial playdowns.

Masked Thief Robs Store

TRENTON — Shortly after 11 p.m. Monday a lone thief walked into the Mac's Milk store on Dundas St. West, relied the till and made off with an undetermined amount of cash.

While all this was going on, a store attendant was in the back of the shop refilling a milk cooler.

The thief was spotted as he ran out the door. He was wearing a balaclava face-covering ski mask.

Legion Donates Equipment

PICTON — Safety equipment for use in driver training courses has been presented to Prince Edward Collegiate Institute by Branch 78 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

Improved Communication Said Needed

BRIGHTON — Communications between the provincial government and the electorate has not been effective, members of the Prince Edward-Hastings Progressive Conservative Association told a trio of MPPs here Saturday night.

Prince Edward - Lennox MPP James Taylor, Quinte MPP Dr. R. T. Potter and Northumberland MPP Russel Rowe each spoke of recent government policies and activities.

However, criticisms were levelled at the premier playing up the more dramatic issues rather than the better aspects of recent government policy.

George Hees, MP for Prince Edward - Hastings, offered a solution. "The best money you could spend might be for half an hour on prime - time television to mention the budget and tell how deficit it is spent."

Riding past president Ted Parker agreed. With $181 million in grants being turned over to local municipalities, he said the government's position should be adequately explained.

Several weeks ago legionnaires George Wright and Harry Sisly, both members of the Picton police department, asked school trustees for permission to donate the equipment for use in the school. Board members agreed to the proposal and PECI has now become the third school. Board members agreed to the proposal and PECI has now become the third school.

The presentation was made by legion president Raymond Kleinsmeder,to trustee Edward Rutter, representing chairman of the Prince Edward County school board, Clare McFaul.

Mr. Rutter, in turn presented the equipment to Robert Munn, vice-principal of PECI, acting on behalf of principal, Paul Burd.

Herbert Pliwischikles, a PECI teacher involved in the safety training programs of, the school explained the function of the machines. One offers a test for visual acuity, another for depth perception and a third for ride vision. A fourth instrument times reactions and a fifth checks drivers for color blindness.

School trustee William Lane who attended the presentation, termed the legislature's generosity "an noble gesture" and expressed gratitude for the safety devices.

Also present was a Prince Edward director of education John McNeil and PECI teachers Douglas Baker and Compton Singh.

Mr. Pliwischikles volunteered to return to the legion hall at a later date to run driver safety tests for interested members.

Equipment Engraved

TRENTON — Due to recent break - ins at the Hastings County Board of Education media centre at 2 Wooler Rd. here, officials have installed precautionary measures to discourage future thefts.

Robert Wylie, co-ordinator of the media centre, said Monday all existing equipment at the centre has been engraved with identifying marks. A tool for this purpose was borrowed from the Belleville Police Department.

Mr. Wylie says if any items are stolen, the identifying marks can be scraped away, but laboratory tests would easily make the marks legible again.

"It's a foolproof method," he said.

Transport Scene

We have a note from the Department of Transport reminding us that this week has been declared National Transportation Week.

With the reminder comes a spate of interesting information on the many facets of getting from A to B. For instance the ministry is responsible to Parliament for three administrations (Air, Marine, Surface), two agencies (Transportation Development and Arctic transportation), a Commission (the Canadian Transport Commission) and nine Crown Corporations, which together employ 123,000 personnel. The Crown Corporations are Air Canada, Canadian National Railways, Northern Transportation Co. Ltd., St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, National Harbors Board and four pilotage authorities (Atlantic, Laurentian, Great Lakes and Pacific).

There is a lot of other information, such as the fact that more than 100 million tons of cargo were handled in 1972 by the three major ports in Canada administered by the National Harbors Board; that the ministry has embarked on a $3.7 million program to update air navigation facilities in the north — in the Yukon and Northwest Territories — and that measures to combat pollution in Canadian waters have included a total of $133,625 in fines.

But one item caught our eye in particular, for it affects the welfare of Canadians directly, as individuals and families, as well as the economy. That is, the accident toll on the highways. Last year there were more than 5,500 fatalities and almost 200,000 cases of serious injury. These are appalling statistics and yet we tend to shrug our shoulders and ignore them. For those involved it is another matter: grief, suffering, deprivation.

For about four years now the news has been dominated by the ghastly deeds of urban guerrillas, in places like Northern Ireland and the Middle East. Yet each year in Canada more than five times the number of people killed since about 1969 by guerrilla action in Northern Ireland, die on the roads here. Thus, in the four-year period some 20,000 Canadians have died in auto accidents.

The Government release notes that Transport Minister Marchand has announced his support of a 1973 NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) resolution calling for a reduction in road traffic fatality rates by 15 per cent over the next five years. We hope practical steps will be taken that will permit this objective to be realized. In addition we believe that mass transportation needs to be improved in this country. The current spectacle of so many young people hitchhiking about the country is not a happy one. Existing means of transportation by the automobile, principally planes, trains and buses — are inadequate considering the entire scope of Canada's transportation needs. The Government should be thinking of means of remedying this situation.

Duel in the Sun

Well if tennis is any criterion, male chauvinism and superiority remain unchallenged — and equality of the sexes is still only a figment in the imagination of women's liberbers.

For out there in the warm sun and horse-opera scenery around San Diego on Sunday, an old workhorse of a former champion in R. L. (Bobby) Riggs, now 55, defeated one of the world's top women players, Margaret Court of Australia in straight sets, 6-2, 6-1.

When the pair walked on court and Riggs gallantly presented his opponent with a bouquet, the women's libbers were in full cry. They were there — many bloody buttons but opinion on the outcome seemed almost equally divided. Other former tennis greats, like Donald Budge and Tony Trabert were there for the kill which one or the other player, according to whose side you were on, was going to mete out.

As it happened Riggs played the exquisite (?) opponent, exasperating baseline and spin and lob game that made the demolished opponents more than 30 years ago. Aside from a few fine rallies and shots the jittery and error-prone Mrs. Court never had a chance.

There is talk of a re-match on Father's Day and there is no doubt Mrs. Court is capable of better things. All are agreed though she will have to abandon the baseline and force the net more if she is to cope with the canny Riggs.

Canada's Farmers in Losing Fight with Inflation

By TERENCE MEAGHER
Kemptville Agricultural College Staff

For anyone concerned with rising food prices, last week was a national lock-and-stalemate time. So was the week before and the week before that again. Everybody is getting frustrating to the farmers and almost everyone else, the great food debate has featured on the one side the indignant and self-righteous rhetoric of the food industry and on the other the hostile and cynical charges of the media at packers, chain stores, and with growing frequency the farmer himself.

In the past year, western wheat has gone from $1.60 to $2.62 a bushel; steers (live-weight) from 35 to 42 cents; cheese, eggs, milk are up 10% or so. are most staples. Whatever they you want to look at it, food prices have been increasing more rapidly in the last year than ever before.

To many people, the most perplexing thing about the increases is they have been encouraged by both the federal and provincial governments. Jim Cochran, Farm Manager most Head at Kemptville College, provides part of the explanation. "Farmers," he says, "can no longer absorb inflationary costs to the extent they have in the past." If farmers are to continue to produce, agriculturists will tell you, they must receive not only a better return but one which will increasingly reflect the prosperity level of the country.

Despite the growing research claim reflected by the return in the land movement, few people want to work farms on a commercial basis. Last winter a young urban student at Kemptville College submitted a brief to the federal government in which he outlined a new type rural community: people oriented theatre, workshops, libraries and a bit of organic food cultivation. Significantly the daily bread food debate has featured on the one side the indignant and self-righteous rhetoric of the food industry and on the other the hostile and cynical charges of the media at packers, chain stores, and with growing frequency the farmer himself.

Await Data

Doctors' Fees To Stay Same Until Autumn

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Medical Association will hold the line on its present fee schedules at least until new data on doctors' incomes is available this fall.

President Dr. L. R. Harnick of Toronto told a news conference Monday the OMA council—the parliament-like, decision-making body—had approved a recommendation that the fee schedule not be revised at this time, except for addition of new items.

However, the council also recommended that it supported the doctor's right to charge any fee which is agreed upon in advance if there is an alternate doctor available who charges the OMA rate.

Dr. Harnick said many members had reported that their income levels were dropping and had said there should be "no further erosion."

This means, he said, that council will reconsider fees when new information on doctors' incomes becomes available from the Ontario Health Insurance (OHIP), probably late this fall.

The recommendation for increases—if approved by the OMA—then would have to have a six-month waiting period before the provincial government would implement them.

Dr. E. J. Moran of Toronto, chairman of the medical economics committee, said it therefore was "highly unlikely" that announcement of increases in the fee schedule could be made before 1974 although it was possible that there could be an increase implemented in 1974.

The fee recommendations came following approval earlier in the day of an OMA-sponsored study carried out on the profession by a non-medical man, Edward Pickering of Toronto.

The doctors approved the study, which had been criticized of the OMA for its high-handed attitudes toward the public, including "the most contentious [illegible] is joint committee of representatives of the profession and the provincial government should look into the ways doctors are paid and their income levels.

Mr. Pickering had recommended that the committee of the association and the government would be responsible for reviewing and revising the fee schedule.

Delegates directed the board to explore ways and means of setting up the joint committee and to report back to council on the reaction of the government, the cost and who should be on the committee, Dr. Harnick said.

The doctors also jumped on the handwagon of consumer participation by approving "after some discussion" another recommendation in the Pickering report calling for an advisory council of members of the general public.

The board will act on this advice, said Dr. Harnick, and look into the setting up of such a council.

During opening sessions, delegates also had discussed a recent announcement by Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons that it had set up a formula for assessing the quality of service given by general practitioners or family doctors, Dr. Harnick told reporters.

The formula, based on assignment of "units" to various services performed by doctors, called for a cutoff level of OHIP payments to doctors getting more than $41,000 a year.

Dr. Moran told the news conference that a college representative had spoken to the OMA meeting and explained that doctors who earned more than this amount would be investigated to assure that they were giving quality service.

The formula is based on 300 office visits a week. Beyond that level, the college said, a doctor either was working exceptionally long hours or possibly short-changing the patients.

Lewis Says College Tries To Control Payments by OHIP

TORONTO (CP) — New Democrat Leader Stephen Lewis accused the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons Monday of attempting to take control of payments under the Ontario Hospital Insurance plan.

Making reference to a formula released by the college's medical review committee that set out a minimum income of $37,842 for general practitioners, Mr. Lewis said the doctors were being both "presumptous" and "unilateral".

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said because the committee was established under the direction of the ministry of health doctors would see statements by the committee as government policy and "a license to remove money from the Medicare Fund."

Social Development Secretary Robert Welch said the reports being referred to appeared to be only mathematical translations of the studies on the concept of quality control.

Mr. Welch also noted that the ministry of health would be announcing controls for payments under medical care insurance.

Outside the legislature, Mr. Welch said $50,000 "is a pretty fair sum for any one to receive" and indicated the government would not be influenced by the committee's figures.

Mr. Lewis noted that the committee claimed responsibility for production and application of the formula as applied to the medical care plan.

"Since when is the public plan with $20-million of public money at the direction of the medical review committee of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons?" asked Mr. Lewis.

He asked whether it was the doctors or the government who ran the plan.

Early Retirement

LEEDS, England (CP) — Soldier Andrew Cosgrove became Britain's youngest army pensioner after doctors at his Yorkshire camp discovered that marching gave him flat feet. Andrew, 18, was awarded $1,000 disability pension. "It was a great disappointment," he said. "I've always wanted to be a soldier and fight in Northern Ireland."

Skeletons Found

LANDSBERG, Germany (AP) — Workers building an earthen dam uncovered the skeletons of seven inmates of a Nazi concentration camp.

Mr. Welch told the legislature that he wasn't accountable for the activities of the college, but said there was no question as to who was running the medical run the plan.

Mr. Welch said the minister of health would want to take the college's conclusions into account when compiling the government's plans on medical claims.

Ontario Tax Raise Passed

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's sales tax officially was raised to seven per cent from five per cent Monday night after a long and stormy legislature debate.

The controversial increase, which merchants have been collecting for two weeks, was the subject of an unrelenting assault by both the opposition parties.

Third reading passed by a vote of 55 to 32, with all Liberal and New Democratic members opposing the bill. Opposition critics have termed the tax increase illegal because of its retroactive aspects.

Treasurer John White, who continually has been assailed by the Opposition because of the increase, flashed a V for victory sign as soon as the vote was taken. He then left the house before the bill was given royal assent.

During the final hours of the long debate, NDP Leader Stephen Lewis labelled Mr. White an incompetent and a charlatan.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said the bill would seriously damage the position of both the treasurer and the Conservative government.

Mr. White maintained throughout the debate that the increased levy was progressive and would both help the lower-income family and continue to shift the tax burden off real estate.

Municipal United Front To Be Sought in June

OTTAWA (CP) — A new attempt will be made in June to save the municipal united front displayed at recent national conferences with federal and provincial governments.

The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities (CFMM) is seeking a compromise which will persuade big cities to stay in its ranks following the CFMM annual meeting in Charlottetown.

Federation officials say they hope discussion at the June meeting of two resolutions dealing with CFMM organization will lead to the solution.

The CFMM dominated the municipal delegation at the November federal-provincial-municipal conference in Toronto.

By the end of the conference, all provincial municipal groups belonged to the federation.

Calgary Mayor Rod Sykes said before a recent big city meeting in Toronto that a likely outcome of the gathering would be resignation from the federation by Calgary, Vancouver and Toronto. Montreal is not directly a CFMM member.

So far, Mayor Sykes' prediction has not been fulfilled. Indeed, several municipal leaders at the Toronto meeting indicated continued support for the CFMM.

But, it is clear that some municipal leaders are unhappy with the CFMM as a representative of big city interests on the national scene.

Short Story Winner 'Never Stopped Writing'

Pauline Ablett

Like most children, Pauline Phyllis Best made up stories and characters while she was growing up in England.

Unlike most, she never stopped.

Today she's Pauline Ablett, Belleville resident, mother of three - and winner of the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire short story contest.

Writing under the pseudonym - required by contest rules - Phyllis Best, Mrs. Ablett entered the province-wide contest without telling her family.

In fact she not only didn't tell husband David - he's a CP3 Trenton-based flight engineer - she entered the competition, she didn't tell him when she won.

"David was away when the news came," she explains, "and I just didn't know how to tell him."

Mr. Ablett finally heard the news from a neighbor at their Oak Lake recreation spot.

"How can you write a story then not have enough words to say 'I won,' David asked her, amazed.

There are, actually, 3,500 words in her story, a mysterious drama with a surprise ending. The characters are large as life.

"It's fun making people up," says Mrs. Ablett, "but I don't know enough about them to write a novel from them."

"I've been writing a long time ... it's a hobby. I used to write them just put the stories away, though; I don't have masses of manuscripts."

She entered the contest because of a self-challenge.

"I saw the notice about the contest in the library and I said to myself 'You've bidded yourself long enough that you can write - maybe you'd better prove it'," Mrs. Ablett says.

She did.

Educated in England, Mrs. Ablett is completing Grade 13 through Ontario Department of Education correspondence courses in order to qualify for admittance to a Library Science course. Meanwhile, she'll keep writing.

"I can't see losing it (writing) now that I've had a success. I'll continue writing - but let's be honest - I'll never win a Nobel Prize," she says.

Business and Professionals Hear Potter

Wealth does not ensure a happy, stable population, Dr. Richard Potter, minister of health, told Belleville's Business and Professional Women Monday night.

Though Canada's gross national product is one of the world's greatest, Dr. Potter said he was concerned with mental health here.

"We should take a hard look at mental health," he said, comparing Canada to Sweden, another wealthy country. The minister said he was concerned with people's happiness in a leisuretime society.

"Twenty-five percent of the (Swedish) population required psychiatric care," Dr. Potter said, referring to a recent Swedish survey.

Closely related are problems caused by alcohol. He said more than $130 million is spent by Canadian taxpayers on alcoholic diseases.

Economic consequences of alcoholism in Sweden, he said, have been studied, and they include on-the-job accidents, absenteeism, and costly medical problems.

"Participation and involvement are tools to fight malaise in the province," Dr. Potter said.

During a question and answer period, Dr. Potter commented on doctors and their public image. He said there is a need for professionals today to establish their public relations.

There are abuses in the health care program said the doctor. Under the Pickering Report, Section H, Dr. Foster said the government and Ontario Medical Association have set up a committee to study doctors' fee schedules. Dr. Foster said the task will almost necessaity.

"But controlling abuses needs public support," said the guest speaker.

A Life-long Love Affair With Trains

TORONTO (CP) — Elizabeth Willmot likes to tell the story of the old railroad man who told her how he loved steam locomotives.

"He said, 'You can admire the sleek efficiency of a diesel, but you can't have a love affair with it.'"

Miss Willmot's own love for the days of the steam trains began when she was a little girl, taken from Toronto to visit grandparents in nearby Aurora.

"My very first recollections revolve around railways. I remember the excitement of being in a railway station, all the people and the smells and the sounds. They seemed to be such important buildings, and, of course, they were.

"If I had my choice of 'where do we go today' it was always, 'let's go and watch the trains.'

Her enthusiasm stayed with her, and became a lifetime hobby of taking pictures of steam trains, of the people who worked on them and of the stations they pulled into.

"I've been taking railway pictures for years and years, since the steam era."

She says her interest accelerated when the diesel came into general use and passenger service began to dwindle. Now she spends most of her holidays and weekends taking pictures of old stations before they disappear.

"You could see the stations would be closing. I became intrigued by them, the variety. Because of what the railways meant to Canada, the architects went overboard. The opening of a railway station was a very exciting time. They'd have fireworks and dances.

"The ending they come to now is just atrocious. There was a beautiful one at the forks of the Credit River (20 miles northwest of Toronto), pulled down piece by piece, I guess just by boys. Eventually it was pushed over a precipice."

Miss Willmot has photographed railway stations in Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia, and is planning on doing the East Coast this summer.

She is a medical secretary. The railway pictures have been hobby, though she sells prints, which she makes herself, and is often invited to hold shows. Her collection and her knowledge are well known enough that she has had a visit from the Heritage Canada staff on federal parks board for information.

She is also planning a book that she would like to call Meet Me at the Station.

She says she has never used elaborate camera equipment:

"I have a battered old Rolleiflex. It's holding together by a prayer, but it does the work."

She tries to get background information on all of her subjects, usually from the people in the town.

"Photographing these old stations opens up so many areas. You meet people who want to talk to you. I get information from the people in the town and I get letters from station agents or their families who have things they want to tell me. . . .

"But you must never arrive at the stage where you think railway days are over. Last winter I was standing on what I thought was a bit of abandoned track and I just happened to see the headlight of a train coming toward me.

"I threw my equipment and myself into a snow bank beside the track just in time."

Miss Willmot has one dream to realize, a station of her own.

"I haven't got a station yet, but I'm looking. I would like to get one where the tracks have been removed and I could use it where it stands."

Doris Compares Golf to Life:

'Play the Ball From Where It Is'

Walter Hagen, in a hotly-contested golf game, drove the ball off the tee straight down centre of the fairway. A long drive, but it hit a foreign object on the fairway which should not have been there. The ball bounced off the deep rough and landed behind a tree.

Who he came up to it one of the spectators said: "It's not fair, Mr. Hagen, you shouldn't have to play the ball from there." And he replied: "Well, that's where the ball is, isn't it?" — which is not only a great thing to say about golf; it is a great thing to say about life.

We have to play the ball from where it is; not where we wish it were. — Rev. Dr. C. Andrew Lawson.

When Mom Called 'Mom' She Gets the Hiccups

Dear Ann Landers: Our son is 24 years old. He began seeing a divorced woman who is 10 years older and looks every day of it. I was sure the affair would blow over and said nothing. He knew I disapproved. A few weeks ago they announced their engagement, which was a shock to both my husband and me. This evening at dinner [illegible] five years younger than [illegible]. Ann, Need I tell you how I felt when she started to call me "Mother"? the day after the engagement was announced?

Last night she called me "Mother" four times during dinner. It ruined my appetite and I got the hiccups during the meal which added to my embarrassment. My husband seemed to think it was funny. I could have killed him.

What should I do about it? Obviously she is doing this to make me feel older and to remind me that she will be a member of the family—whether I like it or not. I'd appreciate your advice.—Exeedra Headache

Dear Ex: Get down to basics. The next time she calls you "Mother," ask her to call you by your first name. The doll is going to be around awhile and there's no sense in going through life with hiccups. and Indigestion.

Dear Ann Landers: I could never ask my mother this question—she'd kill me. But I do need an answer. Please help me. When I was 15 I made a very big mistake. I was lucky. I didn't get pregnant. I am 18 now and going with a wonderful guy who respects me very much. We are talking about getting engaged when I graduate from high school in a few months and I need to know something. Can a fellow tell if a girl is a virgin? I don't want to go into my past history. Will he know?—No I.D. Please

Dear N.: In most instances there is no definite, irrefutable, physical evidence of virginity. If he's as wonderful as you say, he won't ask questions.

Dear Ann Landers: I would like to address this letter to "Yes, This Means You." Your poor woman sounds so sure of your husband I hate to take the wind out of her sails.

I feel terribly sorry for her, for ANY wife who is 10 per cent certain her husband will never stray because she's a lost number and their sex life is great. Of course, she may be right, if she's lucky enough to have a mature spouse. But usually the men are not so mature. It's a shock for a middle-aged woman to discover that the old boy is stashing girlie magazines and stag movies and bringing home novelty-store tricks to rev up his sex life. After the shock wears off, she figures that if thousands of people are getting their jollies out of these things that maybe they are normal and she's nuts.

Finally she goes to a psychiatrist (where her husband really ought to be) and I a[illegible] that she's O.K. but he is stuck[illegible] there at the 12- to 16-year-old level. She then has two choices. She can either dump him, or she can be a loving and patient wife and keep her feelings of [illegible] to herself that nobody changes anybody. Everybody has to change himself. And that is the beginning of wisdom.I'm Talking About Us, Dear

Dear Talking: Truer words were never spoken. I hope the thousands of women who have this problem will clip today's column and read it when the old boy regresses. It might give them hope.

I take issue with the suggestion that any significant proportion of women enjoy being an alcoholic's wife - unless a woman in question lands the ebbey herself! Many women stay in there pitching because of children, or no material means of moving out.

True, it is a moral disease, but also a physical one. Some human physiques react to alcohol chemically and irrevocably; and get out of control. Usually there is some deep-seated psychological reason, too, for drowning sorrows.

Somebody else might take out frustrations in bad temper — I intend - in an assumed self-righteousness. Also hard to live with.

Dear Doris: Mr. I. Marvel asks why are wives so jealous.

I am married to a man who kisses other women and will pull a girl down in all on his lap. But I soon found a medICINE FOR HIM.

When we went out I began sitting on the lap of some handsome man and would sup a drink from his glass. I also gave them kisses - something I had never dreamed of doing in my life.

When we got home my husband would not talk to me. He was the one who was jealous. I had my fun too. Worked on it. It's great.— A Real Good Tonic.

Dear Tonic: What's good for the gander is good for the goose? I grunt you it does help a man to see what his wife feels like when he cheats on her — even ever so little. But I can't quite see it as a way of life.

LIKES WORKING OUTDOORS—Pat Hutton helps put eavestroughing on a house in Orillia, Ont. She worked in a Toronto office a while but prefers working outdoors. Mrs. Hutton started working for a roofing and eavestroughing firm in November as a joke because nobody thought she would really interested in the job like this.

"It was a bit rough at first. It didn't take too long to get used to the carrying and the climbing, but the hammering and the sharp edges on the troughs were hard on the hands."

Dave Raymond, her boss, says Mrs. Hutton started working at the worst time of year for roofers, in weather men have found too tough to stand.

"She's worked in 20-below zero weather without a complaint. She can do the work as well as the next man."

Mrs. Hutton worked in an office in Toronto.

"I didn't enjoy it at all, but I really like this outdoor work.

"I wouldn't mind trying some other outdoor jobs if I thought they were all right. I don't want to go back to an office job, though."

Lose Weight, Eat Right

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — While everyone is lamenting the high price of food these days a Peterborough woman is quietly showing people how to feed their families a perfectly balanced diet and at the same time guaranteeing she can take a healthy slice off the food bills.

Mrs. Doreen Hicklin, the chief dietitian at Peterborough Civic Hospital, spends her days creating nutritionally balanced diets for patients, and instructing overweights and diabetics on how to eat properly.

"If people are eating properly their grocery bills will go down," she said. "That's a guarantee."

The nutrition expert, who recently participated in evaluating a survey of Trent University students' eating habits which showed 95 per cent were on poor to dangerous diets, said it easy to eat properly once a person understands how the body uses the food we eat.

Six free people do.

"It is a very simple process really," she said. "Once you get that you've got the key."

She said you need food just as your car needs gas, and you need it every four or five hours. To get the most efficient maximum time energy lasts from a meal to about four hours. By that time the glucose—the energy drawn by the body from the food we eat, and which is pumped into the blood from the liver—has dropped to a low level in the blood, kicking in your appetite as a signal for more food.

Whether you eat or not the body will satisfy its hunger. If you don't eat, the body begins to eat itself. The glucose level goes back up in the blood, and the hunger passes.

And that's where people make a big mistake by thinking they are losing excess fat by skipping meals.

The body compensates for lack of energy by extracting enough protein from lean body weight (muscle structure) to keep it going for another four hours.

Obviously, eating up your muscles by skipping meals is not a wise way to keep weight down. It makes for weak people.

About six or seven hours after your last meal the energy your body has taken from the muscles is used up.

Still in need of energy, the body enters into what Mrs. Hicklin calls "the starvation cycle." It starts to eat up fat — but not storage fat, that stuff that sticks out over your belt. It eats up vital insulating fat that coats all the nerves throughout the body.

And that causes headaches, tension and nervousness. She said prolonged practice of a diet that pushes you into the starvation cycle hastens hardening of the arteries, senility, strokes, heart attacks, arthritic crippling disorders, and "mood swings" that can "put you into the psychiatric ward."

"Instead of preventing obesity, you end up by inviting a host of ruinous diseases in later years.

To avoid this you should eat every four or five hours.

And each meal should contain a balanced mixture of the three types of foods: carbohydrates, protein, and fat.

Carbohydrates are all fruits, breads, potatoes, one-half of milk, green and yellow vegetables.

Protein is prevalent in meat, fish, the other half of milk, eggs, cheese, and a short time (for sweet things) to up to one hour.

Protein foods give energy lasting for two hours. When you eat them in combination of protein and carbohydrates the energy is stretched out to four hours.

If you over-eat, that is eat more food than your body can use, the excess will be stored as fat.

"The only way to lose the storage fat is to stop storing it," Mrs. Hicklin said. "To do this you have to eat balanced meals, every four or five hours, when your appetite signals. Eating one meal a day is very unsatisfactory."

If you are still in doubt, listen to your kids, not your ancestors.

"Kids are nearly perfect," Mrs. Hicklin said. "They always know when they should eat but we start to rule them at a very early age, right from when we start to add sugar to their formula." If a child is hungry an hour before dinner it is better that he eats a cookie and holds off his appetite for a while than if he doesn't eat and his body has to feed on itself.

"We've been given a set of natural instincts. We should learn to follow them."

Calf Club Picks Cows

Four Ayrshire cows were judged individually by members of the Tweed 4-H Calf Club at their meeting and letter Paul Tummon, eldest of the group, told the members which were judged properly and why.

The members were then taken in to the barn at Gerald Tummon's farm where members were asked to make a choice of which three of the 10 Ayrshires they would dispose of by sale, if they were the case. And the members picked the three poorest ones, stating if they kept the rest of the 10, they would not have a healthier herd. Lunch was provided by Mrs. Tummon at the conclusion.

The next regular meeting will be held on Ken Thompson's farm, at RR2, Roslin, at 8 p.m. on June 21, when the members will be taught how to make rope halters for the calves.

Abortion Film Earns Protests

TORONTO (CP) — An anti-abortion group says it will challenge CTV's right to continue broadcasting because of a film on abortion screened Sunday on the network's public affairs program W-5.

Stabbed Wife After Threat Of Abortion

TORONTO (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury heard a statement Monday in which William Mulligan, 23, charged with non-capital murder, admitted stabbing his wife last Nov. 11 while they were on their honeymoon. She died later in hospital.

He said his wife told him she was pregnant and "was going to kill the kid."

"She tried to kill the baby with a coat hanger."

In the statement, Mulligan said both he and his wife had been drinking at the time and that he "just went berserk" and brought a knife in to frighten her.

Mr. Justice G. A. Addy said woman had been under the influence of heroin when she made the accusation.

but had no immediate success.

Three hours after the shooting, a police lieutenant said "We're pretty well convinced he's not in the area."

Authorities said the gunman opened fire on cars on Interstate 405, apparently from a position under a freeway ramp.

The shooting occurred at 4:30 p.m. EDT and apparently lasted only a few minutes.

The dead man was identified by the King County medical examiner's office as Abraham Saltzman of Bellevue.

Walks, Lights Asked For North Sidney St.

Construction of sidewalks on both sides of Sidney Street north of College Street together with improvement of street lighting is recommended following a recent pedestrian accident which endangers the lives of two young people.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie told the city traffic and lights committee that the shoulders of Sidney Street in the above area were narrow and that the volume of traffic had materially increased as a result of the opening of Bell Blvd.

The chief recommended that when this section of Sidney Street is reconstructed, sidewalks be included for both sides of the street and that the improvement of street lighting be given immediate attention.

It was noted at the meeting that construction of a sidewalk on one side of Sidney from College to Tracey Street was in this year's capital works budget with design to be carried out for 1974 construction.

Reconstruction of Sidney Street between Catherine Street and College is now under way but the committee was told there was nothing in the city's five - year capital works budget for reconstruction north of Coleman Street.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell assured that reconstruction of north Sidney was a matter for serious consideration.

At the same time, however, he said that with the Hastings County Board of Education's present road conditions, reconstruction of College Street and Victoria Ave. were also "serious" matters.

City Manager J. H. Reynolds said, however, that reconstruction of Sidney Street could be inserted in figure year's works budget.

Public Utilities Commission manager Neil Britton said new lighting for that section of Sidney Street now under reconstruction would be carried out this year and that a request on additional lighting for north of College Street was now being prepared for presentation to council.

On recommendation of Alderman Arnold Orr, traffic committee voted to ask city council for early consideration for inclusion in its road program of reconstruction of Sidney Street north to Bell Blvd.

Mediterranean Cruise Endorsed

Anyone who had forgotten his ancient history could have brushed up on it Monday night as Lloyd Jones gave an illustrated account of cruising the Mediterranean with 1,200.

Mr. Jones, head of the history department at Centennial Secondary School, reported to Hastings county trustees on Med 73, the cruise that took more than 300 Hastings county students to Italy, Greece, Turkey and England in March.

Mr. Jones introduced the cruise to Hastings county and has been the major force that has moved hundreds of grade 12 students to the world of ancient Greece and Rome every spring. As well as his slides, he presented an evaluation of student and teacher response to the trip.

Recruiting for Med 74 is now under way, and response is increasing, he said. But the cost of the trip, borne entirely by the students themselves, will be the main stumbling block in the future, Mr. Jones indicated. Med. 73 cost $453 a person; cost of Med 74 will be $472. New English taxes and the Common Market currency fluctuations account for the increase.

An army, said Napoleon, moves on its stomach, and so, apparently, does a contingent of Canadian students. Food was their chief complaint, Shipboard food, rated better and more abundant than English boarding school fare by the British students aboard, was the most controversial item in the evaluation sheet. About a quarter of the students said they would like another quarter adjusted to it reluctantly and the balance "either liked it or made no comment."

Response to other questions came in heavily on the positive side. Ninety-five rated the cruise an excellent experience and 79 per cent said they received full value for the investment. A resounding 100 per cent said the cruises should be continued. Those who didn't respond with excellent to the quiz rated the experience acceptable to adequate.

Grade 12 students, who have considerable background on the Mediterranean through the history and geography curriculum, are offered the opportunity to take the cruise, except in North Hastings. The the interest is high in grade 11 but drops off in grade 12.

Mr. Jones revealed sidelights on what happens when hundreds of Hastings county students are let loose in the ruins of the glory that once was Greece.

"They embarrassed our guides at every turn in Greece by asking them: "How do you like living under generals?" reported Mr. Jones.

They examined brothel signs in the pavement in Ephesus, brothels where every married woman was required to spend one night, her proceeds going to the Christian church.

"That's why St. Paul wrote so many letters to the Ephesians, dwelling on family relationships," said Mr. Jones.

The logistics of transporting hundreds of teenagers to the farthest ends of the Mediterranean and back, by plane, ship and bus, would daunt anyone but the enthusiastic Mr. Jones.

"It's a new approach to education," he told trustees. "Students are better informed having gone, and teachers are better teachers."

Madoc OPP At Mall

TWEED (Special) — Personnel from the Madoc Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police are taking part in Police Week displays at the Quinte Mall this week. Constable Bob Hawley, safety officer or the detachment, will be demonstrating safety equipment during the week.

Rain Relieves Firefighters

Spring showers may dampen the spirits of many persons but for one group of hardy outdoorsmen, they're a welcome relief.

Volunteer firemen in Thurlow and Sidney Townships were beginning to see visions of the desert as until the past two weeks when the skies opened and ended one of the most hazardous periods for fires in memory.

Sidney firemen were called out on 31 occasions during March and April compared to only 18 calls all last year.

Baffle Fences Recommended For Underpass

Bicycle riders and the operators of motorcycles and snowmobiles will be stymied at the new Frank Street pedestrian underpass at the CN double tracks if a recommendation of the city traffic committee is carried out.

Since construction of the underpass was completed some months ago, the facility has been in use, even though approaches were still not finished and the underpass had not been officially turned over to the city.

Also, considerable vandalism has been carried on with tunnel lights being broken and drain covers damaged.

At the city traffic committee meeting Monday, Police Chief Douglas Crosbie recommended the erection of baffle fences at the underpass which would require cyclists to dismount and bar the entrance of motorcycles and snowmobiles.

The chief also recommended the erection of signs prohibiting the riding or operating of vehicles at any time.

The committee approved the police chief's report and recommended erection of the baffle fences by the city works department.

The majority, says a department spokesman, were for grass fires, four coming in one day.

In Thurlow, the township experienced a record 35 fires in April, nearly twice the previous high total of 14 in August, 1972. Of those 35, 17 took place in fields left tinder dry after the short winter.

Alleviation from the problem was provided by itself, says J a c k Rushton, deputy chief of Sidney's fire department.

"In the warm weather, the grass didn't come through," he says. "There was a lot of old, dead grass left from last year, just waiting to be ignited, long and dry. Once the rains started, though, this stopped. Now there's so much green, the hazard is much less."

He says the department has had only three calls in May despite the fact the month is already half over.

"Things are back to normal," he says.

The situation was somewhat different, however, in another township close to Belleville. Anselmaugh volunteers report they were called out only 15 times this year up to the end of April, the least used as grass fires

Deputy-fire chief Jack Findle says it's a township bylaw that has made the difference.

"If someone wants to start an outdoor fire anywhere in the township he needs a burning permit from the township office. Then if the fire gets out of hand and he has to call the fire department, he's not charged. If he doesn't get the permit, he has to pay. We find the system is working."

He says a fire caused by indiscriminate land or rubbish burners — the major cause of grass blazes — can cost an unlucky individual anywhere from $25 to over $200, depending on the extent of the fire and the number of volunteers who turn out. The threat of having to pay for your folly seems to be art effective deterrent.

"It's stopped incendiarize burning," he concludes.

Backus, Ross: Delighted With Result

New Educational Tool Delights Developers

TRENTON — With educational aids playing a major role in the classrooms today, teacher Les Backus is an excited about his new media package as someone with a new camera.

And he's got one of those too.

Mr. Backus, a marketing teacher at Quinte Secondary School in Belleville, Bill McConnell, a teacher at Moira Secondary in Belleville and Hastings County Board of Education resources technician Peter Ross have spent the last month amassing slides, music and data into a complete media production to be introduced on an experimental basis in their schools next fall.

The whole idea came out of education sessions at the University of Toronto. The days of simple book learning and the educational field trip are rapidly fading into the dim past.

But with budget cuts in education, teachers are having to become more self-reliant. That's exactly what the educational triumvirate have in mind.

Starting with the marketing field, Mr. Backus has travelled more than 2,000 miles in the last month and spent more than 10 hours taking color slides in shop windows, from magazines, in fact, anything that will fit into the scope of his plan.

These compiled, using the slides, taped music and overhead projection logos prepared at Trenton's media centre, the complete package went to Toronto for scrutiny and then will be shown locally to seven classes of grade 12 students.

Expenses involved are minimal. Time and imagination is not. What the viewer sees is a combination of colors on charts and as applied to a less everyday marketing world.

The music entertains. The slides provide visual aids which as Mr. Backus explains "he can't help but learn."

"I don't want to give the public the idea we're simply entertaining them. But if in entertaining this will increase the effective learning, then I'm all for it," he said.

"Youngsters are much more sophisticated today, what with television and new technology. We as teachers have to keep up with it.

"Teaching is a very personal thing and involves total involvement," he continued. "I'm trying to make it as versatile as possible and it's important to get everyone standpoint."

Showing obvious enthusiasm as he explained the new project, Mr. Backus put all audio into one simple explanation. "You've got to strive for motivation. Let there be something and—visualize the prospects ... not just what's written in a textbook."

Before he and Mr. McConnell and Mr. Ross began the visual teaching package, the idea was tried on local students, many of whom expressed sufficient enthusiasm for them to go ahead with the project.

If everything goes well, other programs will be developed throughout the summer. "We don't rest during the summer," Mr. Backus joked. "I plan to throw myself right into this."

Visual aids such as these, he estimates, can take the place of several days of field trips. And unlike films, the presentations can be stopped and questions held at points in the crossram without interrupting the main thought trends.

Riding Split Not Soon

BRIGHTON — Future splits of federal election ridings across Canada concerned members of the Prince Edward - Hastings Progressive Conservative Association meeting here Saturday.

Past - president Ted Parker of Trenton said, "It is within the realm of possibility that the riding as we know it now might not exist too much longer."

Re-elected president Don Walker agreed: "It's unfortunate. We were just getting acquainted with our neighbors."

Federal representative George Hees gave assurances that no split would be made until at least next year.

"There is no move by any members of parliament for a change of ridings at this time," he said. "We don't want a change until the next election."

The full riding association executive was acclaimed for the coming year.

Board Balks At Tender

Hastings county trustees have dug in their heels and balked at spending $175,500 for the roofing of Trenton Hastings High School.

The matter was referred to the next meeting after trustees learned that the tender had came in about $27,000 over the amount estimated for the work.

Approval of the tender will be delayed, although the contract has been signed and the contractor had been ordered to proceed with the work.

Provincial grants will pay for 85 per cent of the cost.

Attitude of the board was expressed by past chairman Donald Williams who said, "we are missing some responsibility when we let the plant department spend this amount; of money without our looking at it."

Tweed Has New Chief

TWEED (Special) — The village of Tweed has a new police chief this week with Chief Constable Donald Thompson reporting for duty Monday. Chief Thompson was officially sworn in at Belleville and Monday evening attended council for introductions to village officials.

Another Industry Asks Same Deal

TRENTON — The town's newcomers to our community."

decision to spend $100,000 to provide water services to the Fisher Brothers' subdivision plant has found an existing firm jumping on the band wagon.

In a letter from Bayside Paving and Finishing Co. Ltd. president F. Parker said his plant has future plans with a possible 50 per cent increase in our water consumption".

"If council feels generous to one, the same consideration should be given to existing industries," he wrote.

Mr. Parker said in his letter to council Monday night his request be advised we find it most difficult to remain competitive in our field without being called upon to subsidize Heated exchanges between members of Council and the Public Utilities Commission chairman resulted in a political spliter over supply of these services to the new FBI plant. Few communities provide these services free of charge to new and existing industries.

Mr. Parker regarded the decision "with alarm and great concern ... water rates be ing increased ... basically due ... to support the addition of a new industry."

In reply to the letter from the dyeing and finishing company, Mayor Duncan McDonald said it is a little early yet" to make a decision on any possible changes.

Eighth Apple Festival Begins Next Sunday

TRENTON — Apple blossoms, rosy cheeks and fancy dress will be in bloom this Sunday as the 8th annual Quinte Apple Blossom Festival gets under way at Albury Church in Redeersville.

Members of the organizing committee of this colorful event that last year drew some 4,000 visitors, released details of this year's festival at a luncheon meeting at Tommy's Restaurant here Monday.

Chairman Lyle Vancuyl outlined events that will make up the one-week festival.

Following church se vices in Redeersville, tours and wagon rides by Mr. and Mrs. Harold and Donald Bonter's Bayside Orchards on the Redeersville Road starting at 1:30 p.m. Members of the Albury Church Choir will be selling apple juice, pies and other delicacies in the orchard. Members of the Prince Edward County Whirlers will be entertaining during the Sunday tours.

On Wednesday, May 23, semi-finals for selection of an Ontario Apple Queen will be held at the Pinecrest Memorial Elementary School in Bloomfield. A total of 18 contestants (only rural residents of Prince Edward County between the ages of 16 and 21 are eligible) competed in last year, with Janet Wetherall of Albury crowned queen, and Margaret Moran and Marian Sandy, princesses.

Organizers are confident of a good turnout for the meet. Entertainment will be provided by former Ameliasburgh and Big Singing Post Family.

The finals for choice of an Ontario Apple Queen will be held at Kente Public School in Ameliasburgh, Friday, May 25. Title from contestants throughout the area have been received.

One change has been made in this year's festival. Tours were halted at the same time as the festival in recent years, but this event has been postponed until October when apples are more plentiful.

The Quinte Apple Blossom Festival isn't limited to the Redeersville area. In fact, as Jack Beech, manager of the Trenal Pine Ridge Farm Council from Cobourg said, orchards in Whitby, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Cobourg, Grafton, Brighton and Smithfield will be open for festival tours. Routes in the 8 orchards will be marked by large paper apples posted on utility and fence poles.

Shoplifting, Drugs Lead

PICTON — Drugs and shoplifting remain major problems for law enforcement officers accustomed to Belleville City police chief, Douglas Crosbie.

Chief Crosbie said here last night that a survey taken in the United states in 1971 showed that $200-million in goods was taken by employees and $100-million was lost to shoplifters.

A 250 per cent increase in shoplifting convictions has been reported in the past 10 years, however.

The chief stressed that the consumer must pay when shoplifting losses plague the industry.

He noted that drugs now are a widespread problem and more than 20,000 marijuana charges were laid in Canada in 1972.

Fifteen years ago only 78 were recorded. The chief predicted that the time will come when every policeman will have a background training in drugs.

Fairly Powers Expos To 3-2 Win Over Bucs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ron Fairly has a good memory—but then again, nights like Monday aren't all that hard to remember.

Fairly got only one hit in five times at bat against the Pirates, but it was the big one—a solo homer in the 10th inning that lifted Montreal Expos to a 3-2 victory and sent Pittsburgh to its sixth consecutive loss.

"I think it was a fast ball," said Fairly of his game-winning shot off Nelson Briles, "but I'm not sure. All I know is, I hit it well.

"It's easy to remember the good days," observed Fairly, who had fond memories of Briles and the Pirates even before his blast.

He hit another tie-breaking homer off Briles in a game won by the Expos earlier this season. And back in 1965, while playing for Los Angeles Dodgers, Fairly again beat the Pirates with a last-inning homer.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies whipped St. Louis Cardinals 10-5, Atlanta Braves topped Houston Astros 7-1 and San Diego Padres beat San Francisco Giants, also by a 7-1 count.

New York Mets' game against the Cubs in Chicago was postponed due to cold weather, and Los Angeles and Cincinnati were not scheduled.

"It was a fast ball," said Briles of the pitch Fairly hit out.

"My fast ball had been tailing away all night. That pitch was the only time it didn't. But you have to give him credit—he hit the thing."

Fairly recalled his homer off Briles earlier this season, which broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Expos on to a 6-4 victory. But he had a heavier recollection of his other game-winning shot against the Pirates, even though it happened eight years ago.

"It hit it off Joe Gibbon," the 36-year-old Fairly said, "and we won 4-2. It was a hanging curve ball, and the winning pitcher was Joe Moeller.

The defeat was the 11th in the last 19 games for the Pirates, last year's NL East champions. And Briles, who suffered his fourth defeat in five decisions, feels the Pirates have much to pull the club out of its rut.

"When you're not getting anything going, you're pitching has to pick you up. It's up to us."

Philadelphia scored six runs on six singles in the fourth inning to beat the Cardinals. Greg Luzinski had a single, double and triple and rookie Mike Schmidt drove in three runs.

Falcons Sign Lee, Warwick

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota Vikings announced Monday that middle linebacker Lonnie Warwick and reserve quarterback Gary Lee, who had played out their options, have been signed by Atlanta Falcons.

In return, the Vikings will get quarterback Bob Berry and Atlanta's first choice in the National Football League draft next winter.

Berry played with the Vikings for three years before being sold to Atlanta prior to the 1969 season.

Berry ranked fourth in passing in the NFL last year with 154 completions on 277 attempts for a 55.6 percentage. He threw 13 touchdown passes, 12 interceptions and had 2,158 total yards.

Cepeda's Hit Breaks Up Duel

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Good pitching is supposed to defeat good hitting, except in Boston.

In Boston, there's a ballpark named Fenway which an inviting left-field wall, a scant 315 feet from the hungry batter, that is known to chew up baseballs and baseball astorm alike.

But Monday night, "The Monster," as the wall is less than affectionately known to mound-men, kept its distance and the Red Sox and Baltimore Orioles engaged in an old-fashioned pitchers' duel.

Baltimore's Doyle Alexander pitched 10 innings of four-hit, shutout ball and Boston's Bill Lee countered with five-hit, scoreless pitching over nine. But neither hurler was around when designated hitter Orlando Cepeda's single in the 11th scored rookie Mario Guerrero for the only run and a 1-0 Boston victory.

In other American League action, Detroit Tigers shut out New York Yankees 8-0, California, Angels outlasted Kansas City Royals 3-2 in 10 innings, Minnesota Twins needed 11 innings to defeat Texas Rangers 6-4 in the second game after dropping the opener 7-6, Oakland Athletics beat Chicago White Sox 5-1 and Cleveland Indians edged Milwaukee Brewers 2-1.

Alexander, a young right-hander, and Lee, a veteran southpaw, forced the first scoreless extra-inning game in Boston in two years.

The scoreless duel over nine innings was even more surprising since both pitchers are normally relievers.

"It was unbelievable, just unbelievable," said Baltimore manager Earl Weaver, "but I've learned to expect the unbelievable in this game."

Bob Bolin replaced Lee in the 10th and got credit for the victory while Bob Reynolds came on in the 11th to absorb the loss.

At Milwaukee, Dick Tidrow hurled a three-hitter over eight innings, but needed relief help in the ninth from Tom Hilgendorf and Jerry Johnson to defeat the Brewers.

"It's a game like this when two guys come in and do a job can turn everything around," said Cleveland Manager Ken Aspromonte.

Pinch hitter Tom McCraw singled home Jim Spencer in the 10th to give California and Bill Singer the victory over Kansas City. It was Singer's sixth triumph in seven decisions.

"I set goals each year and one of them is three wins a month," said Singer, who reached May's quota Monday night. "The rest of the month is where I can slip in the gravy."

Oakland's Ken Holtzman, staked to an early lead on Reggie Jackson's first-inning, three-run homer, stopped the Chicago White Sox on four hits to record his seventh victory against two losses.

Besides Jackson's homer, Willie Wood gave up a solo blast to Joe Rudi and took his third loss in 11 decisions.

Joe Coleman raised his record to 7-2 as he tossed a six-hitter at the New York Yankees. Along the way, Coleman struck out eight while walking four.

In the first game of a twin-night doubleheader in Arlington, Tony Hilarzo clicked two outs in the bottom of the ninth as the time to hit his first homer of the season and give the Rangers a come-from-behind victory over the Twins.

Minnesota's Bobby Darwin provided the late-inning heroics in the second game, hitting his fourth homerun of the season in the 11th inning to break a 4-4 tie and help the Twins to the victory.

Badminton Team in Thomas Cup

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian badminton team leaves this week to play in the Thomas Cup, a competition it doesn't expect to win.

However, the Canadians are in the quarter-finals of the Cup, emblematic of the world championship of badminton.

Non-playing captain Don Smythe of Toronto said Canada has a "very good chance" of beating India in the quarter-final and a "fighting chance" in the semi-final against Denmark. However, he said it would be an upset of major proportions if Canada won the cup.

In the quarter-finals, Indonesia, world champions for eight years, plays Thailand and the winner advancing to the final.

The series opens May 25 in Jakarta, Indonesia, Canada plays India with the winner talking on Denmark. The winner of the plays the winner of Indonesia versus Thailand.

N.Y. Islanders Choose Potvin

MONTREAL (CP) — Denis Potvin was the first choice today in the annual National Hockey League amateur draft as New York Islanders went for the six-foot, one-inch, 195-pound defenceman.

Potvin, a member of Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series since he was 15, scored 35 goals and assisted on 86 others in his last junior season.

California Golden Seals, with the second choice, traded their pick to Montreal Canadiens through a prior deal. The Canadiens, in turn, gave it to Atlanta Flames who took Tom Lysiak, a burly centre from Medicine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Hockey League.

Lysiak was the leading scorer with the WCHL club for two consecutive years and wound up the season with 58 goals and 96 assists.

Vancouver Canucks then chose winger Dennis Vervoort of London Knights of the OHA.

Lanny McDonald, a right-winger from Medicine Hat, was picked by Toronto Maple Leafs as the fourth player.

In return for the earlier switch between Montreal and Atlanta, the Flames gave their first-round fifth choice to Montreal and the Quebec club promptly dealt it to St. Louis Blues.

The Blues chose goalie John Davidson from Calgary Centennials of the WCHL.

Los Angeles Kings then gave up their first-round pick to Boston Bruins in exchange for centre Andre Savard from Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League.

Savard scored 67 goals and had 84 assists in the final league year with the Remparts.

Blaine Stoughton, a right winger from Flin Flon Bombers of the WCHL, was the choice of Pittsburgh Penguins.

St. Louis then transferred their first-round right to Montreal. The Canadiens took left-winger Bob Gainey from Peterborough Petes.

Montreal had the next choice, again through a prior deal with Minnesota North Stars, but the Canadiens dealt it to Vancouver Canucks in return for the Canucks' first-round pick in 1974. The Canucks wound up with defenceman Bob Dailey of Toronto Marlboros who at six-feet, five-inches, would be the tallest defenceman in the NHL.

Toronto was ceded Philadelphia Flyers' first choice and the Maple Leafs chose defenceman Bob Neeley also of Peterborough.

The second goalie picked was Detroit Red Wings. He was Terry Richardson of New Westminster Bruins.

Buffalo Sabres picked Morris Titanic, a left-winger from Sudbury of the OHA, while Chicago Black Hawks also went for a winger in Darcy Rota from Edmonton Oil Kings.

New York Rangers picked up left-winger Rick Middleton from Oshawa Generals of the OHA, but when it became Boston's turn, it transferred to Bruins' rights to Toronto.

The last goalie picked defenceman Ian Turnbull of Ottawa 67s.

Montreal gave the final pick of the first round to Atlanta Flames, the Flames choosing Vic Mercredi from New Westminster Bruins.

McSherry's Header Lands on Boot

Rovers Defeat Under 21 Team 5-1

Outside left forward Stu Mitton scored two goals on Terry Hore to lead the Quinte Help Fund Rovers to a 5 - 1 win over the Belleville-Trenton under-21 team in an exhibition game Monday at Zwick's Island.

Fundic Zdravko completed the scoring in the first half for QHF Rovers while J o Romano and playing coach Bob Watson finished off the scoring in the second.

Halfback Peter Hilbier scored the only under - 21 team goal as he booted the soccer ball at George Del Grosso from approximately 25 yards outside the goal line. Del Grosso who had replaced Tony Goncalves a minute earlier got a piece of it, but it bounced out of his reach, hit the goal post and bounced in for the score.

The under - 21 team had trouble putting the ball in the goal during the game, but coach Joe Iasenza saw that as being natural for a team whose players haven't played together before.

Many of the QHF Rovers, on the other hand, have been together for about three years and are a much more experienced team.

But Iasenza can see where he can improve on the goal getting problem. "We need someone to score goals for us," said the coach, "and we've got two players that can bolster our forward line — Ernie Brown and Terry Hore.

"Ernie wasn't at the game and Terry is a better forward than a goaltender; mind you he played well in goal. But with Gary (Donovan) behind them, they feel more confident.

"If they could have held the Rovers to a 2-1 or 3-1 score, I would have been surprised. What we need is more practice time and I'm trying to set up something with the Batawa Braves, but I don't know whether we can with the long weekend coming up."

Though the QHF Rovers have at least four players on the under-21 team, they were not hurt by their absence.

AOCO, Independents, Stewart Warner Win

Two games were decided by one run and the third was strictly no contest as the Industrial Softball League opened the 1973 season Monday night.

AOCO nipped Brooke Bond behind the four - hit pitching of Ron McCoy. The winner's got all their runs in the third inning on a two - run single by Brooke Bond picked up single runs in each of the fifth and sixth innings to make it close.

Doug McKay and Doug Boomhower paced the AOCO hitters with a pair of safeties each. Tops at the plate for the losers was Brian Royals with two singles.

In the other closely fought game, Independents erupted for a six run fifth inning to come out Meed Johnson 9-8. J. Northy was the winning pitcher. D. Genereaux and Holloway shared the mound duties for Meads.

W. Morrison' banged out three hits for Independents while B. Craig and K. Bertrand each had two singles., C. Foote connected for a home run.

G. Bird, C. Hinsman and T. Walsh had two hits apiece for Meads.

Stewart Warner scored at least once in every inning on the way to a 23-5 win over Post Office. Winning pitcher Dave Marvin limited the losers to six hits.

Three hits each by Marvin, Bill Lynch, G. Louie, F. Davis and J. Henri led Stewart Warner's 19-hit attack on Post Office pitchers C. Johnson and K. Williams.

H. Reid was the only Post Office player to solve Marvin's slants for more than one hit. He connected for a brace of safeties with one each for E. Percy, T. Woods, Johnson and E. Tuchelle.

Mike Watt Quakes But Signs With Cats

By AL ZARAS
Staff Sportswriter
(Eighth of Series)

Mike Watt went out to all the Bobcats' practices at the beginning of the year, but when team manager Russ Slade shopped a Jr. B card down and stuck a pen in his hand, the right winger "could hardly sign my name right."

Watt was in a state of shock when he discovered that he would be doffing his Blake Kerr Imperial midget uniform for that of Belleville's Metro Jr. B. entry.

"I don't know why they signed me," said the 17 - year - old Quinte Secondary student. "It couldn't have been my shot. It couldn't have been my stick handling, and it couldn't have been my skating. I was competing against three other right wingers — Jim Richardson, Dwayne Dayton, and another player from out of town. I didn't think they would sign me.

"I planned to have a season with the Juveniles and have a shot at the Bobcats next year. I figured playing with Western Tire would give me some experience.

Instead of gaining his experience with the juvenile club, he saw 33 regular season games with the Cats. Fifteen goals and 13 assists later, Watt found himself playing on the checking line of Robbie Foster and Peter Smrke in the league playoffs.

"Though I took a little beating, I liked playing the defensive role. If you win let's say by 6-1, then you know that you've done your job.

"I got seven assists, but

MIKE WATT
. . . shock struck

didn't get any goals during the playoffs though I had my chances, that's for sure.

"In the Toronto series, we didn't concentrate as much on defensive play as we did against Peterborough and Oshawa. Moe (coach Moe Hunter) told us to let go a little more. I guess he wanted us to produce more, not that we hadn't been producing.

"I think Moe deserves a lot of credit for putting the team in those playoffs. He took players from Picton, Wellington, Belleville and put us all together into a team. They were a good bunch of guys, but we're going to be better next year.

Personally, Watt plans to keep in fighting trim for the upcoming season with the Cats. Russ Soule stuck another card in front of him and Watt signed with the Belleville Minor Baseball Association's United Rigging juvenile amateur team.

With baseball (out in the left field boondocks), plans for tennis and jogging come the middle of August, Watt should be ready to start his second year with the Belleville Bobcats.

Pollock Show Is on the Road

MONTREAL (CP)—The National Hockey League's amateur draft today could very well be called the Sam Pollock Show with good reason.

Pollock, the erstwhile general manager of Montreal Canadiens, owns exactly 50 per cent of the first 23 picks in this year's session and seven of the first 34.

Pollock has managed to grab all these picks by some shrewd dealings with most of the clubs that joined the NHL during and after the major expansion in 1967.

Pollock, who had and still has an abundance of talent on his farm team in Nova Scotia, was willing to give up some of the players, who had little chance making his mighty club, for the cream of the crop of graduating Juniors in future years.

This year, for example, he owns both the first and second round draft choices of California Golden Seals, who wallowed in the basement of the NHL's West Division last season.

That means that the Golden Seals will have to wait until the third round and the 34th pick before they can claim one of the graduating Juniors.

It's not the first time Pollock has created the Grand Slam coup. In 1971, he landed Guy Lafleur from Quebec Remparts as a result of a player deal with California which gave him first pick in the draft.

This year, Pollock could not grab the first choice and it belongs to New York Islanders, who have indicated they will probably opt for Denis Potvin, a high-scoring rugged defenceman from Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

He finished fifth in the OHA scoring race with 33 goals and 88 assists and he had 232 minutes in penalties.

NBA All-stars Announced

NEW YORK (AP) — Nate Archibald, Kansas City-Omaha's relatively small guard, was the biggest vote collector on the National Basketball Association 1972-73 All-Star squad announced Monday, while Boston's Dave Cowens, the league's Most Valuable Player, failed to make the team.

The 6-foot-1 Archibald, the NBA leader in scoring with 2,719 points for a 34.9 average in 86 games, in assists with 910 for an 11.4 average and in minutes played with 3,081, received 15,836 points from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters in the league's 17 cities. Each city received a full vote, meaning 17.00 would be the maximum.

Joining Archibald on the first team were forwards John Havlicek of Boston and Spencer Haywood of Seattle, centre Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of Milwaukee, and guard Jerry West of Los Angeles.

There was one television report Monday night that Canadiens had traded five players—defenceman Bob Murray and Rick Wilson, as well as forwards Dave Gardner, Steve Shutt and Randy Rota—to New York so that the Islanders would lay off picking Potvin and opt for someone else.

All except Shutt played with Nova Scotia Voyageurs this season. A Montreal spokesman denied the trade had been made.

Meanwhile a trade was completed Monday between Philadelphia Flyers and Detroit Red Wings of the NHL. The Flyers sent Rick Foley to the Red Wings for Serge LaJeunesse. Both were minor League's for most of last season.

The deal came on the heels of Sunday's trade which saw Vancouver Canucks send defenceman-forward Dale Tallon to Chicago Black Hawks in exchange for centre Jerry Local and lanky goalie Gary Smith.

There was also talk the Canucks would trade Orest Kindrachuk to either Toronto Maple Leafs or Boston Bruins in exchange for an experienced forward or defenceman.

Players' Association Is Worried

HAMILTON (CP) — Marv Levy, rookie coach of Montreal Alouettes, has the Canadian Football League Players' Association (CFLPA) worried over his announced intention to demand more of the players' time.

George Reed, CFLPA president, told a news conference Monday that the players plan to fight the new Montreal coach because it would mean some players would have difficulty maintaining other jobs.

"A number of veteran players are established in the community with full-time jobs and others are recruited on that basis," Reed said.

He said the CFLPA plans to bring the matter up in meetings with the CFL player-management committee before the June 27 All-Star game here.

White House Date for Howe

DETROIT (AP) —' Detroit's Gordie Howe will attend a White House dinner May 15 at President Nixon's request.

Howe and his wife, Colleen, were invited to the dinner in honor of Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

Howe, vice-president of public relations for Detroit Red Wings and the National Hockey League, will continue his promotional appearances this summer when he joins Arnold Palmer in a golf exhibition Aug. 28.

All-star Assignment For Rookie CFL Coach

HAMILTON (CP) — John Payne of Saskatchewan Roughriders will make his coaching debut in Canada with a club he'd love to handle on a regular basis—the Canadian Football League all-stars.

Payne, new head coach of Saskatchewan, will handle the stars June 27 when they play defending Grey Cup champion Hamilton Tigers-Cats in Hamilton.

The Roughriders, coached by Dave Skrein, lost in the Grey Cup to the Ticats. However, Skrein resigned and was replaced by Payne.

The all-star team is headed by Jim Young, wide receiver of British Columbia Lions, who is making his fourth start in the game, the fourth to be sponsored by the Canadian Football League Players' Association.

Other starters on the offensive team are tight end Peter Dalla Riva; Montreal; guards Ed George, Montreal, and Larry Watkins, Edmonton; tackles Bill Frank, Winnipeg and Jack Abendschan, Saskatchewan; centre Bob Swift, Winnipeg; flanker Gerry Shaw, Calgary; running backs George Reed, Saskatchewan, Marc Herron of Winnipeg and Ike Brown of Montreal; quarterback Ron Lancaster, Saskatchewan.

The alternate quarterback is Don Jonas of Winnipeg while Toronto's Zenon Andruyshyn will handle the punting and Ottawa's Gerry Organ, the place kicking.

Players on the winning team receive $200 and losers $100. The all-star coaches were voted an increase to $300 during the week-end.

Red Carpet Treatment For Portage Champs

WINNIPEG (CP) — Portage la Prairie, a Manitoba city of about 13,300 people 81 miles west of Winnipeg, rolled out the red 'carpet today to welcome home its first national hockey champions in 31 years.

Portage la Prairie Terriers, Manitoba Junior Hockey League champions, completed their long journey to the Canadian Cup Monday night with a 4-3 triumph over Pembroke Lumber Kings to take the best-of-seven.

The win before 4,122 fans in Winnipeg, marked the first Canadian hockey championship for a Portage la Prairie junior team since the Terriers won the Memorial Cup in 1941-42.

The victory also brought the Centennial Cup back to Manitoba for the first time since it was put up for competition by the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association three years ago.

Portage Mayor Lloyd Henderson has proclaimed a civic holiday, a victory luncheon is planned for 2 p.m. and another celebration is scheduled for the evening.

Randy Penner, a quick-shooting left-winger, and Ty Langton, an ever-alert pick-up goaltender, provided the Terriers with the firepower and the backbone needed to take the title.

Pembroke coach Mac MacLean said Penner "has the fastest release I've seen in junior hockey" after the Portage forward had whipped three wrist shots behind Lumber Kings goaltender Terry Desmarais.

Al Hilker got the other Portage goal with Pat Hahn and Terry Woermke scoring for Pembroke.

MacLean, who said before the series that his club had the better goaltending, admitted after the final defeat that "the difference was in goaltending . . . their goaltending robbed us of five or more goals in the second period . . . that was the difference."

Langton was picked up by Portage coach Murray MacPherson for the playoffs after toiling all season for last-place Dauphin Kings.

"I always thought we had the goaltending in junior hockey outside the Western Canada Hockey League and the Ontario Hockey Association . . . they proved me right," MacPherson said of his combo of Langton and John Mennyk.

"I wasn't surprised with the way Ty played, I thought he was a great goaltender for Dauphin, a last-place team, and I knew he would be even greater with a club in front of him."

Langton almost single-handedly beat the Lumber Kings in the third game, did his best to repeat that performance Sunday after taking over goaltending chores in the second period and was again the stumbling block for Pembroke in the final game.

He kicked out 16 shots in the second period, three in less than 30 seconds from point blank rebounds and then repeated that brilliance minutes later to completely frustrate the Lumber Kings.

MacPherson said his club "let down last night (Sunday) . . . but tonight we forechecked and hit them and proved we're a better hockey club."

"Any time you beat a team in five games you've a beatin hockey team."

The Terriers grabbed a 1-0 first-period lead on Penner's wrist-shot from just inside the blueline and the left-winger made it 2-0 early in the second on another wrist-shot, this time from the slot.

Hahn made it 3-1 before the period ended but the Lumber Kings had, by then, lost their chance as Langton continually beat them. Hilker and Penner scored early in the third period before Woermke scored near the 15:00 mark.

Survival Is Tricky In African Politics

YAOUNDE, Cameroon (AP) — Plots, coups and palace revelations make political survival a tricky business in black Africa's developing nations.

In view of this, there was considerable fanfare and back-slapping when President Ahmadou Ahidjo celebrated his 15th year as leader of Cameroon.

It was a gala occasion for the moderate, 48-year-old Ahidjo, a Moslem northerner who once worked as a telegraph operator.

This culturally diverse nation of six million on the "hinge of Africa" has not always been quiet.

Ahidjo, a shrewd, soft-spoken man with a dry wit, has survived ancient tribal feuds, a protracted, Communist-backed armed uprising, widespread terrorism and threats of assassination.

He appears to have defused the country's most explosive internal problems, built up a strong single party government and promoted modest economic progress.

His methods can be described as authoritarian and, sometimes ruthless, but many applaud his goal of national unity.

Diplomats and long-time residents attribute his achievements to firm control of power, keen political insight and a careful balancing of patronage among competing regional and tribal interests.

Ahidjo has placed himself in the mainstream of African nationalism with strong opposition to arms under white rule.

Cameroon is tranquil despite sharp tribal, religious and cultural conflicts and an extraordinary language situation. The country has inherited the languages of both major empire builders south of the Sahara—France and Britain.

French is dominant, but French-speaking civil servants seem to pride themselves in talking to visitors in English. Ahidjo speaks French and communicates with English-speaking Cameroonians in excellent English, a West African corruption of English.

In the sparsely populated north, Moslems preserve a colorful but backward way of life. Christians, with greater access to education, dominate the prosperous and more developed south. Animists mingle with both.

Some 300 tribes ranging from the banjo-lipped Ubangis and near-extinct pygmies to the Arab Fulbe and northern Bamileke add to Cameroon's diversity.

The country was a German colony until the First World War and later was divided into French and British mandates, with the larger eastern portion going to the French.

In 1958, the year Ahidjo became prime minister of East Cameroon, the United Nations turned the French territory over to the Cameroonians. They became fully independent two years later.

The southern part of English-speaking West Cameroon voted in a UN plebiscite in 1961 to unite with East Cameroon. The northern part opted to join neighboring Nigeria.

Between 1955 and 1960 the Bamileke, backed by Red Chinese arms, plunged the country into terrorism, killing an estimated 20,000 Africans and Europeans in ambushes in the jungles of Cameroon's central highlands.

By 1961 the insurrection was throttled by Ahidjo's small but determined French-trained army. Since then there have been only sporadic acts of violence but a state of emergency remains in effect.

To pacify the Bamileke, who make up more than a fifth of the population, Ahidjo gave a number of them key positions in government.

His efforts at "national reconciliation" with the left were aided last year by Cameroon's recognition of Communist China.

Ahidjo's party, the National Cameroon Union, controls all political activity. When he was elected to a third five-year term in 1970, he received more than 99 per cent of the vote. Only several thousand Jehovah's Witnesses abstained. The religious group was banned a short time later.

Last year Ahidjo held a referendum to dismantle the country's parliamentary structure and set up a unitary government. Passed in May by an overwhelming 98.2 per cent vote, it provides for a strong presidential system with a 120-seat national assembly.

All labor unions have been brought under the Ahidjo-controlled National Union of Cameroon Workers.

National unity is also being forged by the Trans-Cameroonian Railroad which, when completed in 1974, will link Yaounde in the south with Ngaoundere in the north.

Poor weather in recent years, and a drop in the world price of agricultural commodities such as cocoa, Cameroon's chief export, have had a serious impact on the economy. The country suffered a $43-million trade deficit in 1971, a heavy blow to a country with a budget of about $200 million.

Another major problem is the mass exodus of youth from the rural areas to urban centres. Ahidjo said he is considering a national civil service to keep rural youth in the countryside and promote rural development.

Late Delivery

SHIRLAND, England (CP) — After waiting five months for her new carpet, Derbyshire housewife Tansy Patilla had unexpected guests early one morning—the carpet delivery men. They arrived at 1.30 a.m., installed the carpet, had a cup of tea and left. "I didn't really care," a bewildered Tansy said. "As far as I was concerned, it was a case of better late than never."

Paralyzed Artist Alters Theme

LUNENBURG, N.S. (CP) — Earl Bailly, an internationally known artist who paints with a brush held in his teeth, has started to devote his time to landscapes after a notable career in seascape scenes.

The 69-year-old painter has borrowed a travel idea from television's Ironside program and has bought a van in which he, his wheelchair and equipment can journey through scenic Lunenburg County locations.

The driver is his brother Donald who spends his time helping the artist around the countryside.

"It's a question of who's looking after whom," Earl said in a recent interview as he waited for brother Donald to set up an easel on the bank of Ashland Lake, near here.

Earl is paralysed from the neck down, the result of a polio attack in infancy. His determination and courage, coupled to set up an easel on the bank with talent, compelled him to learn a difficult and respected profession which has brought fame and happiness.

Earl Bailly's paintings hang in the National Art Gallery in Ottawa and twice he has been presented to Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip in recognition of his work.

Last year he received an honorary doctor of civil laws degree from St. Francis Xavier University in Antigonish, where he received a standing ovation for his challenge to graduates to "master life's canvas."

Finds Statuette

RAVENNA, Italy (AP) — A 9-year-old child playing with a hoe in a field unearthed a bronze statuette estimated to be at least 1,900 years old.

The artist contends that notwithstanding the coastline was necessarily inspiring, it's just that the inspiration was dictated by the current weather. The impossible takes a little much warmer inland than it would be sitting for hours on the windy coastline.

He lives in the family's 200 year-old house in Lunenburg with his 92-year-old mother.

And besides, Earl wants to keep up his average of one painting a month.

Charles M. (Bob) Nelles examines a reproductions while his wife Gillian checks information on the artist. The Victoria couple, interested in getting more Canadian art into more Canadian homes, reproduce great Canadian works of art and distribute them across the country. (CP Photo)

Lure Crop Can Solve Prairie Duck Problem

GRANDE PRAIRIE, Alta. (CP) — For 25 years, Henry Voth has been seeding his barley crops and for 25 years ducks swarmed in to feed in his fields.

They still do, but it doesn't bother Mr. Voth any more.

The ducks now eat their fill on only one of the five quarter sections he owns at Beaver Lake, in the Grande Prairie district of northwestern Alberta. Mr. Voth is being paid for providing them with their dining area.

The quarter section set aside for the ducks is a special lure crop field established by the fish and wildlife division of the Alberta department of lands and forests. Its purpose is to help control what the department refers to as the Prairie Duck Problem, a pain in farmers' necks and pockets since the 1940s.

"For 25 years it cost me about $1,000 a year," said Mr. Voth. "But three years ago the fish and wildlife people started using a quarter-section I own and they just leave a swath of barley there for the ducks to feed on.

"Now they don't feed on my crops any more and the government pays me the going rate for the one quarter section they take.

"The important thing though is that it helps all my neighbors, too. We used to get permits from the RCMP to shoot the ducks (which usually begin feeding in late July when crops begin to ripen) but all that did was drive them from one field to another, from one farm to the next.

"We tried acetylene exploders which sound like shotgun blasts but they did the same thing."

So three years ago, as part of a prairie province joint effort under the Western Canada Wildlife Advisory Committee, the province began an experimental program in the district, one of the harshest hit in Alberta.

The program is based on three things: the exploders, lure crops and feeding stations. The latter operate on the same principle as lure crops except that they are designed to keep ducks on a lake by spreading grain along the shoreline until the harvest is finished.

Coupled with these control mechanisms, there are no-hunting regulations on the lure crop and feeding station sites to prevent the ducks from being driven back to the farmers' crops.

The program "has proven that control programs work on a cost-benefit basis much better than compensation and we are expanding the program," chief wildlife biologist for the fish and wildlife division...

"We are expanding our program this year," said D. J. gram in the Grande Prairie area and throughout the Peace River block this year," he said, adding that during

Complains About Ads

Anthony Bartzakos, editor of the Greek-Canadian Tribune, reads a proof of the paper in the Montreal press room. He complains about the failure of the government to place ads on the immigration law changes on Nov. 3 in papers like his, since his readers are among the people most likely to be affected by those changes.

Freight Rate Cut Is Seen Start of New Deal in North

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government's decision to reduce by about 18 per cent the freight rates of Ontario Northland Transportation Commission is just the beginning of a better deal for Northern Ontario, says commission chairman Jim Jessiman.

"We want to give a boost to northern manufacturers and bring to northern consumers the advantages of lower prices that have long been enjoyed by their counterparts in the south," he said in an interview Monday.

"We hope we are giving a lead to stimulate the northern economy."

Premier William Davis announced the reductions while in North Bay last week.

They will apply on the government-owned Ontario Northland Railway line from North Bay to Moosonee on southern James Bay and—of greater importance to Northern residents—to Star Transfer, the railway's trucking arm with links from Toronto direct to Northern Ontario points.

The reductions cover inbound consumer goods and manufacturing components and selected outbound manufactured products. They do not apply to resource materials.

Northern residents have long complained that high freight rates between the south and North have put them at a disadvantage with southern consumers.

Mr. Davis did not say when the cuts would be implemented but said transport minister Jeffrey Gillis had been instructed to produce within 30 days a list of commodities [illegible] reductions.

In addition to the T[illegible] North Bay route, Star Transfer operates in various corridors covering most of the Northern Ontario "circle"—from North Bay through Haileybury, New Liskeard, Kirkland Lake, Iroquois Falls, Kapuskasing, Hearst, Wawa, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury and other points in the region such as Chapleau and Timmins.

It has about 50 local delivery trucks and about 75 tractor-trailers.

The commission also operates a bus line, Ontario Northland, along most of the same northern routes, carrying both passengers and express consignments.

The government hopes the lead given by the commission will be followed by mutual freight rate reductions by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

The first meeting between provincial government officials and the two railways is scheduled in Toronto Wednesday.

But CP and CN were saying little about the topic this week.

"This is not just Northern Ontario. Freight-rate adjustments have trans-continental implications," was all one spokesman could offer.

But the provincial government hopes some positive signs may emerge by the end of Mr. Davis's 30-day period for detailing Northland cuts.

New City Planned

Haldimand and Norfolk Development Is Frozen

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has stopped a land development freeze on 13 township municipalities in Haldimand and Norfolk counties near Lake Erie where secret provincial plans call for a city of 150,000.

The ministerial order was issued in the legislature Monday by Treasurer John White after published reports that a consortium of developers' companies had signed options on 14,000 acres of farmland in the area.

Mr. White told the legislature his order "makes it impossible for any land development to occur without my specific written permission."

He said he did not know if the restrictions would affect 3,000 acres said to be held in the Nanticoke area by Pidman (Ontario) Ltd.

Nanticoke, on the Lake Erie shore, is the site of large-scale industrial development. The new city is planned as a dormitory community for the development.

Last year Pidman, which had a multi-million dollar contract to build a new headquarters for the Workmen's Compensation Board, was reported to have donated $30,000 to election campaign of the Progressive Conservative party.

An investigation cleared the company of any wrongdoing in connection with the contract.

In 1960, a study was commissioned by the government on land development and land control in Haldimand-Norfolk. Mr. White said that study will be released "soon."

He said he had no reason to believe private developers had obtained access to government plans contained in the study.

Andrew Cherkas, the Toronto real estate broker who helped assemble the 14,000 acres for the unnamed consortium, also denied either he or the group had any access to secret government plans.

Bill New Democratic Party Leader Stephen Lewis suggested that by "extraordinary clairvoyance," or an information leak or some other method, the developers had a good idea of where development would be.

"The land should have been publicly assembled," he said.

Liberal Leader Robert Nixon said the government must make its plans for the area clear before the developers' six-month options on farmers' land run out.

Otherwise, he said the farmers would lose out on a good sale.

"The provincial treasurer told the legislature his orders establish agricultural zones and "in most instances recognize existing dwellings and permit their extensions."

"A number of orders also establish hamlet zones to recognize built up areas," he said.

Britons Told Not to Worry Over Investment Curbs Here

LONDON (CP) — Members of the Ontario trade mission advised British businessmen Monday not to be greatly concerned over any Canadian legislation affecting investments from abroad.

Premier William Davis and the 15 Ontario business executives on their four-day visit met with British commercial leaders at a luncheon sponsored by the Confederation of British Industry.

The meeting was private but at an Ontario House reception later, Davis and several other mission members said the foreign-ownership issue was worrying investors here who might want to start or expand operations in Canada.

The premier said publicity about economic nationalism in Canada had confused British industrialists. They seemed to have the impression that Ontario wants to link foreign investment when, in fact, it is actively searching for more.

"The communication comes through speeches and other incidental and while there is a government desire to have more Canadian involvement in decision-making, we are not discouraging investment," Davis said.

Standing beside the premier as he spoke was Lord Thomson, Canadian-born publisher with large interests in both countries.

"I'm very unhappy about the developments in Canada and I think they're far too nationalistic," Thomson told a reporter.

Thomson said Canadian businessmen are too parochial in an economic sense and confine themselves be investing more overseas.

"They're not venturesome enough and, with the kind of government they've got over there, there's not much chance they will be."

T. J. Bell, president of Abitibi Paper Company Ltd. of Toronto, said he talked with British businessmen who are discouraged from diversifying the investment wealth in Canada because of the proposed ownership legislation.

"They felt it was a deterrent to industry in Canada and I hope I disabused them of that feeling," he said.

He added that the legislative proposals of the federal and Ontario governments should be seen by businessmen as moves for domestic political reasons and are not, in reality, intended as investment constraints.

"Both Ontario and Quebec are interested in investment—the only ones who aren't are the NDP and I think they would change their minds once they were in power," Bell said.

W. J. Walker, vice-president of General Motors of Canada Ltd., and Ontario chairman of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, declined the label of investment," and said Canadians should think, like the British, in terms of "outside investment."

In addition to the ownership issue, he said the Canadian system of incentive loans and grants is not nearly as attractive to businessmen as their own investment incentives in the form of tax concessions.

Totally covered by the municipalities of Charlottetville, Townsend, South Canyon, Dunn and Sherbrooke. Partially covered are Roughton, South Walsingham, Woodhouse, Middleton, Walpole, Rainham, Moulton and Canborough.

Land and development proposals "will be considered against the background of the municipalities' official planning and development legislation," said Mr. White.

He said there would be opportunities for public discussion when the government releases its development proposals for the area.

Messiah Performance Triumph For Performers and Audience

By EUGENE LANG

One of the musical marvels of all time is George Frideric Handel's Oratorio Messiah, the eleventh of his 23 works in this form. Another marvel is that he wrote this masterpiece in the white heat of inspiration within the incredibly short space of 21 days, shutting himself away from all extraneous influences and "being one with God", pounded into shape this gigantic liturgical bulk that encompasses no less than 259 pages in score that requires well over three hours for complete performance. It goes without argument in saying that no religious composition in history has been performed more and has captured the hearts of more millions than this inspired creation that is now well into its third century of immortality. As Lawrence Gilman once observed, "the characteristic trait of all authentic masterpieces is their capacity for infinite self-renewal". This is so profoundly true of Messiah which seems, like nature itself, unchangeable yet ever changing. It has meant more things to more people than any musical work in history, and yet it goes on, ever new, ever meaningful to the uninitiated laymen, the professional musician and the scholars of musical history. Its familiar tunes will always be hummed by the man in the street and sung by the musical cognoscenti.

Last evening a capacity congregation filled every available pew in Bridge Street United Church to immerse themselves in the wonders of this universally loved religious opus as the Bridge Street United Church Augmented Choir with four soloists and orchestra under the direction of Robert H. Reid gave an impressive performance of 41 of the original 53 sections that make up this tremendous composition.

To comment at length on each individual number is not our wont here. We have precludes our doing so, but salient selections can be touched upon, with our inefficiences at description being apologized for in advance. First to the soloists.

Soprano Hazelanne Reid was remarkable in all-offerings required of her. Her mellifluous tones glided with mirth-ful glee and glitment in her singing of Rejoice Greatly, O Daughter of Zion, the ethereal tessitura being attained with agile ability. Her portion of He Shall Feed His Flock was traversed with fervent flexible clarity. I Know that My Redeemer Liveth was presented in a rendition that displayed her dulcet delivery with lyric lovelliness in deep devotional interpretation.

Of the other three soloists, all imported from Toronto, first we turn to the very gifted young contralto, Catherine Robbin who made her debut here in enthralling realizations of each item required of her. Very moving was the handling of He Was My Abide in the Day of His Coming, although the ball-rote trills were not fully accomplished, at least not to these ears. Her singing of He Shall Feed His Flock resulted in an intense portrayal that brought forth bronze tones of warmth and emotion from a softly hued vocal crucible. She Was Despised was vocalized gorgeously with a spiritual reverence to the message inherent in this tragic utterance.

Tenor Glyn Evans imbued into Ev'ry Valley a lively gait with smooth articulation given by clarity of style and projection. His treatment of Thus Saith the Lord Then Desplased

By JEANE DIXON

WEDNESDAY MAY 16

Aries (March 21-April 19): Today you get your comeuppance—practically everybody has commented on your recent actions. Listen and respond gently.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Romance holds your attention. It's just as well, for this is not a day for business. Avoid hazardous conditions.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Be sure you keep all appointments. Purchases l a c k satisfaction; hold them to minimum. Have patience with delayed communications.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Keep your distance from restless acquaintances. Avoid needless provocation. Let friends defend themselves against gossip.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): If you are in charge, strive for fair dealing. If you are not, be patient with authority although you may disagree.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not take out any tensions on your friends. Close relatives who know your qualities are able to help.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are apt to find yourself doing something unfamiliar, without benefit of others' experience. Celebrate partial success tonight.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pragmatic success comes without any easy complex reason. No need to imagine mysteries beneath the surface.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): What seems a short cut is the longest way. Overconfidence or reliance on casual suggestions is confusing.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People are not too well organized by your standards. Forgive them and pitch in to be helpful.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Persistence at work is important. Home affairs detract from business. Special efforts to express your tender feelings are in order.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Be alert for strange conditions. You make the difference. Extras tip the balance—you'll be glad you thought of alternatives.

To Your Good Health

Cure of Hangnail Simple Procedure

Dear Dr. Thosteson: For many years I have been plagued with the problem of skin crevices near the fingernails. This is annoying and painful. Can something be done about it?—M.M.

Most of us have had an occasional hangnail and yes, it's annoying. But when the problem persists, it's time to do something about it.

The most frequent but not the only cause is that the cuticle may adhere to the nail as it emerges. As the nail grows, the cuticle (skin) is stretched, until the crack or crevice appears.

Best solution is also the simplest. When the skin has been softened (after a leisurely bath, or after soaking the fingers) gently push the cuticle back. You can get orangewood sticks at the drug store for this purpose. Try doing the regular way at least once a week, and see if that doesn't help.

Other possible causes may be irritation from polish remover or from whatever household chemicals you happen to use.

Inadequate protein in the diet can cause the cuticle to be thin and fragile, so attention to diet may also be a help to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter, 15, has an unsightly case of blackheads. There is no way to change her hair style as it is cut in a shag. What foods besides greasy, sugary foods shouldn't she eat?

Are there any creams, pills, removers, etc., she could use to get rid of them? If so, where can you buy them? Washing doesn't seem to help much, and we haven't money for a dermatologist.Mrs. G.L.

Being wary of fats and greasy and fried foods is the principal dietary consideration; studies have proved that the long-held theory that chocolate is harmful, or anyway, haven't been borne out the idea that avoiding chocolate is helpful.

Washing does done the right way, is a necessary part of the process, but it can't do the whole job, either.

If your daughter's problem is purely a matter of blackheads, careful use of a comedo extractor (which is very inexpensive) can usually get rid of a good deal of her trouble. (Don't try to squeeze the blackheads. Though. That can damage the skin.)

There aren't any "pills" or creams which will put an end to blackheads. Drying lotions can be helpful, though.

I'm not entirely sure that you mean "acne" when you say at least a single visit to a dermatologist, but if so, even regular doctor, to make sure these blackheads aren't progressing into acne, it is considerably more difficult condition.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About five years ago I was told that my rectal prominence was due to "cryptitis." I still have considerable discomfort and would like there any treatment?C.R.

The crypts are folds of the membrane in the rectal opening. If these folds, or crypts, become infected, you have the discomfort, and usually there is some discharge besides.

First treatment is the use of antibiotics, applied locally, but they do not clear up the infection (and soreness), surgery to trim the thickened tissues may be required.

Contract Bridge

By B. Jay Becker

(Top Record-Holder in Masters' Individual Championship Play)

With Malice A forethought West dealer. Neither side vulnerable.

| | SOUTH ♠K 10 9 7 5 ♥6 ♦A 8 6 3 ♣K 9 5 | |

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 ♠ |
| Pass | 2 ♦ | Pass | 4 ♠ |

Opening lead—king of diamonds.

Card reading is the art of figuring out how the unseen cards are divided. In the great majority of hands a player can deduce from either the bidding, or the plays to date, where certain key cards are likely to be located. Of course, once a player obtains this information, he finds it easy to achieve the best possible result.

Consider this deal where West led the king of diamonds. As with the queen, East took the ace and ruffed a diamond in dummy. West discarded a club.

Declarer played a club to the king. East took a scant incense and cashed the ace. He followed that Queen and a club. After ruffing a heart, South pumped his last diamond in dummy. At trick 7 South's plight became the position:

Declarer led the queen of spades, everyone following low, and was then forced to play the ace of clubs. West ruffed and returned the king of hearts, whereupon East, with malice aforethought, trumped his partner's high heart and led a diamond. As a result, West coved his jack of trumps and South went down one.

Had South read the cards correctly in the diagramed position, he would have made the contract. He should have realized that West couldn't have the ace of spades — he would have opened the bidding in such case — and South should therefore have over dummy's queen of spades with the king in order to lead another spade. He would thus have lost two trump tricks, and three, and the contract would have come marching home.

Tomorrow: Logic.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Being wary of fats and greasy and fried foods is the principal dietary consideration; studies have proved that the long-held theory that chocolate is harmful. Or anyway, haven't borne out the idea that avoiding chocolate is helpful.

Washing done the right way, is a necessary part of the process, but it can't do the whole job, either.

If your daughter's problem is purely a matter of blackheads, careful use of a comedo extractor (which is very inexpensive) can usually get rid of a good deal of her trouble. (Don't try to squeeze the blackheads. Though. That can damage the skin.)

There aren't any "pills" or creams which will put an end to blackheads. Drying lotions can be helpful, though.

I'm not entirely sure that you mean "acne" when you say at least a single visit to a dermatologist, but if so, even regular doctor, to make sure these blackheads aren't progressing into acne, it is considerably more difficult condition.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About five years ago I was told that my rectal prominence was due to "cryptitis." I still have considerable discomfort and would like there any treatment?C.R.

The crypts are folds of the membrane in the rectal opening. If these folds, or crypts, become infected, you have the discomfort, and usually there is some discharge besides.

First treatment is the use of antibiotics, applied locally, but they do not clear up the infection (and soreness), surgery to trim the thickened tissues may be required.

Countries Agree

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (AP) — The governments of Canada and Guyana and East Germany agreed to establish diplomatic relations at the embassy level.

Concern Mounting Over Penitentiary Escapes

MONTREAL (CP)—The Public Service Alliance of Canada says the escape Sunday of five prisoners from the special correctional unit of St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary was the result of "bad co-ordination by the authorities."

A spokesman for the union representing prison guards said three of four guard towers at the prison were unmanned at the time of the escapes.

The four towers were manned 24 hours a day the last month until last Tuesday, when guards in three towers were ordered to take their lunch breaks simultaneously, he said. The fourth tower was to be left occupied.

The spokesman said prison authorities changed their orders three and four times.

The spokesman said a change in visiting regulations was partly responsible for the escape.

Convicts and visitors are usually separated by glass in a meeting room and they speak through telephones.

Last Wednesday, however, guests were ushered into the prison gymnasium where they met openly with inmates. "It was like a party and the guards had no way of knowing what was going on," he said.

The five men broke out during a lunch period Sunday by sawing through a bar on the door, then climbing over the prison wall.

The five men who escaped were: Jean-Paul Mercier, 28, Andre Ouellette, 32, Robert Imbeault, 24, Gilles Gingras, 25, and Michel Lefleur, 22. The last four were serving sentences for armed robbery.

Mercier pleaded guilty last week to two charges of non-capital murder in the shooting deaths of two prison guard wardens last September. He was sentenced to two consecutive life terms.

Maurice St. Pierre, Quebec Provincial Police director, said Monday the prison authorities could have prevented the escape.

He said that prison director Pierre Goulem was told April 24 or 25 that a group of prisoners were "plotting to escape."

Mr. St. Pierre said all five men had escaped from the penitentiary before and it was logical that the report of the plot should lead to increased surveillance.

A QPP officer aid Mercier told guards at his trial last week: "I may as well plead guilty . . . I won't be there (in prison) very long."

Mr. St. Pierre said Mercier's remark was the reason for such a "strong contingent of police" men guarding him.

"We even had the courthouse searched. All these precautions were taken just to avoid what happened on Sunday."

Policemen across the province expressed anger over the escapes.

"This is no longer a comedy, it is a tragedy," said Jean Daigneault, Montreal urban community police director.

Police officers have to face new hazards to capture them.

The lives of honest citizens are exposed while criminals remain at large.

In Victoria, Solicitor-General Warren Allmand said a three-man inquiry commission will be established to investigate penitentiary security in Quebec.

He said he hoped to have a representative from the Canadian forces security wing, a judge and someone from the penitentiary service to take charge.

It also was learned in Ottawa that prison administrators were warned as late as May 1 that guard towers were not to be left unmanned at any time.

Mr. Allmand was getting a first-hand taste of popular feeling in the area surrounding William Head where he was greeted by a local protest shout by prison.

This protest, the mostre cent of a series, was prompted by the escape Sunday of a prisoner and the later beatings of two elderly people. Also, a man was thrown from the sundeck of his house about midnight, an hour after the escape.

The ratepayers were demanding that the prison be moved. Mr. Allmand suggested there was no place it could be moved which would not involve a certain amount of risk. He added that new establishments were being built in the Fraser Valley area of British Columbia to ease some of the overcrowding in provincial penitentiaries.

But while the minister was on the west coast, protests and guard walkouts were taking place at penitentiaries.

An illegal walkout by guards at the Halifax County correctional centre followed six of their number being suspended 30 days for leaving their posts during a prisoner riot six weeks ago.

And at Dorchester, N.B., guards were protesting the conditions under which they were required to transfer prisoners from one establishment to another.

Specifically they were unhappy about "an arduous journey" with 24 prisoners last week to establishments in Ontario and Quebec from Dorchester.

A spokesman said the trip included an attempted escape and a fire in a police van.

Several officers even received "scrapes and bruises from the inmates" and two had their eyeglasses broken, he added.

Otto Lang Fencesitting On Capital Punishment

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Otto Lang managed to sit on both sides of the capital punishment fence Monday as the Commons renewed debate on whether to extend a partial ban on the death penalty for another five years.

He said he personally favors trials believe he death penalty because there is no substantial evidence to prove it deters murder.

But he was willing to go along with a proposed partial ban, retaining hangings for murders of policemen and prison guards, because law enforcement officials believe the death penalty gives them some protection.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway), also an abolitionist, said later Mr. Lang set the proper tone for debating capital punishment.

"He endeavored to keep the temperature low."

Reginald Stackhouse (PC—Toronto Scarborough East) and Harold Herbert (L—Montreal Vaudreuil) both supported retention of capital punishment on the basis of constituency polls.

Gerard Laprise (SC—Abitibi) said criminals have been coddled long enough. It should be recognized that society has a right to dispose of its garbage.

Bankrupt

Ronald Millhous, a son of President Richard Millhous Nixon's cousin, leaves the U.S. District Court in Sacramento Wednesday with one of his youngsters after filing for bankruptcy. Millhous filed for bankruptcy after a hog farm he and his wife were partners in went out of business. After the hearing Millhous told reporters he had no interest in politics although he is a registered Republican. He added "My only interest is in putting a chicken in the pot." (AP Photo)

Vietnam Decision Soon

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Monday he is sympathetic to opposition requests for a Commons' debate on this country's future involvement in the Vietnam ceasefire commission.

But he indicated the debate will come only after the cabinet has decided whether to quit the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS).

In a reply to Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) Mr. Sharp reiterated that the cabinet will make that decision before the end of this month.

He also told the House Monday there has been slow progress in exchanging civilian war prisoners held by the Vietnamese combatants.

He said a few hundred civilians have been released, but both sides claim several thousand still are in prison.

Prisoner exchanges have been delayed, partly because the ceasefire commission has refused to fly observers to release points.

The refusal stems from recent attacks on commission helicopters and rejection by the Viet Cong of requests for wider air corridors for the aircraft.

Trudeau Promises Conflict Of Interest Rules for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — The government still intends to bring in legislation laying down rules for members of Parliament, including senators, dealing with conflict of interest, Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday. Such a measure was forecast at the January opening of Parliament.

He told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield in the Commons that rules also will be made public for the guidance of senior government officials and cabinet appointees.

At the same time the government was asked by New Democratic Leader David Lewis to check into reports that one or two members of the Canadian transport commission had held shares in Bell Canada, contrary to law. The commission recently granted Bell permission to raise its rates.

Outside the House Mr. Lewis named Anne Carver and Laval Fortier as the commissioners in question. However, a commission spokesman denied that either commissioner owns Bell stock.

Mrs. Carver said in an interview that while she owned 33 shares in Bell when she was appointed to the commission in February, 1972, she sold them immediately.

She had been named to the telecommunications committee of the commission and said, "I would have been very stupid if I had kept the stock."

A commission spokesman said Mr. Fortier, appointed when the commission was established in 1967, later inherited some Bell stock. Like Mrs. Carver, he sold them right away, said the spokesman.

A section of the Transportation Act prohibits commissioners from holding stock in any enterprise controlled or supervised by the commission.

There also was renewed questioning in the Commons about a contract former finance minister E. J. Benson allegedly gave while in office to his former accounting firm in Kingston, Ont. He now is head of the CTC.

Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) asked Mr. Trudeau to make public evidence that Mr. Benson had no "residual or beneficial interest in the firm."

He referred to evidence Mr. Trudeau said is in his possession clearing Mr. Benson of any suggestion of conflict of interest.

MPs Talk Out Tax Deductions

OTTAWA (CP) — A motion by Trevor Morgan (PC—St. Catharines) asking the government to consider allowing income-tax deductions for mortgage interest and municipal taxes was talked out in the Commons Monday.

The motion, which now will die on the order paper, was opposed by Liberal and New Democratic speakers but favored by Charles-Arthur Gauthier (SC-Roberval).

Mr. Morgan's motion would have allowed up to $2,000 to be deducted from taxable income for mortgage interest and up to $500 for municipal taxes.

This would encourage home ownership, stimulate construction and employment, he said.

Harold Hebert (L—Montreal Vaudreuil) said the proposal would benefit high-income Canadians, who, instead of paying off mortgages, would be encouraged to keep them because of the tax benefits.

Did Liberals Promise Grant?

OTTAWA (CP) — State secretary Hugh Faulkner said Monday in the Commons he will check a report that Liberal organizers promised renewal of an Opportunities for Youth (OFY) project in return for rounding up a crowd to greet Prime Minister Trudeau during a weekend visit to Lac Megantic, Que.

About 900 persons, including some young people, greeted Mr. Trudeau when he visited Lac Megantic Friday.

Davis Silent About Threats

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis refused Tuesday night to discuss disclosures that he and his family have received nine death threats in the last three weeks.

Mr. Davis, interviewed in London, England, where he is leading a trade mission, said:

"I just don't want to talk about it. I just hope that the people at home would understand that it would not help the situation for me to comment."

The disclosure was made earlier Tuesday by Leo Bernier, Ontario minister of natural resources, who told a legislature committee that "the public doesn't realize how serious the situation is."

Mr. Bernier said he and his family also have been threatened.

An official in the premier's office later confirmed that the threats had been made against the Davis family. He said there is a general pattern to the threats which "are being tolerated as long as they appear harmless."

The natural resources minister said some commercial airlines, including Air Canada and CP Air, have indicated they would prefer Mr. Davis did not fly with them because of the security risk his presence might present.

However, spokesmen for both airlines denied that Premier Davis ever has been advised that he is a security risk on flights.

Mr. Bernier said his own life had been threatened four or five times, and the latest threat worried him because it had included his family.

Mr. Bernier made his remarks while being pressed by committee members for information on the use by cabinet ministers of the province's 4½ plane fleet.

For Me?-It's So Big!

It was disbelief as much as joy that passed across the face of Audrey McSherry, age 11, of St. Joseph's Separate School when Y's Men's Club president Al Corre presented her with the winner's trophy for Grade 5 entrants in the club's second annual spelling bee. In the 18 rounds it took to eliminate the field, Audrey made not one mistake. Grade 6 winner was Julian Smith of Queen Elizabeth Public School, last year's Grade 5 champion.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A fresh outbreak of cold air spreading across Lake Superior overnight is expected to continue its push eastward, crossing the lower lakes tonight. Brisk southwesterly winds ahead of the system should bring warmer conditions to southern Ontario during the day with showers developing late in the day. On Thursday, cold air will cover the province and considerable cloudiness is expected in most regions.

Protect Consumers

TORONTO (CP) — John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said Tuesday his department will bring a bill before the legislation to restrict unfair trade practices. During a session of the legislature committee considering the ministry's estimates, Fred Young NDP-Yorkwin Yorkview said consumers are being "hoodwinked" by salesmen.

Ban Indian Land Taxes

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation that would preclude municipalities from taxing property on Indian lands was given second and third reading in the Ontario legislature Tuesday and now needs royal assent to become law. Municipalities that have been taxing non-Indian tenants living on Indian land would be provided with financial compensation on a sliding scale.

Woman Murdered

HAMILTON (CP) — Security police at McMaster University discovered the body of a woman as a campus walking path Tuesday night while investigating a report of a woman screaming. City police said the woman had a rope around her neck and there was evidence of a severe blow to her head. She was identified as Adele Komorski, 26, of Cooksville, Ont., a graduate student in German at the university. She was living in a campus residence.

Lake Levels to Drop

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — An easing is in sight for Great Lakes levels, officials of the Canada Centre for Inland Waters, said Tuesday. Centre officials said that levels on Lakes Superior and Huron likely will continue to increase somewhat during the next few months, but will begin to decline by late summer. They said that Lakes Erie and Ontario will begin to decline much sooner. Lake Ontario is to peak this month, but then should decline steadily during the next few months.

Quebec Labor Men Set Free

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's three top labor leaders were released from prison today at 8:20 a.m. EDT after accepting temporary absences from the province justice department.

Marcel Pepin, Yvon Charbonneau and Louis Laberge were greeted at the gates of Orsainville prison by about 100 supporters.

They accepted several conditions of release Tuesday including one that will oblige them to spend part of every weekend until September behind bars.

The three were sentenced to one-year terms for contempt of court in the spring of 1972.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said at a news conference Tuesday:

Gold Declines But Then Rises

LONDON (AP) — Gold fell back from record prices in Europe today for the first time since early last week, then stecided for perhaps another climb. But the United States dollar began to improve.

Gold opened in Zurich at $104.50 U.S. an ounce, down $6 from Tuesday's close.

In London, the metal brought only $107.50 in early trades, down $3 on overnight levels. But in the daily mid-morning fixing, the five leading bullion dealers agreed on a fixing price of $111, or 30 cents above Tuesday's close.

Committee Will Probe Prisons

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons justice committee demanded a special parliamentary investigation of the Canadian penitentiary system Tuesday and wound up getting the job itself.

But it took a long day of wrangling, highlighted by a special debate that ran well past midnight, to settle the issue.

It started at a morning meeting of the justice committee when Solicitor-General Warren Allmand appeared as a witness and Conservative members grilled him on a recent rash of prison escapes.

Focusing on the weekend break-out by five prisoners from St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary near Montreal, they demanded that a special commons committee investigate penitentiary and correctional operations.

The proposal passed the justice committee unanimously.

Conservative members insisted that a national inquiry is necessary and to keep the issue alive in the Commons, called for a special debate.

Canadian Girls Shot Zambian Soldiers Kill 2 Tourists

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Two Canadian girl tourists were killed and an American man was seriously wounded Tuesday when Zambian troops opened fire across the Zambesi River border between Rhodesia and Zambia, the Rhodesian government reported today.

The girls were Christine Louise Sinclair, 18, of Guelph, Ont., and Marjan Ibuna Driver, 19, of Rockwood, Ont. Their names were released in Ottawa.

A Rhodesian helicopter today lifted the wounded American, John Caruthers, 28, of Troy, Ohio, from the bottom of a steep gorge and flew him, with his uninjured wife Carol, 25, to a hospital at nearby Wankie.

Caruthers was hit in the stomach in the shooting, which occurred at the spectacular Victoria Falls on the Zambesi.

One of the Canadian girls was killed instantly when the four came under automatic-weapons fire from Zambian army troops on the other side of the river, the government said. The other girl was hit and toppled into the mid-flowing river. Her body has not been recovered but she has been termed dead by the government.

In Lusaka, the Zambian capital, a spokesman for the Canadian high commission said the mission had been in contact with Zambian authorities over the shooting and had been assured of their "complete co-operation."

It protested "in the strongest terms at this indiscriminate killing and maiming of innocent people."

The note went on:

"The government of Rhodesia holds the government of Zambia responsible for this crime and calls upon the government of Zambia to take immediate steps to bring the perpetrators of this murderous attack to justice."

The government of Rhodesia further requires the government of Zambia to take all steps necessary to ensure that there is no recurrence of similar incidents in future."

A Rhodesian statement said there is no question of black nationalist guerrillas—who have been active in white-ruled Rhodesia the last few months—being responsible for the shooting, and claimed it had "irrefutable proof" that Zambian troops are responsible.

The incident is the second this year in which Zambia troops have allegedly opened fire across the border and killed civilians.

A white Rhodesian fisherman was killed Feb. 9 while in a boat on the Zambesi. An inquest found that the craft had probably been in Zambian waters and that Zambian troops were probably responsible.

In another recent incident, two elderly West German tourists who strayed across the halfway mark on a bridge spanning the Zambesi River near the Victoria Falls were arrested at gunpoint by Zambian soldiers. They were later freed.

Victoria Falls is Rhodesia's top tourist attraction and draws thousands of visitors every year from all over the world.

Ontario Aims at Easing Ottawa's Investment Curbs

LONDON (CP) — British concern about Canada's foreign-investment issue continued today to dominate discussions with the Ontario economic mission led by Premier William Davis.

At a Canada-British symposium held by the London Chamber of Commerce, by far the largest number of questions put by British businessmen to the Ontario delegation related to federal legislative proposals to control foreign investment.

W. P. Bowman, managing director of United Biscuits Ltd. said the attraction of Canada over the United States as an investment area is growing with the rising mood of American nationalism.

"We hope that it won't be made too politically difficult for us," he said.

In answer to this and other similar questions, Commerce and Trade Minister Claude Bennett said his province hopes to influence the federal legislation in a moderating manner. He added that the proposed law should be couched in a way which would encourage British investors to fill the vacuum created in cases where U.S. investment deals are blocked.

His formal speech to the group emphasized Ontario's desire for more foreign investment and, as examples of its attractions, held out Canada's skilled labor force and its technological achievements.

Supermarket Profit Figures Under Fire

TORONTO (CP) — Supermarkets which claim their profits are less than one cent on a dollar of retail sales are using misleading figures, a member of the Commons food price committee said Tuesday night.

Terry Grier, New Democratic member of Parliament for Lakeshore, said businesses normally rate their profit as a percentage of investors' capital. For Canada Safeway, investors' profit is 12.6 per cent of capital; for Dominion Stores 11.2 per cent; and for Steinberg's, 12.9 per cent, he said.

Mr. Grier told a discussion group he is "worried about the creation of inflation hysteria where consumers will be conditioned to accept price increases whether justified or not."

Walter Miller, vice-president of the National Farmers Union, said the "villains" in inflation are food corporations which have the power to manipulate the economic and political system as they can make the greatest possible profit.

Astronauts May Place Umbrella Over Skylab

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Skylab 1 astronauts may rocket to their troubled space laboratory and salvage the mission, by installing a cover or balloon to shield the craft from the sun.

That is one option being considered by United States space agency officials today as they ponder what to do about the 100-degree temperatures in Skylab's cabin that make the orbiting laboratory uninhabitable.

They say the high readings, which have risen steadily since the two astronauts blasted off, are the main barrier to sending astronauts Charles Conrad, Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz into space Sunday to link up with the Skylab.

The problem was caused when protective thermal paint was stripped from the space craft during a launch mishap.

Another possibility is to dispatch the astronauts on an abbreviated inspection mission that would involve a fly-around of the Skylab to photograph and evaluate problem areas, followed possibly by docking and brief on-board inspection.

A decision on what to do and when and if to launch may not come until Saturday, said William C. Schneider, Skylab program director. The countdown on the astronauts' Saturn 1-B rocket continued on schedule in case the green light is given for Sunday.

Schneider said that, if it is decided to take up a balloon or some other shade device, the flight might have to be delayed several days to prepare and test the object and give the astronauts time to rehearse installation.

The training is important because the installation might involve a space walk by one or two of the astronauts, and they would have to be thoroughly briefed on exactly what to do on the potentially hazardous assignment.

If a balloon were selected, it probably would resemble an air mattress that would be attached to a spacecraft boom, swung over the workshop and inflated. Also being considered is a thermal insulation blanket 42 feet long and 30 to 12 feet wide.

"If we could cover 30 to 40 per cent of the affected spacecraft area on the side facing the sun, it would solve the problem," flight controller Don Puddy told reporters Tuesday night.

CIA Asked To Hide Watergate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Stuart Symington says President Nixon's top aides "tried to obstruct justice" by hiding the Watergate affair under a Central Intelligence Agency umbrella.

Testimony before the Senate armed services committee of which the Missouri Democrat is acting chairman, indicates the ploy didn't work because the CIA refused to go along. But convicted conspirator James McCord says he believes the White House tried to use the cover anyway.

"Great sermon....Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Hot Seat

Asterisk locates solar power wings on the Skylab space station, that failed to unfold properly Monday threatening the next U.S. space mission, Mission Control at Cape Kennedy, Fla. said that one set of solar wings successfuly opened but that the second set, supplying more than half of the Skylab power, remained folded against the side of the space station. ## Ontario Won't Try to Collect If Tax Under Dollar

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario won't attempt to collect from those who refused to pay the two-per-cent sales tax increase if the tax to be collected is less than $1, Revenue Minister Allan Grossman said in an interview Tuesday.

But if it's a case of a taxpayer refusing to pay the seven per cent on an item like an automobile, "in fairness to those people who paid seven per cent we are obliged to collect it."

The increase in the sales tax finally received assent Monday, 14 days after the government began to collect it.

Opposition leaders had charged the collection of the tax increase was illegal without accompanying legislation.

Mr. Grossman had been noncommittal in the legislature about what action the government would take against those who refused to pay the increase.

He did say in the house that stores had no fear of prosecution for not collecting the increase as long as they took the name and address of the purchaser.

The revenue minister repeated Tuesday that "the overwhelming majority" of the province's taxpayers did pay the seven per cent.

Sidney Street Bridge Could Meet Deadline

The apparent slow progress on construction of the first stage of the Sidney Street bridge over the CN double tracks has raised a question in city traffic committee.

Alderman Arnold Orr noted Monday that there has been very little progress on the structure since last fall and he wondered if the contractor was working to schedule.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell assured that the contractor — H. J. McFarland Construction — had a schedule to meet in that no many working days were allowed for completion.

He noted that construction was halted last autumn for the winter months and had resumed about May 1.

Despite frequent rains, the engineer said the contractor could still meet a suggested date of May 30 for use of the new structure.

The contractor had discontinued work on the bridge approaches last fall because of heavy rains.

When the first half of the bridge is completed, the old bridge will be taken out and the second half of the new structure will get under way.

But there will be a two-lane rolled construction program on Sidney Street this year.

In addition to completion of the bridge structure, the city this spring awarded a contract for the reconstruction of Sidney Street between Catherine and College Streets.

The city engineer told the traffic committee Monday that the contractor had commenced work on the project this week.

Kiwanis Walkathon Funds for Park

With the award of first prize in the Belleville Kiwanis Club's Walkathon poster competition and printing of copies of the winning entry, promotion and preparations for the park - to - park walkathon are officially under way.

The May 26 walkathon is to raise money for work by the service club on part of an extensive waterfront park development program that will eventually give Belleville the longest waterfront park of any community on Lake Ontario.

The area that will be the first undertaking of the Belleville Kiwanis Club lies east of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board property. Work will include the planting of trees and the construction of walkways and parking facilities.

A number of prizes will be given out to walkers by Mac Donald's Restaurant. Prizes will be Years of Cheer: a Big Mac, a milkshake and orden of french fries every second week for a year, Janice Dowin, winner of the poster competition, has already won one of the Year of Cheer awards.

McDonald's are also participating on the walk itself, their "train burger" leading the walk off and stopping at several checkpoints to provide free orange drinks to the walkers. Each walker will qualify, too, for a free order of french fries.

The Belleville Kiwanis Club is organizing and sponsoring the walk and have invited Prime Minister Trudeau to participate in some form or other. Posters and pledge cards are being prepared and will soon be available.

The walk is to follow a 25-mile route through the city from park to park, beginning at 8 a.m. or shortly after on May 26 from Zwick's Island park.

Role of Police Officer Changes with Society

PICTON — The original role of the policeman, to apprehend, detect, protect and aid the prosecution has broadened swiftly in recent years, reaching into completely new areas.

Douglas Crosbie, chief constable of the Belleville City Police force told Picton Kiwanians that 75 to 80 per cent of the activities he heads are concerned with duties such as the issuance of bicycle licences.

Chief Crosbie, addressing the service club during National Police Week, said bicycles have become the most common item for theft today. Bike sales have been boosted by promotion of cycling as good exercise for everyone.

In Belleville originally 3,000 licences were ordered for sale but the police department now has issued almost 7,000 of them.

The introduction of minibikes, snowmobiles and all-terrain vehicles has created a need for regulation of their control. Legislation for these vehicles is needed, he said.

To keep pace with the popularity of motorcycles, a series of three consecutive motorcycle-list training schools will be held at Loyalist College this year. The sessions, open to all interested cyclists, were instigated at the suggestion of provincial court judge James Clendenning.

Chief Crosbie said his police force also has a safety officer and a youth officer, two other "firsts" as change occurs in Belleville.

He observed that a town police force in a community such as Picton cannot afford such specialized services and each constable must double in these capacities.

"A town policeman must have more knowledge than any other type you have," he stressed.

Chief Crosbie referred to the introduction of new devices in police work in recent years and said the breathalyzer test as a deterrent to drunk driving, did little to curb the offence. Prosecution rates have increased, however.

"A whole new ball game in the security field" has emerged with the highest for the police constable, according to Chief Crosbie.

He said persons living in single dwellings are familiar with their neighbors and tend to protect each other. In the highrise apartment building, the security of recognizing neighbors is absent.

To protect highrise dwellers, competent and qualified security police are needed. Training to equip men for these jobs is available through the Ontario Provincial college at Aylmer, one of the first police schools in Canada.

Chief Crosbie predicted "the day will come when no man will be a policeman without receiving training there."

In recognition of today's drug problem, the Canadian Police College now offers drug courses and other courses equipping constables to return to their communities qualified as instructors.

A province-wide Telex and Computerized Police Information are among other new facilities utilized by police today. Radio experts from the Ontario Police Commission stand by to offer advice to each police department planning new radio facilities.

Chief Crosbie said the standards for a policeman stated in 1829 by Sir Robert Peel remain for the most part equally applicable today.

The Belleville police chief said he considered one of the prime goals of police work an opportunity for the public to meet officers in an unofficial capacity.

Trailer Resident Protests New Tax

TRENTON — Charges of unfair and "selective taxation" were leveled against town council Monday by D. R. Fielding, a resident of the Sky view Trailer Court, in Quinte Estates Street West.

Mr. Fielding is among approximately 50 trailer residents who are now being assessed a $100 annual licencing fee, the result of a controversial town bylaw that went into effect March 1 this year.

He charged that by singling out residents of the trailer court for this fee, it was in effect, a special tax. "Trailer park licence fees ($5,000 paid by owners Ralph and Betty Thompson) were passed directly to the tenants," he said.

Councillor Robert Patrick suggested Mr. Fielding be advised of the reasons behind council's decision to licence the town's sole trailer court. He said one of the main reasons was that by paying the $100-a-unit fee, residents were contributing toward education costs not previously collected, although a majority of the trailer residents have school-age children.

Mr. Fielding said he and his wife have no children.

Policing Sale Raises Question

City Council has given its approval for the annual downtown sidewalk sale, but costs of additional police protection and the erection of detour signs and barricades are still to be worked out with the downtown merchants' association.

During the sale only buses and emergency vehicles will be permitted down the single lane between Victoria Ave. and Campbell Street, with all other traffic to be detoured around the business section.

But Police Chief D. T. Crosbie said the single traffic lane will have to be policed, and barricades and signs erected. Also barricades will have to be manned by police personnel during critical hours.

The committee received the chief's report and directed that a copy be forwarded to the merchants association.

A representative of the association will be asked to attend the next meeting of the traffic committee to discuss enforcement details during the sale.

75-unit Building Project Cancelled

TRENTON — A long, drawn-out battle to construct 45 family and 30 senior citizen units on Wright St. in Trenton, has fizzled out.

Two-year delays, caused by objections filed by a man who later died and whose agents had to formally withdraw his opposition, had cleared up the matter some time ago.

But, in a letter to town council Monday night, H. Pullen, development manager for the Ontario Housing Corporation's eastern region, said the contract for construction has been cancelled.

Mr. Pullen' explained that due to the delays, the contractor had requested additional funds to cover increased construction costs.

"This matter was considered by the corporation and . . . as the contractor is not in a position to proceed with the project at the original price, the contract awarded to him has accordingly been cancelled," he writes.

OHC is carrying out further site investigations in Trenton in order to obtain another location for the 75-unit building.

Most Secondary School Students Out June 7

Despite indications to the contrary, most high school students will be released from school June 7 this year. The exceptions are those who have to write final examinations, usually in those subjects on which they earned a year's average of less than 60 per cent.

An advertisement in The Intelligencer last week informed employers that high school students will be available for summer work after June 15 and "regular instruction or examinations will continue until that date".

However, a school board spokesman said the early dismissal of students exempted from examinations continues in force this year. Examinations will be held June 8 and June 11 through 15.

The ministry of education in Toronto is known to favor lengthening the secondary school year and shortening the elementary year to bring the two l nine. High school teachers have always had the last two weeks of the school year free to mark papers and conduct promotion meetings. the two in line. High school teachers will get a week at the end of the school year for the same purpose.

Ideal Venders Expands To Meet World Demand

DESERONTO — Two operations are going at once at Ideal Venders here.

Inside, it's the peak of the production season.

Outside, there's a large-scale construction program under way — a project that symbolizes the current company mood of expansiveness.

A leader in its field, Ideal Venders is the biggest supplier of soft-drink vending machines and coolers on the Canadian market,— a demand source that has consumed much of its 20-year production here.

It now is seeking an advance on broader, international fronts.

It already has gained entry to United States markets and is persisting in ambitions to eventually win trade routes into Europe and the Far East.

For general manager Richard Moore the prospects add up to an "exciting" challenge.

Diversification is a key to staying on top at home and bidding for attention in a world market that is price-sensitive and means challenging long-established American giants, he says.

Ideal Venders has a tradition of innovation from which to draw confidence.

Its work teams here have always included a core group of works away at new techniques.

As a result, the company over the years "has come up with quite a few firsts for the industry."

The emphasis on diversification in recent years saw the company assigning the current second emphasis on ecology.

It translated "bin-the-can" calls of environmentalists into a new machine design.

The result was a "rather unique, patentable idea in conversion," says Mr. Moore.

Ideal Venders produced a machine, unchanged in outward appearance, but with radically versatile workings. By flicking a switch, it converts from dispensing cans to bottles.

But plant expansion also was necessary.

"We're the largest in Canada now and we don't want to lose that status. To keep that share of the market and areas we have to expand and diversify," said Mr. Moore.

While it may take some time to make inroads abroad, the company has attracted attention.

There have been "many, many inquiries" including interest from Japanese business — a high compliment in international trade.

The construction will increase plant and storage space by 33 per cent — for a total operating area of 100,000 square feet.

A division of Eddy Match, the company has sales staff working across Canada and a plant work force of 170 here.

Workers were hired and trained to the machinery as new heavy equipment was moved in.

"I can visualize an increase in employment," says Mr. Moore. "I don't know. The market will Moore. "To what degree, I dictate that. But prospects are exciting . . .

Ex-servicemen's Courses Continue

Project Loyalist, a retraining scheme for ex-servicemen that gives credit for experience gained in the armed forces, is to be continued.

A federal grant will enable 100 retiring service personnel to enrol in the intensive course at Loyalist College, jointly sponsored by Canada Manpower, the Department of National Defence and the Ontario Ministry of Colleges and Universities through Loyalist College.

Officials of the sponsoring departments made reports and recommendations following an inspection of the pilot project in January. More than 15, a graduate have already been turned out and a further 37 students remain in the project from an initial intake of 55.

Special programs co-ordinator at Loyalist College, George Froese, said graduates were aiming at better jobs and getting them. "They all seem to have enjoyed success," he said. "All of those I know who have looked for jobs are now employed." He said at least one had left in need of a vacation after the high pressure courses.

Mr. Froese said the same courses as were offered last year would be offered again. They will be accelerated courses in electrical, electronic and mechanical engineering, accountancy, business administration and assesment appraisal and real estate. "There will be small internal changes in the courses," he said, "but we're not changing the project very much at all."

Canada Manpower supervisor Frank Martin said other areas had been considered as well as Belleville, but that service discharges were fcld numerous enough only in Ontario. At the time of February's inspection visit, Canada Manpower regional training consultant Jack Grey said setting the project up at other colleges as well would be considered.

Project Loyalist is unique in that it gives the service veterans academic recognition for their practical and vocational experience f r o m their service careers.

Self-care Unit

The faltering economics of the Queen's Self-Care Unit is all the more unfortunate given the high cost of treatment in hospital beds. But these hospital beds are presumably filled most of the time, whereas those of the Self-Care Unit are not.

According to Health Minister Dr. Richard Potter only 50 per cent of the former motel's beds are being used. To be economically sound he says 90 per cent should be maintained.

A letter which appeared in The Intelligencer the other day had high praise for the unit. It was written by a patient and bore 36 signatures in all of patients who find the unit a big asset.

However, the hard facts of economic life seem to be militating against its maintenance. One reason advanced for this is the unit's size; smaller, more compact units are seen as being closer to the ideal and this type is envisaged for the future.

Indeed, the fact that the experiment in principle is still viewed with favor is encouraging. The Queen's unit itself remains in operation, although Dr. Potter hints that a decision on its future will be made "within the next few months."

If the unit is to be saved it is clear it must see increased use. Dr. Potter says that thus far doctors from outside Belleville have not used the facility but is, they have not referred patients to it and the minister says he would welcome their participation.

But this sounds like a little late in the day. Doctors in the surrounding communities would surely have been aware of the facility and referred patients accordingly. They have not done so and it will be surprising if they begin doing so now. Whatever happens, the minister has indicated the unit will be put to some use or other. And so it should.

Bicycle Boom

A couple of 10-speed bicycles have been reported stolen from outside schools in Belleville. Unhappily there is nothing unusual about this, other than the fact that these multi-gear bikes have been dubbed by police as "the Cadillacs" of the bicycle world.

As we all know, getting around by bicycle, whether for doing the shopping or just plain recreation, is enjoying something of a boom now. And it is interesting to note that these 10-speed aristocrats feature in an article in the current issue of the National Geographic Magazine — on the first stages of a marathon ride by two young couples from Alaska to the tip of South America.

"Bike Packin Across Alaska and Canada" is the title of the article in which Dan Buresh describes his trip with wife Lys and friends Greg and June Siple from Anchorage to Missoula, Montana, a distance of 1,640 miles.

It was rough going but the four young people had prepared for it thoroughly. Their ultimate goal is more than the vast majority of us would care to undertake and we hope they make it safely. If they do it will be another unique achievement in the sphere of high adventure, as well as a valuable endorsement of cycling as a means of transportation, whether just around the corner or traversing continents.

Pilot's Action

At 19 stocky Randy Daoust may well be the youngest bush pilot in the north country. Soon he will be one of the wealthiest. Daoust has come to the news of late for his rescue of four American businessmen after a canoeing accident.

Actually it was last summer and as we recall an earlier story young Daoust spotted the four men on an island where they had been stranded for some time. Now the word is that the young pilot is to receive a $200,000 gift from the businessmen. It is a handsome return investment which will grow to that amount over the next six years. It is a large sum, without a doubt, and it clearly reflects not only the gratitude of the rescued men but also American generosity.

Quite apart from the rescue and the financial independence that is accruing to Randy Daoust, the episode serves to conjure up in the minds of the vast northland and the men who pursue this romantic, interesting and sometimes dangerous calling

Collective Bargaining Affirmed

Federal-Provincial Conference on Labor Wide-reaching

By HENRY F. HALD

OTTAWA — The little bit of controversy one hears about labor legislation is a tribute to the stability of the Canadian business community and the common sense of both management and labor.

Except when a major strike upsets the national economy or threatens, as many federal-provincial meetings are, but they did release the working documents on which the ministers based their discussions. Communiques from such meetings tend to be vague, but this one gives some clues to the direction Mr. Munro would like to see things move.

"Ministers reaffirmed their belief in collective bargaining as the best means," it says. No bright ideas here about banning strikes and settling by a Big Brother government to sort it all out for everyone.

Success depended on a greater recognition by the parties, of their responsibilities in relation to the public interest," the communique continues. All were agreed on the need for the parties to have greater opportunities for settling their own disputes, with as little resort as possible to government conciliation.

The ministers also agreed that their own intervention in disputes should only be used as a last resort.

Within that broad responsibility, however, there is the question of essential services, and the ministers spent a good deal of time trying to define just what is an essential service.

The communique put it this way: "It was generally observed that the definition or identification of essential services needs a certain degree of flexibility to reflect the requirements of changing circumstances and the differing conditions of various regions."

Mr. Munro said he hopes to be able to present a bill in Parliament, probably in the next session, which will set out that flexible definition. The air controllers strife of a while back is a good case in point. A strike that inconveniences and annoys a lot of people does not necessarily make that service essential.

Another matter of topical interest discussed by the ministers was the compressed work week. With summer just around the corner, the idea of a four-day work week is appealing. Long, lazy weekends at the cottage and all that.

But it is not that easy. Some manufacturers find a five-day eight-hour day or a short week with a longer working day requires a change in legislation.

The ministers came to the conclusion that there has been too little experience so far to justify conclusions. A lot of factors have to be considered, including health and safety. As B.C. Labor Minister Bill King pointed out, a short week for isolated industries has the advantage of giving the worker a better chance to get out for the weekend; but what does a four day for a nurse or a technician, in a sensitive job where fatigue is an important factor?

Labor legislation reviewed by the conference includes such things as minimum wages, maternity leave, protection of wages, termination of employment, occupational safety and health, workmen's compensation, equal pay for equal work, fair employment practices and employment promotion for minority groups.

Since a lot more Canadians are working for a living than are on the welfare rolls, the working out of such legislation is of great importance to the country. A low government profile is encouraging.

Women Smoking More And Breathing Less

From the Globe and Mail

Women are smoking more, but breathing less, a Toronto researcher said Saturday, reporting on a five-year study of 50 women smokers and non-smokers.

Dr. Collin Woolf, director of the respiratory research laboratory at Toronto General Hospital, said 46 per cent of the 1,200 smokers had a chronic bronchitis.

Heavy and moderate smokers were several times more likely than non-smokers or ex-smokers to have a cough, produce phlegm, get chest colds, wheeze or be short of breath.

The more and the longer the women smoked, the greater these problems were. Women who had five or more colds a year were always smokers, Dr. Woolf told doctors, nurses and others attending a course in respiratory diseases.

The lung specialist said laboratory tests also showed more chest abnormalities and poorer lung capacity among the heavy and moderate smokers.

However, there was no significant difference in any of the symptoms or abnormalities between those who had never smoked and those who had quit for more than a year.

"Which means don't die, but if you have stayed, stayed and your sins will be forgiven you," the researcher quipped.

The two - day course, which ended Saturday at the Four Seasons Sheraton Hotel, was sponsored by the Registered Nurses Association of Ontario, the Ontario Thoracic Society and the York-Toronto TB and Respiratory Disease Association.

Dr. Woolf said volunteers for study, which is to last 10 years, were aged between 25 and 54. They were divided into five groups: non-smokers — women who had never smoked; light smokers, who smoked 10 or fewer cigarettes a day, moderate smokers—10 to 20 a day and heavy smokers, more than 20 a day. There were 183 non-smokers, 62 ex-smokers; 40 light smokers; 22 moderate smokers; and 123 heavy smokers.

Dr. Woolf said the study, which included a physical examination, x-rays, breathing tests, electrocardiograms, blood and sputum tests, refutes the statement of a president of a cigarette firm in 1969 that no evidence exists that smoking harms women.

Dr. Woolf said no malignant cells were found in sputum specimens, but cells from the bronchial tree showed evidence of irritation, degeneration and chronic inflammation. Because only 500 women were studied it would be improbable, statistically, to find a case of lung cancer.

(U.S. figures show that in-1971 the incidence of lung cancer among women was nearly six times as high as in 1930.)

Dr. Woolf said that since the Second World War the number of women smokers have increased sharply. Between 1966 and 1970 there was a drop in smoking by men under 55, but an increase by women of all ages. Between 1963 and 1970 the percentage of girls between 15 and 19 who smoke regularly had risen from 19 to 25 percent.

Dr. Noe Zamel of Toronto General Hospital reported studies showing that the lungs even of light smokers are less elastic than those of non-smokers, even when they show no other symptoms, such as cough or phlegm.

Several years of smoking six to nine cigarettes a day is sufficient to impair lung elasticity and to cause lung destruction which prevents distribution of air evenly throughout the lungs. This impairs the transport of oxygen into body tissues.

Dr. Zamel said these changes are reversible if people stop smoking in the early stages. Light smokers reverted to normal lung values within eight weeks of quitting.

Nancy Gerrest, research officer for the Canadian Nurses Association, urged the nurses at the course to take a more positive approach to combatting the smoking habit.

Earlier, Miss Garrett said she felt doctors and nurses are often reluctant to talk about smoking because so much has been said about the "human rights" of the smoker and his "freedom to smoke."

In fact, she said, smokers are in a minority of two out of five.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 16, 1953

Immigration routine that finally straightened itself out saw a happy family reunion. Tommy Kwan was greeted by his parents here in Belleville after a 7,000 mile air trip from Hong Kong, China, to Toronto. Tommy's arrival was under the watchful eye of the staff of the Paragon Cafe. To the seven-year-old youngster, who is unable to speak English, the trip was a thrilling experience.

Hi-Y Club president Don Cherry announced that Ernest Sandercock and Frank Follwell will pour tea at the Beta Kappa Hi-Y Boys' Tea. In his report to the club, President Cherry announced that in addition to Mr. Follwell and Mr. Sandercock, the following gentlemen have already agreed to act as tea pourers: W. L. Anderson, president of the YMCA; Alderman G. B. Boyce, BCIVS principal; G. E. Currie; Fire Chief Vance, YMCA secretary. Chairman of the tea is D. Morgan) E. L. Littlejohn, program chairman YMCA.

30 YEARS AGO

A new seal is made on the death of a sovereign. The present one, a cumbersome affair that works like an old-fashioned letter-press was first used January 1940, by the late Rt. Hon. Ernest Lapointe, then acting State Secretary. The seal is kept in a vault in the Secretary of State Department, and Dr. E. H. Coleman, Undersecretary of State, says it is used almost every day.

Six Bay of Quinte district students were successful in winning their degrees at Queen's University. Two Belleville students were included: Louis Maxwell Wise, BA, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Coleman St., won his Master of Arts degree in chemistry while John Robert Carther, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carther, Chatham St. won his BA degree.

40 YEARS AGO

May 16, 1933

"Farmers Protect Their Orchards From Raiders. As is the usual custom the farmers in the district protect themselves in their flowering fruit orchards near the highways over the weekend in an attempt to guard them from the annual invasion of "nature lovers," who each year callously strip the bloom-laden branches, causing hundreds of dollars damage. In many cases the farmers were powerless to stem the tide. Mute evidence in the shape of broken and bare trees, robbed of their branches stood on many farms near the tree-strippers.

Taxpayer and Olympics

The following is a copy of a letter addressed to the Prime Minister.

The writer was very much amused at Montreal Mayor Drapeau's dinner last yesterday waxing excitedly on his forte—the organization of the 1976 Summer Olympics. I wasn't aware that the Olympic International Committee had given Montreal the green light, officially that is.

Mayor Drapeau claims there will be a new, very large surplus of money 3½ years from now, and what will Ottawa have to say about that, Mr. Prime?!!

Permit me to go on record as follows:

Ottawa was requested, and has made it official in the House of Commons, that Mayor Drapeau must give Canada his written guarantee that not one penny of taxpayer money will be earmarked for the proposed 1976 Summer Olympics. I would presume that this, translated in any language, means that should the City of Montreal find itself in the enviable position of earning a huge surplus after the 1976 Games, they would be entitled to reap all the rewards, provided they went it alone (with a substantial hand-out from the Province of Quebec already offered) and I am sure that the rest of Canada would be only too happy to shake the hand of the Miracle Man who could bring all this about.

But because Expo 67 was such a fiasco, money-wise, and because our tax money flowed so freely into Montreal both before and after — in fact, two years after (1969) Ottawa picked up a further deficit tab of $250,000,000 — I would refer to see proof of Mr. Drapeau's guarantee in writing regarding the proposed 1976 Summer Olympics. Instead I see in today's Toronto Star, page 12: "House to Ignore After PM Accused of Misleading MPs" and "Deal Jobs In".

"Minutes later, former prime minister John Diefenbaker entered the fray when Trudeau announced that legislation permitting the sale of coins and stamps for the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal will be introduced before the end of the month. . . ."

"Trudeau suggested that Diefenbaker does not understand the issues involved in the sale of the coins and stamps.

"I approach the altar of the Prime Ministership with some great diffidence", responded Diefenbaker from across the aisle. "The Prime Minister should treat the House with a little more consideration and not try to be ingratiatingly contemptuous."

I, too, approach the same altar with the same feeling, and would ask, as one humble servant:

Will the bill permitting the sale of coins and stamps cost the Canadian taxpayer any money, and, if so, how much?

Can Ottawa produce the written guarantee signed by Montreal's Mayor, that not one penny of Canadian tax dollars will go towards the 1976 Summer Olympics, if hosted by the City of Montreal?

Economy Needed

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

At the height of the controversy over the energy tax there was an interesting open line radio show on a Toronto station.

The question asked had a dozen men and women about the dropping of the tax.

Reassuring to the observer was the fact that the top of the ballooon, while agreeing that the tax should be dropped, was unanimous that there should be more economy in government.

Is the public getting value for money?

Anyone close to government it has been obvious for a great many years that there is considerable fat to be cut directly.

It involves duplication of services, people in one branch of four people doing the one, luxurious facilities, inflated salaries.

There are many who feel that most people know it is here.

We have all been conscious of it at least since C. Northcote Parkinson wrote his classic 10 years ago.

But contrarily, though the public has laughed about it, it is a question about which it has never become excited.

It has tended, to accept such waste as a fact of life.

With such public indifference government hardly has been greatly troubled about efficiency.

Now is the indifference changing? Is the public getting concerned to the point of protest.

Hopefully this is so.

The taxpayer has been a hard study here of government efficiency. A study which has had as its goal the control of money, and lots of it.

The commission of government productivity appointed by John Robarts many have had this objective in the premier's minds, but it actually wasn't an economy commission. And it added to spending, if anything.

But a good, study, preferably by one man, such as the federal Glassco commission of some years ago, undoubtedly could save money.

And if the public starts demanding such a study we will could get one.

But we will only get it if there is strong public demand.

Liberation For Men

Bell News

The Hamilton Spectator recently carried a short report of a male telephone operator in San Francisco who claimed he was being discriminated against because the telephone company gave female operators who worked night shifts taxi fares to get them home safely.

The company denied the telephone company and won $7,500 damages. The telephone company agreed to pay taxi fares of both men and women in future.

Baby Batterer Recovers With 'Recovery Inc.'

Dear Ann Landers: With so much being said and written these days about battered children, may I add my two cents worth?

I am a mother who used to get so angry with my children I'd beat them black and blue. My six-year-old was on drugs attended my first meeting I was able to control my impulses.

That was three years ago and I'm still going to meetings. I can't tell you what this organization has meant to me and to my family. I would not have believed it possible had I not experienced it myself. Please tell others that Recovery, Inc. sometimes succeeds when psychiatry fails.—A Free Believer

Dear Free: I have recommended this organization before and am pleased to do so again. Recovery, Inc., has 950 chapters in the U.S. and Canada. The meetings are open and free. The members are people who have, or are trying to recover from emotional illness. Their record of success is phenomenal. Look in the phone book. If you do not see a listing, write to Recovery, Inc., National Headquarters, 116 South Michigan, Chicago 60603, for information and guidance.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is kind and considerate and everyone thinks we are happily married. The truth is I am miserable.

For 14 years I've tried to tell myself that friends, movies, plays, concerts, clubs, all the things I thoroughly enjoy, are not important, that it's better to have a faithful husband and good children. Well, it won't work. I feel like the four walls are closing in one me. My husband never wants to go any place. He could stay home 365 nights a year. If he yelled—and argued I'd probably feel better. He just smiles and says, "You go, dear. I'm happy at home."

Our sex life is wonderful. We have no money problems. We both enjoy good health. When I tell him I'm going stir-crazy, he says, "It's just a mood, dear, you'll feel better tomorrow."

Tonight I said, "I'm going to write to Ann Landers." His reply was, "Go ahead. She has all the answers." So what's mine?—Unfulfilled

Dear Un: The problem is that you are home all day and when evening comes you want to get out. Your husband is out all day and when evening comes he wants to stay home. My advice is to do your thing during the day—the movies, plays, concert, etc. Accept the fact that you are not going to change him, so you'd better change yourself. He sounds too good to dump.

Dear T.O.: Your story sounds flaky. You didn't name your three Long Island high school students who want your opinion. A member of our class died last week. We went to the principal and asked if we could be excused to attend the funeral. The principal said we would have to get permission from the office of the Board of Education.

Last fall anyone who had a ticket was excused to go see the Chinese acrobats. What kind of a world is this, anyway?—Turned Off

Dear Turned: You didn't write to the principal, nor did you say whether you called the Board of Education. The only thing authentic was the postmark. I looked to see if perhaps it was from New Haven, but by golly it was from Long Island. I don't buy it, however.

Women in Civil Service

Robert Welch, provincial social development secretary, announced in legislature that his ministry plans to promote women civil servants to senior posts.

His program to promote the advancement and employment of women will apply to provincial civil service posts.

What's the situation for women holding senior civil service posts in provincial and federal agencies in Belleville? Were they promoted alongside men? Instead of men? Read on.

Rosemary Rooke and Norma Erinson are the only two women postal clerks among 28 at Belleville's Post Office.

"I do exactly the same as the men," says Mrs. Rooke.

But she adds, "I don't think all the women could do it. One of the dirtiest jobs, says Mrs. Rooke is handling the letters. "We dig the same jobs and receive equal benefits from the postal office except 'superannuations'.

"The men have more money taken from their cheques for their retirements than we do."

Mrs. Rooke is the secretary-treasurer of her union which is working on an agreement for equal super-annuation benefits for the women employees, she said.

Mrs. Rooke finds her fellow employees respect her as a woman.

Does she feel it is necessary for the government to purposely hire more women senior civil servants? Mrs. Rooke says if a woman is capable and likes the job, then she should be hired.

Mrs. Rooke and Mrs. Erinson are the first woman postal clerks in Belleville. They were hired six years ago.

* * *

It sounds ideal — 50 per cent of the 22 positions at Canada's Manpower Centre here are filled by women.

Under the male manager, there are three supervisors, one a woman; eight male counsellors, three female; and seven secretaries.

Mrs. Dorothy Brown holds a senior post. She's an administration supervisor.

Formerly provincial president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Brown says women's status should be improved. She says a program introduced in legislature recently by Robert Welch, social development secretary, to promote more women to senior service posts.

"If a position is open; and a woman applicant has better qualifications than a man, then she should be hired," said Mrs. Brown.

"It's against the law to discriminate against women. But it's difficult to enforce the legislation," she said.

"You can't be standing behind every applicant for a job to make sure they're not discriminated against.

In educational institutions, women hold senior posts as supervisory teachers and residential supervisors.

Wilhemina Huffman, supervisory teacher of the senior school at Ontario School for the Deaf says she has an advantage being a woman.

"I work them for all their worth," says Miss Huffman referring to 32 teachers that she supervises.

Curriculum subjects other than speech and languages are Miss Huffman's responsibilities.

Miss Huffman said she receives equal opportunities with males in her position.

Men aren't attracted to the "tax role" department at the Income Tax Office.

Mrs. Lois Patricia Van Tassel, Chief Tax Role Section, says all 22 employees on her staff are female.

"It's a tedious job," said Mrs. Van Tassel.

"Women handle this type of job for a longer period than men. It's also a very exacting job."

Girl assessors who have taken audit courses, have equal competitions with male applicants.

One reason, Mrs. Van Tassel said, women have fewer senior posts than men is few will try for it.

"It's the merits and qualifications that decide the job first," says Mrs. Van Tassel.

"All our posters for competitions are open to male or female."

Mrs. Van Tassel added that the federal government has practised what it's preached, for her post.

Stalking Spring With Asparagus

With a week of rainy days behind us — and likely more ahead — you can stalk spring with spring stalks. It's got to be spring if there's asparagus and rhubarb on the table.

Start with asparagus and move if from vegetable - of-the-day to salad or main dish of the day.

ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE

Steam or simmer in water slender stalks of asparagus until they are tender but slightly underdone.

Mix:

1 clove garlic
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. white pepper
1 tsp. oregano
½ tsp. dry mustard
2 tbsps. cider vinegar
½ cup olive or vegetable oil

Lay cooked asparagus in a shallow glass or stainless steel pan. Pour oil and vinegar mixture over asparagus. Cover tightly with foil and place in refrigerator to marinate for at least three hours. Baste occasionally. Serve chilled on a bed of lettuce as a salad either before or after a main course.

ASPARAGUS QUICHE

You'll need one 9" crust pastry, well chilled, asparagus tips about four inches long, cooked, and these ingredients:

4 eggs
1½ cups milk
¼ tsp. nutmeg
¼ tsp. white pepper
½ tsp. lemon juice
2 tbsps. finely minced onions

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In large bowl whisk eggs slightly (or mix with fork). Add remaining quiche ingredients.

Pour quiche mixture into chilled pie shell and place in oven. Immediately reduce heat to 375 degrees. Bake 15 min. Place asparagus tips on top of quiche in oven in circular design and bake an additional 20 to 25 min. Remove from oven and cool 10 min. or more before serving. Cut and serve. Serves four for supper. Good with cold sliced ham and a salad.

Homely homey rhubarb can make an appearance at Sunday's dinner table when dressed up with walnuts and currant jelly or it can top off Saturday night's supper as Rhubarb Crisp.

RHUBARB CRISP

For four generous servings, combine:

3 cups rhubarb cut in 1" slices
1 cup white sugar
3 tbsps. flour
Dash of lemon juice or lemon peel

Top with a mixture of equal parts flour, oatmeal, brown sugar. Add to taste nutmeg, cinnamon and a dash of salt. Cut in soft butter or margarine as for pie crust to make a crumbly mixture. Place over rhubarb in 8- or 9" square pan. Dot with butter. Bake at 375 degrees about 40 min. or until rhubarb tests done.

NUTTY RHUBARB PIE

1 crust pastry
Beaten egg mixed with 1 tsp. milk
1 tbsp. sugar mixed with ¼ tsp. cinnamon
¾ cup coarsely ground walnuts
1 cup sugar
3 cups rhubarb in 1" pieces
currant jelly

Line 9" pie pan with crust; chill well. Heat oven to 425 degrees. Roll pastry trimmings into a long strip ½" thick. Cut into thin strips for lattice top for pie. Brush lattice strips with egg mixture and dust with cinnamon sugar. Place nuts in bottom of chilled pie shell. Mix rhubarb, sugar and flour and place in pie crust. Make lattice top by criss-crossing pastry strips. Bake on low rack of oven about 45 to 50 min., testing rhubarb for tenderness. Remove from oven. While hot, brush top with melted currant jelly.

Jealousy in Marriages? Wives Defend Selves

Not long ago a man whom we signed "I. Marvel" raised question of wives and jealousy. It was his feeling that his took unreasonable exception to interest he showed, however brief, in any other woman's appearance or conversation. And, as he said, "To just hold a girl's hand for a moment too long, or exchange a caress . . . that's dynamite!"

It was our thought that perhaps too much could be made of small things. But we asked the ladies to defend themselves as well as the men.

Excerpts from a few of the responses follow:

Dear Doris: There are more subtle ways of showing admiration for the opposite sex than physical contact. The male, especially with the "moving hands" is common all over and I think most women find it offensive.

In our family the situation is opposite — husband over-jealous. To a certain degree everyone is jealous, but this man is making an ass of himself, not only making his wife feel like a fool. — Canadian Wife.

Dear Doris: I know my husband loves me and he knows I love him. But when a man "carries on" in public, it seems to me that he is telling all present that his wife's feelings are not too important to him, especially if she has told him that it bothers her.

Your letter touched a sore spot with me. In an otherwise happy relationship, I have asked my husband many time to at least give me equal time and make sure that others as well as me know that I am first in his affections. I have never stooped to flirting with other men to get even with him.

I think these flirtations even though they do not reach the point of unfaithfulness, may reveal a desire to do so. This is my opinion for Mr. Marvel. — Just Enduring It.

Dear Doris: After 50 years of so-called married bliss, one would think Mr. Marvel would have reached the age of more contentment in life, than "to be fulfil his masculine sex ego!

Would such a man like to see his wife do the same, with some other man? I should say not! While he thinks he is giving some woman the thrill of a lifetime, little does he know, 99 per cent of the time, women are completely repulsed by him and possibly only for the sake of his wife would a lady refrain from openly rebuffing him in no uncertain manner. — Mrs. Repulsed.

Dear Doris: Mr. Marvel speaking. I really have no problem.

The other day my wife and I were talking about yesterday. My older brother, who has been one of my best friends, too, was in love with Jenny about the same time I was. She chose me and he subsequently married too. Now the four of us are good friends. Well, I remarked to Jenny, "I have often thought you would have had a better life if you had married Ronnie."

You see, we share the tendency to be kind, considerate and like to do things for our wives. But Ronnie is reticent and concerned about what people will say. I don't give a hoot, tend to be unconventional, and likely talk too much — all characteristics which Jenny frowns upon.

One of the most delightful moments of my life came with her reply: "Heavens, no. I'm quite satisfied. How would I ever get along without being able to say 'Don't'do that!' . . . or to order you around?"

We have had such wonderfully happy and rewarding years together, but at times it does become a bit trying always experiencing "back seat driving" in life activities — but to know how she feels — and to experience such understanding! Life is good. — I. Marvel

What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris care of this newspaper is the first step towards solving your problem.

Huffman — Tummon

Mary Clara Tummon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Tummon, of Roslin, and Harry Ernest Huffman, of London, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carman Huffman, of Corbyville, were united in marriage at Trinity United Church May 5.

Dr. George Southall and Rev. E. Bigby officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a satin gown with a stand-up collar with lace flower appliques. A satin train hung from the waistline embellished with lace trim. She carried a white Bible with a white orchid and a sprig of white heather from Scotland.

Maid of honor Lynda Speedie wore a pink dotted Swiss dress with scoop neckline and carried long stemmed pink roses. Sister of the bride Katrina Tummon and sister of the bridegroom, Nancy Huffman, attended the bride. They wore ensembles similar to the maid of honor's in green and yellow and carried yellow roses. Elizabeth Southall, flower girl, was dressed in the same manner in white and carried a basket of daisies with a yellow rose.

Kenneth Mullen assisted the bridegroom. Ushers were bride's brother Paul Tummon and Thomas Corley.

Soloist Mrs. Kenneth Cranston was assisted by pianist Ann Hutchinson.

A reception was held at the LOOF Hall.

Following the wedding trip to points east, the couple will reside in London.

Bank Talks Women's Rights

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — As yet, only one Canadian bank has been willing to talk with a women's rights group about its women employees.

The Bank of Nova Scotia's chairman of the board, T. A. Boyles, and chief general manager, J. A. C. Bell, have met members of the Ontario Committee on the Status of Women to discuss the bank's practices in employing and promoting women.

Sandra Birkenmayer, a member of the status committee, said the officials would not agree to adopt specific goals, but did agree to consider the committee's recommendations in general terms.

"They've invited us back a year from now to review the situation."

The meeting, which the committee still hopes may be duplicated with other chartered banks, was the result of a campaign to improve the lot of women who work in banks.

Generally, the committee wants women given equal opportunity for promotion, for in-service training courses for advancement, and given a better image in the banks' publications.

The 1970 report of the royal commission on the status of women said about 56,000 women worked in the eight banks surveyed, two-thirds of their total employees. About 90 per cent of them earned less than $5,000 yearly. Only 29 were bank managers and only 709 were accountants in the 6,000 branches involved.

Mrs. Birkenmayer said there has been no substantial change since then.

In February, the status committee, with help from about 70 women, handed out brochures entitled How Far Can You Go as a Woman in Banking? in all but a few of Toronto's 600 branches of the major charter banks.

The meeting with Scotiabank officials was one result.

"We're working in three directions," Mrs. Birkenmayer said. "We are taking a look at federal laws with respect to discrimination. They're weak in certain areas, so we have had briefs in to the minister of labor, though we are telling other groups do most of the legal stuff.

"We're trying to get at the women themselves, their attitudes and at the executives, the banking policy.

"One of the biggest problems we're fighting is the attitudes of the women themselves. The executives keep saying the women don't care, they're not interested, and to a certain extent, that's true.

"But some women got in touch with us as a result of the brochure. We've had a few sessions with them as consciousness raising for them, and they're trying accurate information to the committee. It's useful both ways, but we're not sure yet where that will lead."

RCAF Women's Reunion

TORONTO (CP) — The first reunion in seven years of the RCAF Women's Division will be held June 1 to 3 at York University.

The last reunion was the 25th anniversary, held in 1968.

The RCAF (WD) was formed 32 years ago. Its 17,000 members enlisted to release men for active duty overseas.

Letters have been sent out to 4,000 former airwomen whose names the reunion committee has on file, plus women now serving in the Canadian Forces, Air Element.

Anyone who has not received a letter may get information from RCAF (WD) Reunion Committee, Box 712, Hamilton.

A Visit to the Police Station

Picton Constable George Wright has a rapt audience as he shows students from St. Gregory's Separate School the specialized equipment in one of the department's cruisers Tuesday. ## Welfare Case Said Mistreated In Citizens Bureau Protest

Belleville's Citizens Bureau has accused the Hastings County welfare department of mistreatment and abuse of a claimant and has asked for the suspension of the responsible field worker in a letter directed to cabinet minister Rene Brunelle, minister of community and social services.

The letter delivered by hand to Queen's Park this morning, asks for a complete investigation of the field workers of the welfare department and offers the minister access to confidential bureau files concerning individual cases to substantiate the charge.

The letter and related action by the bureau was precipitated yesterday when a claimant handled by the bureau ran into problems in the welfare office.

The individual, through illness, found himself out of a job last July and was forced to draw unemployment insurance benefits. When these benefits ran out, he went to the welfare offices in February to apply for extended assistance.

After receiving benefits from welfare, the claimant began having problems in finding a job with the assistance of the department staff.

The individual has undergone numerous operations since last July with his weight dwindling from 150 to 106. His wife, also in need of constant medication, weighs 68 pounds. She stands five feet six inches and he, five feet seven inches.

The welfare office secured job possibilities for him but on the advice and later orders of his doctor, the claimant was instructed to stay away from any heavy work. He is trained in the use of heavy construction equipment.

The claimant's wife came to the office of the welfare department and explained the employment problem. Welfare director Reginald Tucker suggested a maintenance job might be available in the county buildings.

The claimant returned to the office where he was interviewed by a field worker.

He was accompanied to the office by members of his family and an employee of the Citizens Bureau staff who later signed a statement which reads "(name) cried from distress when he came out of the welfare office" where he was to inquire about the maintenance job.

He was then taken to Belleville General Hospital emergency where stitches were replaced in his shoulder.

"I get four or five calls a week about this field worker," said Mr. Hockley, director of the bureau.

The worker in question refused comment on the situation but claimed, "they (letter be able to back it up or they'll be seeing my lawyer."

Mr. Tucker described the worker's position as the "hot seat" of the office and "you can't please all the people all the time".

Mr. Tucker said he was surprised that the statements were delivered to him as he could act on the contents and said the final work of hiring or firing the worker was in the hands of county clerk-administrator Carl Bateman. Mr. Bateman was not available for comment.

Canoe-building Works For Six Night Schoolers

TRENTON — Canoes are tippy vessels at the best of times in the hands of a novice, but even an experienced paddler has apprehensions when stepping into one he's made himself.

Ernie Trueman didn't set foot into his new 13-footer without some misgivings, but was willing to give it try.

The launch proved a success yesterday, despite a minor leak he says will be repaired with applications of more resin. After a few short manoeuvres, he pronounced his pride and joy "seaworthy".

Mr. Trueman is one of six adult night school students who have finished six month construction of six canoes at Trenton High School. Part of an experimental project with the Loyalist College Night School, the canoe-building venture has not only prompted officials to continue it, but expand as well.

Six canoes have made it to water this year. Nine will go the same way next year.

Mr. Trueman, manager of Trenton's Imperial Bank of Commerce, estimates the average cost at about $70, a third of the price of production models.

"I took it up as a kind of a retirement hobby," the middle-aged Carrying Place resident said after beaching his green cedar and fibreglass canoe.

He's so enthusiastic with the program that he wants to get more "older chaps in Trenton together and make a bunch of canoes".

With these on hand, he hopes any new canoe could be may be able to form will attract teenagers and provide not only a worthwhile sport but give them an idea of what goes into the construction of canoes. Most of the models available commercially these days are made of fibreglass or metal.

Gilmour Gets Year

School Closing Reversed

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Gilmour Public School, slated to close at the end of June, has been granted a one-year reprieve.

Hastings county board of education announced yesterday that the closing of the school will be delayed for a year.

The decision will not affect closing of other schools in the southern part of the county.

Closure of the school was announced earlier this year, when it was decided the 47 pupils from the two - room school would be bused to Coe Hill. Board chairman Mac Smith and several trustees and administrators rode the school bus to learn first-hand of the length of the route some children from Wesleminken Lake had to follow to school.

Transportation problems were given by the board as its reason for extending the life of Gilmour School.

"We will meet with the people of the area to see if the advantages of a bigger school at Coe Hill will outweight the disadvantages of long transportation," said director of education Eric Runacres.

Long bus rides for kindergarten to grade 3 pupils was the main factor influencing the decision to delay closure of the school, he indicated.

Circus Night In Belleville

Clowns, elephants, leopards, trapeze artists and a beautiful "princess" are the traditional stuff of the circus and they will all be there tonight, Garden Bros. Circus — billed as the "All New — 1973 Edition" — is that traditional.

To be held tonight at the Belleville Memorial Arena, Garden Bros. Circus features what is claimed to be the "smallest performing male baby elephant in North America." At three-feet tall and weighing in around 450 pounds it is also said he will "probably grow up to be one of the largest elephants in captivity."

The "beautiful princess" is Princess Eli. A leopard - skin clad blonde she performs with a cageful of leopards and a black panther. The panther has been kept away from the other cats after he attacked and killed two leopards at San Francisco's Cow Palace.

And there will be the aerialists, clowns and all the other fare of the circus world. Garden Bros. Circus travels in a large modern fleet of trucks and brings with them a herd of elephants, panther horses, a cageful of wild animals, trapeze artists, jugglers, wire walkers, flosts, bareback riders, the circus band and inevitable clowns.

P.E. County's Share $16,650

PICTON — Four Opportunities for Youth grants totalling $16,650 have been announced for Prince Edward County this summer.

One of the projects is the re-opening of the Regent Theatre that closed last winter. Young persons receiving the grant for this work expect to produce modern drama including children's dramatic readings and a children's play.

A shut-in service for elderly and disabled persons confined to their homes will receive a grant of $1,730 and a county crafts revival a grant of $3,975. This revival was begun last year at a small shop in Picton.

A survey of Prince Edward County resources will be conducted as a fourth project at a cost of $2,735.

An announcement from Ottawa concerning the OFY grants notes that participation from rural areas is increased this year.

Bramalea Workers Turn Offer Down

The latest offer made by Northern Electric Co. Ltd. to members of Local 313 of the United Electrical Workers at Bramalea has been rejected by a workers' vote. The local represents 1,830 production workers who walked off the job May 13, shutting the plant down.

Office employees at the Bramalea plant, members of United Auto Workers, struck May 7 — the same day that nearly 1,000 office and production workers left their jobs in Belleville.

Union officials told the UEW voting meeting that the company offer would have had the effect of weakening seniority, job postings and job security. Details of the offer were not available.

Orderly picketing is the situation described for plants at Bramalea, Belleville, London and Kingston. London and Kingston plants are now in their 12th day of strike.

Canadian Union of Communication Workers are in their ninth day of strike at Northern Electric Co. Ltd plants at Shawner St., Montreal North and Laurentian and Pare in Quebec, The Lachine, Quebec plant is in its eighth day of strike.

John M. Benet, company director of public relations, said that a car belonging to a supervisor of Northern Electric's Eastern Service Centre in Montreal was damaged last night.

"All the windows were broken by a steel ball, which was found in the interior of the car, metal pins were driven into the tires, foreign substance was put into the gas tank and the entire body was scratched," said Mr. Benet.

"The car had 90 miles on the odometer."

Mr. Benet said it was the second car belonging to a member of Northern Electric's management to have been damaged in Montreal during the past few days.

Tax Now Refunded On Liquor

The provincial government has reversed its position on refunding sales tax on unused liquor.

Effective May 1, the government legislated that tax would be collected in advance on liquor purchased in connection with a "special occasion" or banquet licences, where in the past organizers were asked to keep track of sales and pay tax only on the used liquor.

As of Friday night, following a telephone conversation from the Ottawa office of the eastern Ontario manager for the LCBO, Belleville outlets were refunding sales tax on returned bottles when seals were intact. Until Friday there was no such refund.

"We're back to normal," said a local LCBO manager though it makes more work keeping track of bottles going out and coming in.

Tax levied on liquor ranged from $1.50 for 40 ounces to 50 cents for a bottle of wine.

Driver Hurt

PICTON — A Prince Edward county man was taken to Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital with back injuries yesterday following a one - car collision on the Scoharie Road.

Injured when his car struck a pole was driver Donald Arthur Charlton, 42, of RR 2, Consecon. Damage to his vehicle was estimated by police at $1,500.

Peanut Champs

Sheila Morton, (left), 11, and Margot McIntosh, 11, made up Ralph Morton's peanut selling team. They sold $213 worth of peanuts in the annual Belleville Kiwanis Club's Peanut Day that this year netted nearly $1,000 for Kiwanis parks development projects. Presenting serving trays and coasters to the hot-footed young sales ladies is Belleville Kiwanis Club president, Clarence Fuzzen (right).

Dancer Selected By Ballet Master

TRENTON — The hopes and aspirations of any young ballet student have been realized by Shannon Fraser, 14-year-old daughter of Major W. G. Fraser, Carrying Place.

Shannon has been selected to train as a professional by one of the great masters, Boris Volkoff of Toronto, who trained and danced with the famed Bolshoi Ballet in Moscow.

Ballet master Volkoff formed the first Canadian ballet company, many of his former students now performing with Les Grande Ballets in Montreal. One of his most famous protegee is Melissa Hayden, ballerina with the New York City Ballet Company.

Shannon will continue as a student at the Rhoda Thornton School of Ballet here, travelling to and from Toronto for her lessons with Mr. Volkoff.

The young dancer is the third student of Mrs. Thornton's to go on to professional training. Her own daughter, now Mrs. Rosemary Hunter of Peterborough, received a scholarship to the National Ballet School in Toronto and Ruth Wright received a scholarship to the Montreal Ballet Company.

Shannon, a student at East Northumberland Secondary School in Brighton, will perform in the annual Rhoda School of Ballet recital to be held at the Trenton High School auditorium, Wednesday-June 13.

Horticultural Society Is Now Garden Club

An 84-year-old Belleville institution has yielded to the current trend toward brevity of language and changed its name. For Belleville Horticultural Society, now read Belleville Garden Club.

Established in 1884, the club has always been aimed at the amateur gardener. "However" says first vice-president A. K. Gardiner, "a majority of the members felt that the old name was so formal and professional sounding that it might be scaring away prospective new members."

Membership now stands at around 280, and is not restricted to the city. One of the newest members lives in Consecon and there are many in Trenton and Prince Edward County.

The annual fee is only $1.50 for a single member, $2.50 for families. For this, members can attend 10 monthly meetings featuring speakers, films and door prizes, and use the club's library of books and pamphlets.

Most important event of the year for the club is on June 30 — July 1 at Centennial Secondary School, when Rose Festival 73 and the African Violet Show will take place.

Development Road Plans Approved

City traffic commitee has approved roadway plans for the proposed Ontario Housing Corporation development east of the Belleville Plaza and immediately north of the Unemployment Insurance Commission office on East Dundas Street.

The development calls for construction of 40 housing units of a prize-winning design submitted to OHC by local architect Paul Wiegand. Also proposed is for future construction on the site purchased last year from Loyalist Developments, is an 84-unit senior citizen housing development.

Rezoning of the property was necessary to allow the development and when the application was referred to traffic committee for comment, the matter was tabled for further information on developer's roadway commitments.

Monday, the committee was told the original developer's agreement with the city still held, calling for the developer to construct the roadway between Bridge and Dundas Streets.

The development plan called for 18-foot-wide interval roadways leading off Loyalist drive but Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said he would prefer a 24-foot-width to allow for more manoeuvrability of vehicles, especially during the winter.

Yesterday, Mr. Wiegand said OHC would go to 20-foot roadways but suggested wider roadways would set into available greenspace and tend to control speeders.

The architect said each housing unit was provided with a 200 amp electrical panel therefore street parking would be limited. Circles would be provided at the end of the 100-foot-long internal roadways.

The traffic committee voiced no objection to the rezoning application providing 20-foot internal roadways were constructed and sidewalks called for in the developer's agreement were provided.

OMA Head Plans To Become Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — When Dr. Glenn Sawyer, 65, retires today as general secretary of the Ontario Medical Association (OMA) he may begin a new career—as a first-year law student.

Dr. Sawyer, an official of the OMA for the last 21 years, wrote entrance examinations two weeks ago for an Ontario law school because "I've always thought that when you retire it is better to change direction."

"You should have seen the others who wrote with me," he chuckled. "It was like kindergarten—little slips of girls and young fellows."

However, he added, "the MacKinnon report said law schools should accept mature students. Of course I'm not sure it was me he had in mind. He probably meant fellows 30 to 40."

The report was produced in March for the Law Society of Upper Canada by a committee headed by Toronto lawyer Bert J. MacKinnon.

Dr. Sawyer, a long-time member of the Medico-Legal Society of Toronto, said: "My main interest is in medical legislation. The medical profession is being encompassed by legislation and regulation."

"I thought if I was better able to understand law I might be helpful in that area."

He will learn of his success in the examinations in May, about the time he is making final preparations for the last OMA meeting he will attend as general secretary.

When he took the post in 1952 the OMA had 3,700 members, a staff of four or five, a budget of less than $50,000 and no offices of its own except rented quarters in the Ontario Hospital Association building.

Now it has 12,000 members, a staff of 40, a budget of more than $1.5 million, and a new brick building in downtown Toronto.

His 21-year term as an OMA executive is the longest time in the history of the 93-year-old association the post has been held by one person.

During his era the government medical care plan came into being, and an insurance plan which he believes was fine as long as it did not interfere with the right of a doctor to practise medicine the way he found best.

He said government and the public have "a useful role to play in stimulating the medical profession."

"If they don't provide that stimulation, we don't work as hard at bringing about necessary changes."

He said he approves the "stimulation" of North York Mayor Mel Lastman in getting doctors of North York General Hospital to look at a method of providing house calls.

Dr. Sawyer may not yet be through serving the medical profession. He has been nominated for the post of chairman of the board of the Canadian Medical Association (CMA).

He was a member of the committee which rewrote the CMA code of ethics and was one of the authors of the OMA's advertisement saying a plan for doctors.

Dr. Sawyer was born on a farm nine miles south of Mitchell, Ont., near Stratford, and graduated in medicine in 1936 from the University of Western Ontario in London.

He opened his first practice in Port Stanley, on Lake Erie south of London, and spent a year teaching anatomy at the London university where one of his students was Douglas Hocking, now dean of medicine at the university.

He set up general practice in 1941 in St. Thomas, south of London, and was lured to the OMA 11 years later.

Welfare Dentist Hopes To Extend Services

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Jack Cooper, a Toronto dentist who heads Ontario's only private denture clinic for welfare recipients, said Tuesday the service should be extended to include people in low-income brackets.

"I hope that very shortly our clinic will be able to look after pensioners and others who cannot afford the fee of a private practitioner," Dr. Cooper said in a report to be submitted to the provincial government outlining the clinic's first-year results.

Dental Social Services was set up a year ago with a $53,000 grant from the provincial health ministry. The money was used to purchase new equipment and renovate space above Dr. Cooper's office.

Dr. Cooper and four other dentists in the downtown area each spend about 15 hours a month filling dentures for patients referred to the clinic by Metropolitan Toronto's social welfare department.

Dr. Cooper said he will apply for another grant from the province to expand the clinic's laboratory facilities and hire another dental technician to make the false teeth.

He said this would allow Dental Social Services to offer old-age pensioners and low-income earners dentures at the same price—$125—that Metro now pays for an upper and lower plate for a welfare recipient.

Dresden's Wounds Still Show

DRESDEN, East Germany (AP) — Once one of the most beautiful cities in Europe, Dresden has partly recovered from its night of fire in the Second World War but still bears the scars of its wounds.

This "Florence of the Elbe River" bears the over-all effects of a lost war as perhaps no other city in either Germany. But Dresden again takes pride in itself. Its symbol has become the Zwinger, a restored residential fortress and palace museum of August the Strong, the king of Saxony and Poland who ordered its construction in 1710.

It houses a gallery of old masters, a museum of medieval weapons and armaments and a collection featuring the Meissen china developed by the Saxon royal court, the first porcelain made in Europe.

The Zwinger has an unrivalled place in the hearts of Dresden's 503,000 people. Its reconstruction by the end of 1964 was an emotional sign that the destruction of Feb. 13-14, 1945, was not complete and not forever. That bombing, by the British, remains controversial because Dresden was neither a war production nor military centre. People here still do not talk easily about that searing night.

The phosphorous fire bombs ate through everything they touched. They and detonation devices destroyed most of what had taken centuries to build. Much of the baroque elegance that Dresden was famous for simply disappeared in the holocaust.

Spring's first buds are appearing on willows growing wild in the ruins of the Frauenkirche, the Church of Our Lady. It will remain a memorial against war, much like the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church in West Berlin.

Nearby lare a resurrected statue of Martin Luther and a statue of the Goddess of Victory, dating from the victory at Vienna over invading Turks in 1683.

The largely-restored Brueh1 Terrace was one of the most beautiful promenades a n y where in Germany. It stretches along the E1 b e above the flats where many thousands of refugees from the path of the advancing Russian army were camped the winter night the bombers came. The refugees caught the brunt of the attack; no one is quite sure how many there were.

The Zwinger itself lies on the outer periphery of the old baroque city centre, just beyond an old guardhouse, the Saxon royal palace and the massive opera house.

The soldiers' barracks is again whole. The palace is a fire-blackened hulk, but it is said it will be rebuilt. The outer shell of the opera house survived the bombing but the inside must be restored. So far, Communist authorities have declined offers of West German money to spend Ka rebuilding.

Pig Problem

Iquitos, peru (AP) — Stray pigs are becoming an aviation hazard in this Amazon jungle city, local authorities said. Pigs wandering across the airport l a n d i n g strip already have caused two accidents.

Three Fugitives Are Hunted After Six Slain in Georgia

REYNOLDSVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Authorities pressed a search today for three escaped prisoners wanted for questioning in the slayings of six members of a rural family.

The convicts threatened earlier they would "kill any policeman who tries to stop us for any reason."

Police theorize that five male members of the Alday family were gunned down as they returned one by one from a corn field.

Later, the nude body of the wife of one of the victims was found in a field six miles away. Authorities said she had been raped and shot to death.

The victims were identified as Jerry, 35, Chester, 32, and Jimmy, 25; his brother Aubrey, 37; and Jerry's wife, Mary, 25.

"They were as good a folks as they come, and they didn't drink beer, wine or whisky," said Sheriff Jim White. "They were church-going and hard-working."

The five Alday men were found early Tuesday lying face down in a beer can-littered home trailer, each shot in the back of the head. Mary Alday's body was found several hours later. She had been shot in the back of the head and in a shoulder.

A car found near Mrs. Alday's body was traced to a Pennsylvania youth who officials feared was kidnapped by three convicts who escaped May 5 from a prison work farm in Wicomico County on Maryland's eastern shore.

Investigators said interviews with neighbors indicated that three men may have followed Mrs. Alday home Monday while her husband and the other Alday men were planting corn on their 325-acre farm.

Police said the men appeared to have been slain one by one as they went to Jerry Alday's mobile home to see why Ned Alday had not returned with a truck to the site of a bogged-down tractor.

Coroner Paul Mosely said Ned Alday was shot seven times—four times with a .22-calibre weapon and once with a bullet that has not been found.

Bud Alday, a brother, said he discovered the bodies after searching for the men when they did not return from the fields.

Police identified the escapees, described as armed and dangerous, as Carl Isaacs, 19; George Dungee, 35; and Wayne C. Coleman, 26, all of Baltimore, Md.

The car found near Mrs. Alday's body was traced to Richard Wayne Miller, 19, of McConnellsburg, Pa.

Chicken Feed Breeds Strife

Two NDP Regimes in Egg War

VANCOUVER (CP) — Experts no longer haggle over whether the chicken or the egg came first. The great Canadian egg war leaves no time for idle academic speculation.

The government of Manitoba feels the economic unity of the country is at stake in its latest skirmish with British Columbia.

In B.C. the New Democratic Party government insists it has the right to keep an orderly egg market, and the income of its egg farmers up, by keeping the cheaper Manitoba eggs out.

But Manitoba, also under an NDP government, says that since its farmers produce more eggs than Manitobans consume, they must export to survive.

The root of the B.C.-Manitoba egg fight is chicken feed.

Most B.C. farmers must purchase feed through a grain dealer who gets prairie grain through the Canadian Wheat Board, and the cost has jumped to $100 a ton from $74 two years ago.

The Manitoba farmer can buy his own feed from a grain farmer across the road or may even raise his own. The savings are substantial and the Manitoba farmers can charge less for their eggs.

Manitoba says that by barring Manitoba eggs B.C. is violating Section 121 of the British North America Act, which states: "All articles of the growth, produce or manufacture of any of the provinces shall . . . be admitted free into each of the other provinces."

B.C. counters with Section 95 of the same act which says that "in each province the legislature may make laws in relation to agriculture in the province."

A political settlement may come in Ottawa next week when delegates from all provincial egg boards meet, but few farmers will be betting on the chances for success.

The delegates will be discussing a national agency to control the Canadian egg industry. But that agency, already approved in an agreement signed by provincial representatives in 1972, was to have begun controlling egg production and pricing before the May 31 deadline B.C. controversy broke out. It still has not been formed.

B.C. got into egg regulating in 1967, when its 500 egg farmers said they were losing about $2 million a year.

A B.C. egg marketing board was set up with the power to force all producers to cut production, and it set a province-wide quota of about 13.5 million eggs a week.

Until this year the board made sure the price of B.C. eggs was competitive. The policy changed in March when the five board members, all chicken farmers elected for three-year terms, decided the market price of 50 cents a dozen for Grade A large wasn't enough for a farmer to make a decent living.

They persuaded Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, himself a former chicken farmer who went broke when his chickens got sick, that the price should be raised.

On March 10, with the approval of the government and the opposition parties, the board ignored the market and raised the price of eggs by seven cents a dozen to 57 cents for Grade A large.

The move invited competition and early last month Manitoba eggs started creeping into the eastern section of B.C. On April 14 and 16, the egg board seized 50,000 eggs from five Super-Value Stores in the Kootenays. Store officials said the Manitoba eggs cost them nine cents a dozen less than B.C. eggs and this saving was being passed on to the customers.

This week, Winnipeg eggman Bob Feldman brought another 11,340 eggs to Trail, B.C., but Ed Morgan, manager of the egg marketing board, said this shipment of Manitoba eggs wasn't worth seizing.

However, the egg board's manpower was kept "in reserve" in Abbotsford, ready to act if a large shipment went elsewhere in B.C., Mr. Morgan said Monday.

OMA Planning Joint Look With OHIP at Doctors' Pay

TORONTO (CP) — The first priority of the new Ontario Medical Association executive will be to set up a joint committee with government to look at ways of paying doctors and determining income levels, says the OMA's new president.

Dr. Larry Wilson of Kingston said Tuesday night the joint committee will be established Monday by the OMA's 350-member council would be "a major achievement."

At about the same time, Richard Potter, provincial health minister, was telling reporters that he was prepared to act "as quickly as possible" to establish a committee with the OMA.

Both proposals have come after two days of discussion both at the OMA meetings and at Queen's Park on doctors' incomes.

Much of the discussion had been prompted by announcements earlier this month to doctors by the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeon, the body which sets and policies medical standards. The College has said it will investigate the practices of all general practitioners receiving more than $1-20 a week from the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP).

Tuesday, the OMA council endorsed the college's action as a screening mechanism for detecting areas of practice requiring investigation of individual practice, out-going president Dr. R. Harnick told a news conference.

However, he said the council "vehemently opposes its use in arbitrarily controlling payments to doctors.

The college bulletin indicated that it would cut off payments at $1,228 if he found doctors attempting to see too many patients or do too many procedures. In effect, this would create a ceiling on GPs' incomes unless the doctor could prove he was providing a necessary service and not lowering his quality of care.

The college's formula is based on "units" of care, but is roughly equivalent to 60 visits to a doctor's office.

Dr. Harnick stressed that 90 per cent of all family practitioners make much less than the ceiling of $1,620 a week—which would give a yearly maximum of $77,760 before the doctor paid overhead expenses.

Overhead is generally estimated at about one-third for GPs, leaving a take-home maximum from OHIP of about $52,000.

Dr. E. J. Moran of Toronto, chairman of the OMA committee on medical economics, estimated Monday that most GPs probably earned about $25,000 to $40,000 a year.

During its meeting, OMA also had passed a recommendation condemning "medical moonlighting."

Dr. Harnick said the council strongly supported a doctor's right to charge any fee, even one higher than the OMA recommended fee schedule, if this had been agreed between the doctor and patient in advance. However, he said this could only be done if the patient also had access to another doctor who was charging the recommended fee.

In some small communities, it had been found that a group of doctors had a tendency to charge fees higher than those recommended. Dr. Harnick said. They were creating monopolies and forcing hardship on the patients of the area.

This also had happened in some specialist groups, such as anesthetists, he added.

Ontario Must Try Harder To Wipe Out Tourist Deficit

LONDON (CP) — The empty spaces of Canada may one day attract many more European travellers but at the moment more effort must be made if Ontario is to get a bigger slice of the British tourist market.

This was the consensus of British travel agents in a symposium Tuesday held as part of Premier William Davis's trade promotional visit.

Ontario officials estimated that Ontario travellers spend $136 million more in Britain than British travellers do in the province each year.

While many of the British agents agreed that Ontario must put on a greater promotional effort, one agent noted that British tourists travelling to the Continent are confronted with huge traffic jams.

"Canada's great advantage is space and soon people will realize it," he said.

Claude Bennett, Ontario minister of industry and tourism, outlined the province's aid for hotel construction and said this program is to be expanded to ensure that there are sufficient hotel beds for the anticipated increase in visitors.

Earlier in the day, Davis was the luncheon guest of the Corporation of London. In his address, he asked British investors not to be frightened away from Canada by "extreme and ultra-nationalistic" statements voiced in Canada's debate over foreign ownership.

Expensive Store

Leon Offman and two sons, including Allan (left) own Toronto's Art Shoppe where it's not unusual for a customer to pay $20,000 for a single purchase. The store opening in 1936 during the depression has succeeded in the expensive furnishing business. Now the Art Shoppe's annual volume is about $10 million. (CP Photo)

Top Students Meet For Science Program

FREDERICTON (CP) — Top-rated high school students from across Canada will gather here from June 30 to July 28 for the Youth Science Foundation's 1973 summer science program.

The session, to be known as Man and his Environment, will include formal lectures, seminars, discussion groups, field excursions, laboratory work and demonstrations.

Students selected will have a special aptitude for science and mathematics and are chosen on the basis of academic and leadership abilities.

Michael D. B. Burt, associate professor of biology at the University of New Brunswick here, is the director of the program and tempers the concept that academic ability alone is a prerequisite for candidacy to the program.

"The public might have the concept that we're attracting 'eggheads,' which is not necessarily true," he said. "These students are brilliant —extremely talented academically—but also have talents in other fields. Some might be surprised that a student is also a gifted musician."

Prof. Burt said he feels national science programs should create in participants a realistic attitude towards real-life problem-solving, without the flashing, bubbling and crackling displays of science fairs.

He acknowledged the educational advantages of these fairs but in the long run, he added, "I wonder if they're really worth it."

"You don't have to be particularly bright or talented to take part in science fairs," he said. "I've seen some very impressive displays which showed originality but I always find it difficult to determine how much work has been done by the student and how much has been done by the teacher."

Prof. Burt indicated that the summer science program would probably be better than a more formal university program.

"We're not trying to make them learn; we're trying to make them aware of the various sciences and how they relate to each other in arriving at solutions to modern-day problems."

He said organizers hope the program will help students decide on the field they choose for further study, what national aim they want to contribute to or if they want to work at the national or international levels.

The first week of the course deals with the marine environment with visits to the Huntsman Marine Laboratory at St. Andrews, N.B. Research into fresh water will be carried out at UNB where water analysis will be covered with the help of the chemistry department.

The students will shift their emphasis to the land in the third week to study in quality and land use alternatives.

The final week has been saved for a more theoretical look at mathematics using models and computers.

Instructors at the sessions will include university professors and research scientists from government and industry who will discuss recent discoveries in astronomy, biochemistry, biology, chemistry, geology, mathematics, physics, psychology and sociology.

The $25,000 cost of the program will be shared by the foundation, Environment Canada and various corporations and individuals.

Prof. Burt said he considers one of the most important aspects to be the meeting of young minds.

High school students will be coming together from all parts of Canada.

"It's proof for ... from Ontario to meet another top studen... sa... from Newfoundland, so that he can see that the other person is every bit as good as he is—not just some hick from the sticks."

BEYOND FREEDOM AND DIGNITY — Skinner, B. F.

B. F. Skinner, author of Walden Two and regarded by many as the most influential and controversial psychologist living today, insists that the frightening problems we face in the world today can only be solved by dealing more effectively with human behavior. He tells why instead of promoting freedom and dignity as personal attributes, we should direct our attention to the physical and social environments we live in.

I NEVER HAD IT MADE — Jackie Robinson

Jackie Robinson, America's most celebrated baseball hero was the first black man with enough talent and opportunity to break through into the white world of professional sports. The years of brilliant victories which it took to win the respect and admiration of the sports world are all here.

WHAT'S RIGHT WITH US PARENTS — Grace N. Fletcher

These stories of successful American family life are More By-true, taken from interviews made while traveling across the United States. Concerned parents and young people who long for the kind of communication that the concept of a "rounded family" implies, will find that this is a book that looks at many issues squarely, and yet shows tremendous faith in human potential.

THE SEARCH FOR MICHAEL ROCKEFELLER — Mitchell Machlin

In November 1961 Michael Rockefeller vanished in the treacherous waters off New Guinea when his catamaran overturned in a storm. Mitchell Machlin set off on a search which took him around the world and fitted together the pieces of one of the most astonishing mysteries since the disappearance of Amelia Earhart. Set against the background of primitive New Guinea with its fierce warrior tribes, cannibalism, and bizarre tribal customs, this is fascinating reading.

STILL A NICOL — Eric Nicol

This is the largest and funniest collection of Eric Nicols wry wit. In whatever he chooses to pick upon or apart, he is always in top form. Whatever your ailment, the cure is always a large dose of Eric's special brand of humor.

HOSTAGE IN PEKING — Anthony Grey

Anthony Grey, a Reuters correspondent, was imprisoned by the Chinese Communist regime in March 1967. While confined, he managed to keep secret diaries in shorthand and these are the nucleus of this book. Grey has tried to look at his experiences objectively, against the historical and political background that led to his arrest and his often brutalizing treatment.

A MAN ALONE — Anthony Grey

While a hostage in Peking, the author was indeed a man alone. These short stories are imagination, aided Grey to survive, and to consider universal questions with an awareness not felt by the busy and preoccupied.

THE MONEY CROWD — Dana L. Thomas

Mr. Thomas, associate editor of Barron's National Business and Financial Weekly, delves into the world of international high finance. He introduces the reader to the very rich — Gianni Agnelli, the boss of Fiat, the Krupp Family of West Germany, the Oppenheimers of South Africa who have a worldwide monopoly of the diamond industry. He also tells how the money makers protect themselves in a changing world and describes the current monetary crisis. Whether he is analyzing global empires like Sony, the security of Swiss bank accounts or the pervasive sorcery of gold, Mr. Thomas writes with the sure touch of an insider.

A FAMILY WRIT LARGE — Cedric W. Sowby

Dr. Cedric Sowby is one of the world's great educators, who has spent 32 years as headmaster at St. Columba's College in Ireland and Upper Canada College in Toronto. Important as are Dr. Sowby's ideas on private schools, his book is vastly entertaining as he recalls with quiet good humor some of the student antics and activities. Here is the autobiography of a great man whose influence and example have had an immeasurable effect on his students.

Year of the Cicada

With the skin of the nymph split up the back, the adult cicada, while with red eyes, emerges grasping the old skin with its legs and pulling its body out of the shell. The 17-year cicada, popularly but wrongly referred to as a "locust" will emerge late in May or early June this year in Northern Illinois. They will emerge from the ground where they have spent 16 years attached to tree roots. (AP Photo)

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

QUESTION: Having recently moved here from the Western U.S., our friends tell us, in planning our vacation trip, to consider the Maritime Provinces. Can you provide any information about them?

ANSWER: New Brunswick, with an area of 27,985 square miles, borders on the provinces of Quebec and Nova Scotia and has 600 miles of seacoast. Canada's "Picture Province" offers a wide variety of vacation pleasures. You can explore historic cities many of them founded by United Empire Loyalists, quiet towns and seaside villages and Acadian rural communities.

There are some 3,800 miles of surfaced highways, excellent secondary roads along woodland byways, and a fleet of car ferries — all of them free — which ply the rivers. Here you will discover unique natural phenomena — the famed Magnetic Hill near Moncton, where your car appears to coast uphill; the Fundy Tides, highest in the world, which have carved spectacular oddities in the sandstone cliffs; the Reversing Falls at the head of Saint John Harbor, where for half of each day the water runs uphill; the awesome Tidal Bore, a wall of water which surges past Moncton twice each day. Reminders of the past are the more than 100-covered bridges in New Brunswick, with the longest in the world spanning the Saint John River at Hartland. You will enjoy shopping for souvenirs — had wrought silver, pottery, wood carvings and renowned hand - woven tweeds.

This province by the sea, criss-crossed by navigable rivers and lakes, is a boating paradise — you can launch your boat practically anywhere. And everywhere you'll find friendly hospitality.

Prince Edward Island, Canada's smallest province, has an average width of 10 to 33 miles, lies in the Gulf of St. Lawrence off the coasts of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. In this province, known as the "Garden of the Gulf", the pace of life is leisurely. Charlottetown, the provincial capital with a population of 18,500 is the largest city. In 1864 one of the two conferences that laid the groundwork for the union in 1867 of four British North American colonies to form one nation, Canada, was held in Charlottetown's Province House.

The province is noted for its long stretches of lovely sand beaches, all readily accessible by a network of paved highways and byways. Prince Edward Island National Park consists of 25 miles of pink sand beaches backed by sandstone cliffs and green headlands. Here you can swim, camp, dig your own clams and golf near Green Gables, the romantic farmhouse made famous by Island author Lucy Maud Montgomery in Anne of Green Gables. Prince Edward Island offers endless opportunities for safe family boating. You can cruise for a whole day exploring the sandy bays and picture - postcard towns and villages or launch your boat on one of the many salmon and trout rivers that cut deeply inland. The whole family will enjoy a relaxing vacation in this province, where days are warm, nights cool and the Islanders always have time for a smile and a chat.

Nova Scotia, consisting of a peninsula and the island of Cape Breton, is a land of charming contrast. While the cities are small (largest is Halifax population 203,000), they offer cosmopolitan excitement; theatres, art galleries, modern accommodation. Yet not far from the rumble of traffic are "out of the way" places—quiet beaches and fishing coves and streams; quaint villages with intriguing shops; historic buildings; camp grounds by the ocean.

In Nova Scotia you are never more than 35 miles from the sea and here you can enjoy golden beaches, fish around the coast and explore coves and hamlets where tales of buried treasure are everyday conversation. Nova Scotia is separated from Cape Breton Island by the Strait of Canso. The Canso Causeway forms a road and rail link between the two and leads to the soaring magnificence of the Cabot Trail, one of the most scenic marine drives in North America.

From the moment when a kilted Highlander pipes you over the border from New Brunswick, or off the car ferry at Yarmouth, you will find the Scottish traditions strong in this "Ocean Playground" where the summer calendar is crowded with Highland events. And everywhere you go, you will be welcomed perhaps with the traditional Gaelic "Cad Mile Failte" — a hundredfold Canadian province, red thousand welcomes.

Newfoundland consists of an island of Newfoundland and the territory of Labrador on the mainland.

Discovered by the Vikings more than 1,000 years ago, Newfoundland became Canada's youngest province in 1949. With an area of approximately 152,000 square miles, much of it virgin territory covered with thousands of lakes and streams and evergreen forests, it is a sportsman's dream. You can fish in the sea or inland waters, or hunt caribou, moose and bear from well-equipped camps, many of them "fly-in", where guides are available.

Newfoundland and Labrador are reached by air and sea and the fully-paved Trans-Canada Highway stretches across the island to St. John's, the capital, one of the oldest cities in North America. For a cruise with a difference, you can take a steamer from Newfoundland and travel along the coast of Labrador, weaving through mazes of islands, dodging the occasional iceberg, and calling at remote Eskimo villages. Throughout the province whimsical names catch the eye — Snakes Bight, Witless Bay, Fostrap, Heart's Delight — captivating little villages, unchanged with the passing of time. Camping and picnic parks provide low-budget accommodation and endless panoramas of marine landscape delight artist and photographer.

Flanked by Saints' Rick Culkin (73) and Jim Hanna (14), Quinte goaltender Steve Hale puts up his stick a second too late to stop Gabe Krekk's second goal of the game for the Centennial Chargers. The Chargers defeated the Saints 4-1 in Quinte's final game of the Bay of Quinte field lacrosse season.

Ricketts Trading Troubles For Traps

By AL ZABAS
(Ntath of Series)

Andy Ricketts will be shooting at smaller targets on the course this summer months and will find it somewhat restful after his winter season with the Belleville Bobcats.

The right-winger has traded in his hockey stick for a golfer's bag and clubs now that he's less mobile because of a recent back operation.

Since he must wear a brace for one to two months, Ricketts quipped, "I'll be playing golf with Arnold Palmer and the other pro golfers since I'm best for more strenuous summer sports."

Ricketts said last during his last outing on the fairways, he "netted" a 66, but when pressed admitted he then went on to the back nine.

Before doffing his skates for golf cleats, Ricketts played 18 regular season games with the Cats, scored double digits for a 16 point total, and totalled eight pucks and three assists in the playoff series.

But he had his problems with injuries.

In one of the first games with the Cats after his return from the Welland Sabres of the Tier Two Southern Ontario Junior A League, Oshawa's Vic Siren knocked the right winger for a loop.

"I must have gone at least 15 feet in the air before I came down flat on my back," said the 17 - year - old Belleville student, "I guess it all started from that.

"The doctor said that I slipped a disc and it was pushing against a nerve leading to the right leg. Because of that, when I wanted to turn on my right foot, my right ankle collapsed from under me."

ANDY RICKETTS
. . . in for rest

With a knee injury and a sprained ankle added to his back trouble, Ricketts said that he got "into the dumps with my play." Having his bodily injuries to worry over, Ricketts quoted his doctor as saying that he would be injury prone until his back was back straightened again. "The doctor said that I wouldn't want to go into the corners and risk further pain.

"I was getting so frustrated that I wondered what the hell I was doing out there on the ice."

After missing about a month of hockey during the regular season in what he called the first year he'd been "really hurt with injuries," Ricketts plans to don his skates again in better shape for the Cats upcoming season.

Minor Soccer Lacks Coaches

The Belleville Minor Soccer Association is by no means suffering from a lack of soccer players with 376 registered for the upcoming season kickoff. What it lacks is coaches.

"At the present time, we are lacking at least 13 coaches," said Cliff Dell, BMSA president, "though we are hoping to have two coaches per team.

"We have sent letters to last year's coaches, but the response has been slow to come in. But on a one to one basis, the response is much better.

"Perhaps our communication hasn't been the best, but I know that there is a pool of coaches in Belleville if we can only tap it."

With 13 of the 24 teams looking coaches, some "kind souls" who are refereeing minor soccer have also been willing to coach teams.

Should individuals be interested in coaching minor soccer this season, Dell indicated that he could be contacted either at his home (962-7167) or through the Recreation Centre.

Chargers Clip Saints

The Centennial Chargers, not satisfied with a single insurance goal, added insult to injury as Chris Rutledge scored against the Quinte Saints with 16 seconds remaining in their Bay of Quinte field lacrosse contest.

The Saints went down to a 4-1 defeat in their final game of the short, but by no means sweet, high school lacrosse season. Quinte Secondary finished their eight game season with 2-5-1 won - loss - tie record to earn a third place tie with Centennial.

The Chargers have a slim chance to pull out of third place when they come up against BCI tomorrow. The Collegians, however, have a record that is the poorer team in this, the first season of field lacrosse during the current interest in the sport in the high schools.

Accounting for their poor showing against the other four schools, coach Wally Hannah said, "we're as good as any other team, but we've had a bit of a problem with practices.

"It was difficult for me to get out," said the Saints' coach, "everytime there was a practice, I seemed to have a meeting, or it would rain. That's sour grapes though.

"Generally speaking, our players were a little lighter than those on other teams. I'm not using that as an excuse. You have to give full credit to the other teams for being better prepared."

Hannah may not have been too proud of the Saints performance as he said after the game, but Centennial goaltender Allan Tebworth was "downright excellent with their play".

It only had about six shots on my net throughout the game," said the six foot 215 pound netminder, "I had nothing to do."

Rick Culkin scored the only Saints' goal in the second quarter of play to even the score at 1-1 after Doug Mash's first quarter tally. Gabe Krekk provided Centennial with his second goal of the game in the third frame to assure the Chargers of the lead.

Record Crowd Sees Swords Win

BUFFALO (AP) — Cincinnati Swords struck for three second-period goals and added two more in the third Tuesday night to defeat the defending champion Nova Scotia Voyageurs 5-1 in the American Hockey League Calder Cup playoffs.

The Swords deprived of playing in Cincinnati because of another commitment for their arena, won the best-of-seven series 4-1.

Playing in Memorial Auditorium, home of their parent Buffalo Sabres of the National Hockey League, the Swords gave up a first-period goal to the Voyageurs at 3:33 as Yvon Lambert scored from 15 feet out on a power play.

In the second period, Randy Wyrzuh, evened the count at 1-1 and was followed in the scoring by Joe Robertson at 12:12 and John Gould at 14:51.

While goalie Rocky Farr was keeping the Voyageurs in check, Cincinnati continued its scoring in the final period. Rick Dudley slapped in a 20-footer at 7:36 and Wyrzuh bit for his second goal at 13:16, skating nearly the length of the rink after taking a pass from Ray McKay.

Cincinnati's AHL championship, won in the team's second year, was witnessed by a record AHL crowd of 15,919.

Potvin and Lysiak Are Happy With Teams

MONTREAL (CP) — Denis Potvin and Tom Lysiak, the one-two picks in this year's National Hockey League draft of amateur players, are happy to have been chosen by expansion teams.

But Andre Savard, a high scoring centre in the Quebec Major Junior A Hockey League did not appear enthused Tuesday over his selection by Boston Bruins in the draft proceedings, which saw 108 players selected in a marathon five-hour show.

"I'm certainly happy I'm with the Islanders," said Potvin, a graduate of Ottawa 67s. "I believe I can help the club. I wish, I hope people, don't compare me with Bobby Orr. I have my own style and he has his.

"I'm very happy to be playing with my brother Jean. I think pairing up with my brother in New York will give me confidence."

Potvin, who stands six feet and weighs 200 pounds, as an Ontario Hockey association rookie of the year, a defensive defenceman scored 36 goals and 88 assists for a total of 233 minutes in penalties.

He said he had heard from several World Hockey Association teams but he was "disappointed" with the WHA offers" and wants to play in the NHL.

Lysiak, top scoring sensation in the Western Canada Hockey League with 58 goals and 96 assists, said he was happy to be going to the Atlanta Flames. He signed a multi-year contract with the flames Tuesday.

Savard, whom everyone had felt would be going to Montreal Canadiens, wound up with Boston Bruins as the No. 6 selection in the draft.

"I wasn't disappointed to be picked by Boston," Savard said, but added that he would wait until the WHA draft was over at the end of this week before he decided on his future pro hockey career.

There is a good chance Savard will be picked by Quebec Les Nordiques in the WHA selections and thus may play his pro hockey in the city where he starred as a junior.

Vancouver Canucks grabbed forward Dennis Ververgaert as their first pick in the first round. Later in the opening round, they took Bob Bailey, the six foot, five inch defenceman who starred for Toronto Marlboros this season.

Bailey was picked seventh in the draft, a choice that originally belonged to Minnesota North Stars, who traded it away to Montreal a couple of years ago. Montreal decided to give the choice to the Canucks in exchange for Vancouver's top draft pick next season.

It was one of several deals Sam Pollock, the Canadiens' general manager made during the day. Going into today's session, he owned eight of the top 22 picks, but only made three selections, dealing the others away. Montreal's first pick was left winger Bob Gainey of Peterborough Petes, the eighth over-all.

Pollock had the fifth choice in the draft — he got that from St. Louis, who acquired goaltender John Davidson, a New York Rangers' who played this season for Calgary Centennials.

"We're very enthusiastic about getting Davidson," said Chuck Catto, recently appointed general manager of the Blues.

"The club felt we could strengthen our goaltending position. He's got a good glove hand. He works his pads and stick well and he likes to mix guys out of his crease. He needs a bit of work on cutting down his angles."

Flyers And Leafs In Trade

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers and Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League announced a trade Tuesday which gives the Flyers the right to sign goaltender Bernie Parent.

The deal saw Toronto acquire the Flyers' first-round draft choice pick in Tuesday's amateur selections in exchange for the Leafs second-round pick and the negotiation rights to Parent.

Should the Flyers reach contractual agreement with Parent, the Leafs and Flyers will effect future negotiations to complete the deal.

Parent, 26, an original Flyers, was traded to Toronto in January, 1971. He played 19½ seasons with the Leafs before jumping to Philadelphia Blazers of the World Hockey Association this season.

Gary Davidson Reviews WHA's First Year

TORONTO (CP) — Gary Davidson, president of the World Hockey Association, isn't proposing any toasts to the National Hockey League. It claims that much of the WHA's first-year success was due to the attitude of the rival established league.

Davidson a retired Tuesday night to prepare for a WHA three-day annual meeting which begins today with a review of the first year, league expansion, television contracts and the league draft among the items for discussion.

Asked for his own review of the first year and whether the new league might have done anything differently, Davidson said the WHA might have been more selective about where it placed its franchises.

Asked if, at any time, the league founders thought they should have spent another year preparing the groundwork before taking to the ice, Davidson said:

"No. If we had waited another year we would never have got started.

"We got going mainly because the attitude of the NHL was one of arrogance. They didn't treat us seriously and we were able to take advantage of that.

"If we had waited another year, the same atmosphere might not have prevailed."

The 39-year-old California lawyer, who also founded the American Basketball Association referring mainly to the WHA's ability to sign more than 50 players from NHL rosters last year plus more than 100 from minor league NHL affiliates.

The WHA raids last year became despite the fact that the expansion league made known the names of players each of its clubs had "drafted" and were seeking to sign from NHL rosters.

This year, however, the WHA's draft of professional players will be held behind closed doors Thursday to prevent the NHL teams from finding out which of their players the WHA is after.

The third day of meetings will be taken up with the draft of over-age amateurs.

The WHA completed its first season with teams in Chicago, New York, Quebec, Ottawa, Philadelphia, Edmonton, Minnesota, Los Angeles, Houston, Cleveland, Winnipeg and New England.

Pollock "Banks" Choices

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Pollock, general manager of Montreal Canadiens, arrived early for Tuesday's draft of amateur players by the 16 National Hockey League clubs—and he stayed late.

And it was obvious to all present by the time the professional teams had chosen a record 168 amateurs during a dragged-out session, that Pollock had done his homework—as usual.

Of all the NHL teams, Pollock's Canadiens—this year's Stanley Cup winners—must be the deepest in talent. In addition to some surplus bodies, the Montreal team has a Calder Trophy finalist in Nova Scotia Voyageurs of the American Hockey League.

Therefore Pollock was not in any immediate need of talent as he headed into the amateur draft controlling seven of the first 22 selections. These selections had been picked up over the years by accepting future draft choices from less fortunate teams in return for an immediate body to fill spots in their shaky rosters.

Pollock said before the meeting he had mapped out three first-round and four second-round picks that belonged to him.

After New York Islanders had chosen Denis Potvin, a defenceman from Ottawa 67s of the Ontario Hockey Association's Junior A Series, in the initial transaction, the Montreal general manager swung into action.

California Golden Seals were listed to pick after the hapless Islanders. But the Seals, in a previous deal, had sub-let that one to Pollock.

Montreal promptly dealt its chance to grab forward Tom Lysiak of Medicine Hat Tigers or Andre Savard of Quecec Remparts, to the talent-hungry Atlanta Flames. The Flames picked Lysiak.

In return, Pollock reputedly picked up Atlanta's first pick in the amateur draft for the next two seasons.

Atlanta, choosing fifth in the first of 13 rounds draft ins section to Montreal, but Pollock promptly gave it to St. Louis Blues.

Richardson, Durocher Are Fed Up With Umps

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Phil Niekro's five-hit pitching wasn't what bothered Houston Astros general manager Spec Richardson and manager Leo Durocher.

Nor was it Dusty Baker's three-run homer, which provided the batting support for Atlanta Braves' 4-1 National League baseball victory over the Astros Tuesday night.

It was the umpiring.

"I'm fed up with them," said Richardson. "I'm tired of my ball club being beaten . . . by umpires."

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago Cubs beat New York Mets 4-3, Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Montreal Expos 8-5 in 11 innings, St. Louis Cardinals defeated Philadelphia Phillies 8-4, Cincinnati Reds beat Los Angeles Dodgers 4-1 and San Francisco Giants edged San Diego Padres 4-3.

The play that irked Richardson, Durocher and the Astros came in the ninth inning. With one out and Atlanta ahead 3-1, Baker singled and Mike Lum walked.

Dave Johnson then hit a ball that looked like a double-play grounder, but second base umpire Bruce Froemming called that second baseman Tommy Helms did not touch the bag.

First baseman Lee May, thinking the double play had ended the game, flipped the ball to first base umpire Paul Pryor, and Baker scampered home with the Braves' fourth run.

Durocher then announced he was playing the game under protest, claiming Pryor did not let the Astros make a play on Baker at the plate.

"Pryor had the ball in his hands," Durocher said. "As soon as he saw the man (Baker) running home and the signal by Froemming, he threw the ball to the ground.

"If May has the ball he throws the man out. But there's no way you can throw a man out if you do not have the ball. And that's why we protested."

Second baseman Glenn Beckert's sparkling fielding play in the ninth saved the Cubs' victory.

With Chicago ahead 4-2, the Mets got one run in the ninth on singles by Cleon Jones, Rusty Staub and Ed Kranepool. That put runners on first and second with one out.

Duffy Dyer lifted a fly ball to left, but it kept drifting and Billy Williams finally dropped it, loading the bases.

Jim Hickman slapped a grounder up the middle against Ken Kravec in the infield, but Beckert darted to his left, gloved the ball and threw home, barely nailing the sliding Kranepool. John Mainz then grounded out to end the game.

Montreal manager Gene Mauch tried a five-man infield-taking out his centre fielder and substituting a second shortstop, Tim Foli—but Pittsburgh's Dave Cash responded by lining a one-out, bases-loaded single over third baseman Bosco Lahoy's head to drive home the winning run in the 11th inning.

Willie Mays Has Problems

NEW YORK (AP) — Willie Mays said Tuesday this is definitely his last year of playing baseball but added that he would not make a decision about retirement until the day period on the disabled list is over.

"I don't intend to go out and embarrass myself and my team by trying to play on my 20-year record," said the 42-year-old New York Mets' outfielder.

"I will sit out the two weeks while my shoulder is being treated, then I will come back and see if I am able to play baseball again."

"If I can't swing, if I can't throw and if I can't hit, I will call it quits. If I find that I can still be of some value to the team, I will stay on.

"But I do feel that this is my last year as a player. It is all up and down struggle for me, but a lot. The game is not that much fun but I like baseball. I have a 18-year contract with the Mets and I plan to stay in the game for several years in some capacity."

Mays has a $165,000 a year contract with the National League baseball team as long as he plays and is assured $50,000 a year if he choose to remain in another capacity after his retirement.

He was placed on the disabled list Sunday and kept home from the Mets' current road trip after developing tendinitis in his right shoulder.

"This is an old ailment. I have had it since I was with San Francisco—it first started bothering about three years ago.

Reminded that he was hitting only .108 and had had only four hits in four weeks, Willie said:

"I haven't played all that many games . . . but you don't see many young guys tearing up the ball either."

Redskins Trade Five For Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers have announced they have traded safety Ken Houston to Washington Redskins for five players.

The five coming from Washington in the deal between the two National Football League clubs are offensive tackle Jim Snowden, tight end Mac Alston, defensive end Mike Fanucci, safety Jeff Severson, and wide receiver Clifton McNeil.

Houston, 29, a five-year veteran, has been a starter for the Oilers since his rookie season in 1967.

Foreman Bout Cancelled

TORONTO (CP) — The scheduled boxing exhibition by former heavyweight champion George Foreman at Maple Leaf Gardens May 24 has been cancelled by Merv McKenzie, Ontario athletics commissioner.

McKenzie said the exhibition was cancelled because the promoters did not deposit the money in escrow pursuant to taxes and officials' salaries for the program.

No-hitter for Ryan Not Greatest Thrill

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Nolan Ryan pitched the American League's second no-hitter of the baseball season Tuesday night as California Angels defeated Kansas City Royals 3-0.

It was the first no-hitter for the 26-year-old right-hander who struck out 12 Royals batters.

Asked if he thought it was his most thrilling moment in baseball, Ryan said:

"Coming into a World Series game was a greater thrill," Ryan insisted. "That was it!"

That was when he was a member of New York Mets in 1969, when he pitched 2 1-3 innings of scoreless, three-strikeout relief to preserve a victory over Baltimore.

In Tuesday night's other American League games, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Cleveland Indians 2-1 in 10 innings, Minnesota Twins beat Texas Rangers 9-5 and Chicago White Sox edged Oakland A's 6-5 in 12 innings. The Baltimore at Boston and Detroit-at-New York Yankees games were rained out.

In his last start last Friday, Ryan lasted a scant one-third of an inning against the White Sox, who drove him from the mound with a five-run, four-hit barrage.

"I think that shelling helped me been down," said Ryan, last year's major league strikeout leader with 329 who raised his major league-leading total to 82 with his dozen against the Royals—the 39th time in his career he's fanned 10 or more in a game.

"Something like that," he said of the White Sox' shellacking, "makes you wake up and bear down."

And bear down he did, fanning the side in the first inning in which he gave up one of his three walks. Inning after inning went by. By the seventh, it would seem, the 12,305 Kansas City fans would be in an uproar. After all, they knew what no-hitters were all about. Their own Steve Busby had thrown one at Detroit less than three weeks ago.

In the ninth inning, Ryan disposed of Fred Patek on a pop foul off first base, then fanned Steve Howley. That left it up to Amos Otis. The Kansas City slugger came within a few feet of destroying Ryan's efforts.

He slammed a shot out toward the right field fence and Ken Berry took off after it. Berry had taken over for Bob Oliver in the seventh inning as defensive replacement after Oliver had hit a home run and a single to knock in two of the Angels' runs.

The ball and Berry arrived at the wall almost simultaneously, but Berry snared it with his back about a foot from the fence and Ryan had his name in the record book.

"I was more concerned about the ball hitting the wall than going over it," he said.

"I knew I had it going from the fifth inning on, but I didn't worry about it until the eighth. From then on, I wasn't sure I could make them hit my good stuff, make them hit the fastball. My curve isn't overpowering and my fastball doesn't really move.

"Generally, I go through the lineup once or twice, then the hitters sit back and wait for the curve. This time, I think I got better as the game went on."

In Milwaukee, the game went on until Dave May jumped on a Brent Strom pitch with one out in the 10th inning and hit his 10th home run of the season.

Bert Blyleven gave Texas just one hit through the last seven innings and Harmon Killebrew hit his second homer of the season to break a 5-5 tie in the seventh and pave the way to the Twins' triumph.

Pollock Wants Tour Organized

MONTREAL (CP) — Sam Pollock, general manager of the Montreal Canadiens, is aware National Hockey League officials will sit down today with officials of the Soviet Union's Ice Hockey Federation to discuss plans for a series of exhibition games next winter. But he says Canadiens will not be part of any exhibition tour.

"As things stand right now there will not be any game at the Forum," Pollock said in an interview. "My understanding is that there will be eight games played by two Russian teams and with the possible exception of Vancouver, all of them will be played in U.S. rinks.

"I don't want anyone to think I'm against the games with the Russians because I think international hockey is the future and the direction we are working towards, but I want to see it on a more organized basis.

"We got away from playing exhibition games in this league some time ago and I don't want to go back to it. You throw a game like this into the schedule in November and December and what if it comes before a big game with Boston or somebody?

"A game like this has to affect the concentration of the players. I think with a 78-game schedule, they've got enough on their minds as it is."

Kip Keino Has Disappeared

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Where is Kip Keino?

The International Track Association (ITA) doesn't know, and it is afraid that the Kenyan distance runner, one of the mainstays in this, its first year of pro track operations, may be ill, injured or the victim of foul play. But it has no indication that any of theses possibilities are true.

Keino, a multiple medallist in Olympic Games who has staged many exciting duels in the mile run against Jim Ryun, another Olympian-turned-pro, has been missing for about a month. He has already won $2,000 apiece in six ITA meets.

The ITA presumes he is home in Kenya, but all efforts to reach him in his remote village of Eldoret have been in vain.

Jack Butefish, executive vice president of ITA, said Tuesday:

"At no time was there any disenchantment with pro track expressed by Keino, nor has he ever said he will not continue, especially considering he is in the line for our Grand Prix Award of $6,000."

Keino last appeared on the pro track tour April 14 in Baltimore. He was not scheduled to run again until May 11 in Toronto and the following day in Philadelphia.

He left from Los Angeles about April 18, and hasn't been heard from since.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN

Consumer Advisor for Miracle Food Mart

ENJOY AN OUTDOOR WEEKEND

It's time to start thinking of what, hopefully, will be our first warm weekend of the summer.

If driving to the cottage is on your mind, plan foods that take a minimum of space in the car, and the least possible preparation when you arrive. A ham cooked and glazed at home, or a fricassee roast, can provide one or more dinners as well as sandwiches and snacks. When you get down to leftover bits and pieces, with a can or two of soup and one of kernel corn you can use it for a hearty casserole.

For barbecuing, the recent reduction in pork prices brings spareribs into closer range of your budget than earlier this year. Good beef choices, in addition to hamburger, include rib or chuck steaks. Or wrap a blade roast in foil with vegetables and peppy seasonings and give it long, slow cooking over the coals.

For those planning large-scale cookouts, bulk-pack wieners can be an economy.

Whatever you do this Victoria Day weekend, I hope you'll find it sunny and happy.

Four Teams Tied For First Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With the season just getting under way, Fergus Thistles have found themselves in the thorny position of being in second place to every other team in the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior league.

This lopsided arrangement occurred Tuesday night, after Owen Sound North Stars defeated Wallaceburg Red Devils 17-10, forcing a four-way tie for first place.

The North Stars now are tied for the lead with the Red Devils, Six Nations Braves and the Thistles.

So far, Fergus is winless.

In another league game Tuesday night, Windsor drubbed Six Nations 24-12.

At Owen Sound, Peter Lovell led Joe McCrea scored five goals each for the winners. Mike Stoyka, Charlie Henderson and Norm Okihiro tallied two apiece. Single goals were by Mickey Iannizi, Dave Rosch, Fred Kruk, Terry Keeling and Arden Fluher.

For the Red Devils, two goals apiece were scored by Pat Fallon, Ken Tyler and Jim Hourington. Jim Miller, Larry Pervel, Don DeFreitge and Earl Haggerty each scored one goal. At Windsor, Thom Vens paced the Warlocks with seven goals. John MacDonald added five goals and Duffy McCarthy four. Ken Lisconbe netted three goals, and single markers went to Tom Wright, Mike Smith, Jim Hinkson, Tom Winger and Bill Hope.

Wayne Martin and playing coach Bill Squires paced the Braves with three goals each. Jack Hill added two and Tim Squires, Richard Squires, Floyd Harris and Ken Jonathon one each.

Debate Hanging

Change Prison System First Says PC MP

OTTAWA (CP) — The morally-loaded question of whether to abolish capital punishment should not be decided until the government improves its judicial and correctional system, Conservative Elmer MacKay said Tuesday.

"I feel strongly that if the . . . various factors that make up the successful administration of justice in Canada were put in order . . . the social climate would be better," he told the Commons during the seventh day of debate on a bill to extend a partial moratorium on the death penalty.

"That would be a far more appropriate time to consider the very important philosophical question of whether we should once-and-for-all abolish the death penalty."

The member for Central Nova, a lawyer from Lorne, N.S., was one of several members who said they would vote against the bill that would retain the death penalty only for killers of policemen or prison guards.

A five-year partial moratorium ended Dec. 29. If the five-year extension is approved the death penalty will be gone from Canada, to all intents and purposes.

The last persons hanged were two men in 1962, one of whom shot a policeman. Since then, 53 death sentences have been commuted to life imprisonment. Prime Minister Trudeau, who is scheduled to speak today, has said he will never sign the papers authorizing a hanging.

"All this bill does is perpetuate the status quo or status not quo," Mr. MacKay said.

Tuesday was the second consecutive day of debate on the amendment to the Criminal Code. The House sacrificed its conscience over five days last winter without making much headway on the bill.

Pollution Is Starting In Simcoe

TORONTO (CP) — Pollution, isolated as yet, is beginning to eat at the shoreline waters of Lake Simcoe, one of Ontario's most important recreational resources.

The Canada-Ontario Rideau-TrentSevern Committee (CORTS) warned in a report released Tuesday that action is needed if the high quality of the lake's water is to be protected.

The report, which also included Lake Couchiching, recommended the tripling of public recreational land holdings and warned that cottage development on the lakes has almost reached its limit.

There are about 11,000 cottages in the area, 70 per cent owned by Toronto residents.

The report said water quality of the lakes still is high, but the capacity of the two major lakes as an ecological unit appears, under the present technology of waste treatment to be nearing its upper limit.

It recommended that any increase in extended-stay visitors should be limited to areas where proper sewage treatment is practicable.

Hydro Inquiry

MPPs Won't Be Called to Testify

TORONTO (CP) — A select committee of the Ontario legislature Tuesday trod carefully around the question of whether legislature members—including possibly Premier William Davis—should be called in its investigation into a deal by Ontario Hydro with a developer to build a $4 million headquarters.

As the committee met to set out ground rules for its inquiry, it heard from its counsel that the question is a "worrisome" one and accepted his view, for the time being at least, that MPPs should not be called unless they have information not obtainable otherwise.

The inquiry was touched off by reports that the successful bidder for the building, Canada Square Corp., had received architectural information nine months ahead of three competing firms.

Potter Thinks Year Required For Review of Doctors' Fees

TORONTO (CP) — It likely will take "up to a year" to review the fee schedule for the medical profession, Health Minister Richard Potter said Tuesday.

He made the comment in an interview outside the legislature after opposition members inside had asked again who set the fees—the health ministry or the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon charged Dr. Potter "had done nothing but obstruct the application of constraints and a practical application of constraints."

He said the health minister's actions were "shameful."

Mr. Nixon referred to an Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons board telling doctors they may collect no more than $77,760 for a 48-week year from now on.

"Is this a policy which he agrees with and which will be a part of his statement when and if he makes it?" asked the Liberal leader.

Dr. Potter said the college did not suggest that this was a minimum salary.

"I am concerned about the costs of health in this province, more concerned probably than anyone else," Dr. Potter said.

He said talking about physicians making too much money was one thing and providing services to the public was another.

The College of Physicians and Surgeons has suggested that because of what has appeared to us to be abnormally high incomes, that they have recommended a standard of care to be maintained. The program they are suggesting is that over and above 300 units of care per week would not be considered adequate care."

The health minister added he was "delighted that the college has seen fit to make some recommendations to us and offer their help."

"Recommendations!" said Mr. Nixon "It (a directive) has gone out to the doctors. It's part of their practice."

Dr. Potter told Mr Nixon he would be bringing in "control mechanisms" for health spending "when available and when ready."

He said he wanted to be "as certain as I can that they are the controls that should be instituted and I have no intention of bringing them in until I have completed my studies."

Mr. Nixon charged that people who visit doctors "and the doctors themselves are seriously confused."

Outside the legislature, Dr. Potter said he was prepared to act "as quickly as possible to establish a committee with the OMA.

But, he said, it "takes time to study these things—it's not done in a day or a month or two. The whole matter of reviewing the fee schedule will probably take up to a year."

Committee Okays Housing Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government housing bill was pushed through the Commons welfare committee Tuesday amid vigorous bargaining between government and opposition members.

The bill, stripped in some areas and bolstered in others, returns to the Commons for third and final reading. Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford said he expects it will reappear for debate soon.

The legislation would set up some new housing programs—residential and neighborhood improvement, for example—and provide additional assistance to low-income earners wanting to buy their own homes.

Exasperated by the bargaining atmosphere in the committee, Charles Caccia (L—Toronto Davenport) said at one point:

"Perhaps you can do this at a cattle market but not when intelligently we have to make a decision as to what will go into the bill."

But the committee pressed on with consideration of a bill which Mr. Basford says has high priority on the government legislative timetable.

It is understood the government would like to call a summer recess of Parliament by the end of June, adding urgency to consideration of the housing legislation.

Mr. Basford accepted a number of Conservative and New Democratic amendments including a proposal by Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) to set a limit on interest rates charged on certain loans made by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC).

But, he strongly objected to an amendment by Ron Atkey (PC—Toronto-St. Paul's) which would broaden provisions for loans to rental landlords for residential rehabilitation.

But, the proposal was approved by the committee with New Democrats joining Conservatives against Liberals.

The Atkey proposal would remove provisions limiting these loans to rental landlords in areas designated for neighborhood improvement. It would also require the landlords to put as much money as they obtained through loans from CMHC.

Log Books Available

TORONTO (CP) — Log records of flights by cabinet ministers, including those by Premier William Davis in his chartered jet, will be made available to the public accounts committee, Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier announced Tuesday.

Mr. Bernier made the commitment to the committee, which has been trying for weeks to get the government to open its books on its 45-plane fleet.

However, at the committee's own request, Mr. Bernier will provide information only on flights made in aircraft the government leases, and on four planes in its own fleet that are reserved for executive flights by ministers and senior civil servants.

Other aircraft in the fleet are work planes used for surveys, rescue, fire fighting and other purposes.

Mr. Bernier promised to have the records available for the committee's meeting Thursday. They will show the number of flights, destination and number of passengers for the fiscal year 1971-72, the period covered in the provincial auditor's report which the committee is reviewing.

The auditor's comment that some planes may have been used by ministers and their families for non-government business prompted the call by the committee for the logs.

Foreign Fishing Vessels Rotate Crews at St. John's

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Foreign fishing fleets are rotating their crews during service stopovers in this old seaport so that the vessels can operate for longer periods on the fishing banks off Newfoundland.

Previously, foreign factory ships operated off the coast for about three months and then went home to give crews time off. But the new trend, with fish stocks in a declining position, is to operate twice as long and rotate the crews rather than take ships home, away from the banks.

The transfer of several hundred Polish fishermen recently has added coats to the fire of an old controversy—the closing of Canadian ports to foreign fishing craft.

A spokesman for the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen exxressed fear that a shut-tle service will develop that will see foreign fishing crews rotated regularly. This would give the foreign fishing ships more operating time in Atlantic waters and deplete the fish stocks even further.

The first rotation of a foreign fishing crew took place here about five years ago when the East German factory ship Junge Welt came to St. John's for services. Fifty of the 180-member crew of the 10,000-ton ship were flown home on a chartered plane while 50 replacements were flown here.

Since then the idea has caught on among the numerous fishing fleets which operate off the coast.

Hundreds of foreign fishing craft use this port each season for shelter, service and supplies. Trade with local businesses is estimated as high as $20 million annually but this is regarded as lacking benefit by many interested in the fishery, who claim foreign fleets are the main cause of poor cod catches in local waters.

A controversy arose last December when the crew of a Spanish trawler, tied up in St. John's to await permission to go on dry dock, wanted to go home for Christmas.

Canadian law does not allow an entire crew to leave a foreign ship tied up in a Canadian port and at first, Fisheries Minister Jack Davis refused to allow the Spaniards to go home. He later relented and the crew spent Christmas at home.

A spokesman for the Save Our Fisheries Association said the decision set "a dangerous precedent, and one to which the organization is strictly opposed."

The association official said Mr. Davis opened the door for other nations to look for similar treatment.

"The foreign trawlers average between 150 and 180 fishing days a year but this could be increased by 50 per cent or more if vessels did not have to return to home ports for repairs and supplies, and to give their crews a break."

Pandas Pampered

TOKYO (AP) — A $151,000 air-conditioned house has been completed at the Ueno zoo in Tokyo for a pair of pandas given to Japan by China. The house is enclosed in bullet-proof glass and has a medical treatment room, a bedroom, a swimming pool and an outdoor playground.

Rio Suburb Tough Spot In Brazil

NOVA IGUACU, Brazil (AP) — This suburb of Rio de Janeiro is fast gaining a reputation as one of the toughest towns in South America.

Stories of crime and violence in Nova Iguacu appear almost daily in newspapers throughout Brazil.

Some recent highlights:

—Two armed men tried to hold up the fare collector on a city bus. Eighteen of the 20 passengers pulled out guns, shot one of the robbers dead and wounded the other.

—A truck driver called for help after a daylight stickup. Passersby converged on the fleeing gangsan and beat him to death.

—A local resident strangled a prostitute he had been living with and stuffed her body into a septic tank, following an argument. A jury acquitted him, on grounds he was "defending his honor."

—The Nova Iguacu "death squad," a vigilante group said to be made up of off-duty policemen, killed 250 local underworld figures in a single year.

—A delivery man was held up at gunpoint by a man riding a horse.

"Nova Iguacu has been the victim of a campaign of sensationalism," says Police Chief Luiz Gonzaga. "Of course we have crime. But our rate is lower than that of Rio or New York."

He did not, however, give the rate figure for Nova Iguacu.

A notice outside the chief's door asks citizens to blow the whistle on "disorderly persons, bums, drug addicts, people walking around armed, robbers wanted by the authorities, numbers rackets headquarters and borderline."

Located 15 miles from downtown Rio, Nova Iguacu grew in population from 33,000 in 1920 to 146,000 in 1950 to 750,000 today. People from all over Brazil streamed into the city to find work in the prosperous Rio area. Public services could not keep pace.

As a result, Nova Iguacu today lacks paved streets, piped-in drinking water, telephones, schools, hospitals and police protection.

"Nova Iguacu is an El Dorado," said Gonzaga, 47, a thin, soft-spoken father of eight who has devoted nearly half his life to police work. "Where there is progress, there is crime. Criminals are attracted to Nova Iguacu like moths to light.

"You'd need the entire Brazilian army to get rid of all the crooks here."

Gonzaga's force is made up of about 100 inspectors and patrolmen and seven police vehicles, most of them usually in the repair shop.

When citizens come to police headquarters to file a complaint, sometimes the only way they get an officer to investigate is to take him to the scene of the crime in a taxi. The complainant pays the cab fare.

Mod Monocle?

No, that's not a fancy monocle the lab technician Pat O'Connor is examining at the Lexington, Mass. Honeywell Radiation Centre. The device is actually part of an infrared sensor assembly to be used aboard the forthcoming Skylab space vehicle. It will help search the earth for new sources of oil, gas and minerals. (AP Photo)

Beware of Cherry in Martini

TOBONTO (CP) — The bugging techniques used by the Watergate burglars were amateurish compared with some of the super-sophisticated equipment available now.

A recent financial report by Roznar Corp. Ltd., an investment firm, offers some tips for the unwary business man:

"Always order lemon peel in your late afternoon martinis. They now have microphones small enough to insert in a maraschino cherry without being seen—and they're a little hard to digest. They don't, as yet, self-destruct in five seconds.

"Distrust anyone at the cocktail party or the board meeting who stands there with his mouth open. He may have a microphone hidden in a dental cavity.

"At the pest staff party make a special point of keeping your eyes away from those low-cut gowns and ter the objects d'art. There are television cameras small enough to be hidden in an upswept hairdo, even a cuff-lapel or a tie clip."

The amalitious venture will see one of the largest groups ever assembled in the city for a musical performance.

Young Actresses Neglected in U.S.

JERICHO, Occupied Jordan (AP) — Hollywood, said Leslie Caron, is no longer an equal-opportunity employer when it comes to actresses.

That's why she has sold her Hollywood home to return to her native France.

"I don't think Hollywood is an appropriate place for an actress of 40," she said. "I don't think she has many opportunities there. Whereas in France they are highly appreciated.

"In America you have to play freak parts if you're in that age category. In France, you can still play love stories."

Miss Caron turned to watch four Bedouin tribesmen race their horses across the desert sands for the movie QB/VII, being filmed on the shores of the Dead Sea.

The movie will be shown on Aftenican television next year before its release in theatres.

Miss Caron plays the wife of British actor Anthony Hopkins, the Nazi camp doctor in the best-selling Leon Uris novel.

The movie also stars Ben Gazzara, Lee Remick, Sir John Gielgut, Jack Hawkins and Anthony Quayle.

"My part is an interesting role from an actress' point of view," said Miss Caron. "I play a woman ranging in age from 25 to 55. And it's quite amusing to do that."

Life, for the most part, has been amusing for Miss Caron. The gamin look of Gigi is still there, but fine lines are beginning to show around the eyes.

"I've been lucky," she admits. "My husband, Michael Laughlin, is a producer and he organizes things for me." She starts in Laughlin's soon-to-be-released Nicole and two other movies in the planning stage.

"I think Hollywood is really immatage in its attitudes toward etreme youth," she said. "Except for men. Men can work until they are 50, 60 or 70. Look at Cary Grant. Women's careers are ridiculously short, except for the stage."

European films are more subtle and less violent, she said. "They are still interested in love in Europe. In America, they don't film love stories any more, except for Love Story.

"Even young actresses can't find work. The only young girl who works is Ali MacGraw—and Jane Fonda.

"Hollywood is all geared for men because they are organized in a businesslike fashion and can find themselves parts. They are all producers.

"In France, it's still not such a business enterprise and I don't think women suffer from so much neglect."

Arts Centre Orchestra A Winner

LENINGRAD (CP) — The National Arts Centre Orchestra from Canada made its Russian debut here Tuesday. After a cold start the audience gave it a rousing reception.

The youthful ensemble under Mario Bernardi played in the Grand Concert Hall, home of the Leningrad Philharmonic Society and scene of performances by such stars as Horowitz, Moussorgsky and Rimsky-Korsakov.

Small by symphonic standards, the Ottawa orchestra drew less than enthusiastic applause for its initial numbers.

Then Maestro Bernardi h a d conductor's stand removed and conducted from memory.

Enthusiasm rose to such a pitch that there were 25 minutes of applause and encores. Finally Bernardi took concert master Walter Prystawski by the hand and led him off the stage, ending the performance. By custom, an orchestra always remains on stage as long as there is applause.

The best turn you can do for yourself and your family is to turn to the News Quiz in The Intelligencer every week. You can do more when you are informed.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

THURSDAY, MAY 17

Aries (March 21-April 19): Testy but firmly diagnostic friends and relatives from your business. Today is great for ideas, but lacks time for application.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Your regular work is hard enough without adding the uncertainties of corporate confusion. Substitutes are needed. Anticipate contingencies.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): If you can concentrate with all of today's distractions, you're good! Adjust lighting for easy vision and seek quiet.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Emotional crosscurrents exist —you'll be glad you steered them without troubling associates. Purchasing and long-desired object requires caution.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Friends differ both with you and among themselves. Extend your loved ones the finest care possible.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Expect temporary delays and try to be less demanding. All your ideals and ventures will come in due time. Patience and prayer are needed.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's like going back to school, but in an accelerated course, not a comfortably paced routine. Select, now, from available choices.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The tide of incident runs fast today, but don't take your luck for granted.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Although you're ready to go it's too early for most of your ventures. Avoid haste. A favor done for somebody tends to get you off position.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can upset people even with the best intentions. Discussions can build into squabbles. By evening the coast is clear again.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Serious study may be difficult with today's distractions. Your friends' ideas may work for them, but not for you.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The business world and its machines care nothing for your personal affairs—a few people take advantage of an expression of distress.

To Your Good Health

Surgery Is Cure For Incontinence

By GEORGE C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I cannot control urine when walking unless I go at a hurry pace or along fine at home, or when not exercising very much.

A lot of elderly people have this trouble, and I suppose if they could be helped something would have been done for them. I wouldn't let them go in a nursing home, you smell the urine, so so many people have this trouble.

Doctor told me he could not guarantee any cure success with surgery, only 50 per cent success. I have had this trouble over 10 years, and am now 63. —W.T.

Incontinence (imperfect control of urine) is not unusual in women who have had pregnancies. The strain of childbirth can weaken the tissues supporting the bladder, and it sags, a condition called cystocele (SISS-toe-seal). Poor shut-off control can occur from this.

In turn, this results in a certain amount of puddling of urine. That is, the bladder does not empty completely, and the secondary cause irritation or infection or both. The irritation can be increased by your activity, and leakage is the result. (Bladder infection, of course, also is fairly common in women who have not had children, or do not have cystocele.)

The odor you note in nursing homes is not necessarily from the same cause as yours. The incontinence very often is the consequence of confusion, a general weakness of patients. Some of them may be using catheters, but the tubes can be pulled out of place.

Anyway, the logical and usually successful method of overcoming cystocele is surgery —the supports of the bladder are tightened so that the bladder remains in correct position as it still empty completely. If infection has developed, it also must be treated, since irritation (and tence irritability of bladder control) is likely to continue until the infection is subdued.

As to your doctor saying he could guarantee 50 per cent success, that is a fair estimate by him. In point of fact, no surgery can guarantee with a 100 per cent guarantee of success. I would say that your chances are prospect not a whole lot better than going through another 10 years with what you have. If you are young enough to consider such surgery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Why are doctors so careless with their cold? Have seen two members of our family get refill after refill on a prescription collated by five years.

They increase the amount, and then seem to hallucinate, when you call about trouble in the family. When you ask them to call a check for a doctor again, they just laugh, yet we have seen some ghastly things happen. Please answer. —Mrs. T.

You're asking me why doctors are "so careless" when their patients haven't been back for months, to boot, are exceeding the prescription instructions?

Well, that's an example of why the government continues to keep tightening up on prescription regulations. Who's the careless? Doctors or patients?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a bad rectal itching, and have been putting a hot washcloth on it and petroleum jelly to get relief for a couple of days. I thought I might have piloworms. —M.B.

Well, that's possible, but there are other possibilities more likely. In an adult—and generally pinworms cause more of a tickle than a solid itch.

One possibility is hemorrhoids, which can cause itching as well as pain in some cases. I would suggest being examined for that before deciding what ought to be done.

The bidding:

| West | North | East | South |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | ♣ | 1 ♠ | 3 NT |
| Pass | 3 NT | Pass | 3 NT |

Opening lead — ten of hearts.

The bidding by the opponents frequently determines declarer's course of play. Consider this hand, which illustrates how East's spade bid can vitally affect the outcome.

West led a heart. East taking the king and returning the jack. Declarer won with the queen and had to decide which suit to play next.

Let's suppose he had led a spade to force out the ace. East would win and play a third heart, establishing West's suit.

Sooner or later declarer would have to lead a diamond and, whenever he did, West would take the ace and forfeit with sink the contract with his remaining hearts.

But let's suppose South leads diamonds at once, instead of spades. In that case, he makes the contract whatever the defenders do. If West refuses the first diamond, South plays another one.

As a result, West's hearts drop out of the picture. If he takes the ace, he has no entry for his hearts; if he refuses the ace a second time, South abandons the suit and leads spades to wrap up the contract.

Obviously, the crux of the hand lies in choosing the right suit to attack, but which suit South should play first is certainly not a cinch. In making his choice, South goes back to the bidding for guidance.

It is only logical to assume that East's spade bid was based on a six-card headed by the ace than one headed by the nine. It follows that if West has the ace, it is more likely to be in diamonds than spades, and South therefore shapes his play so as to deprive West of his potential entry card.

In effect, the bidding paves the way to the proper method of play.

Bronx Police Carry Repellent To Ward off Wild Dog Packs

NEW YORK (CP) — The police call it Fort Apache, postmen carry cans of spray repellent to ward off roaming packs of stray dogs and the people who live there say they fear walking the streets even in the daytime.

The area is the South Bronx of New York City and it ranks among the most crime-ridden, diseased and economically depressed slums in the United States.

Harlem, the black section of Manhattan often regarded as New York's major slum, seems middle class by comparison.

Says a policeman who patrols the South Bronx:

"Anyone walking around here at night is one of three things: a cop, a criminal or a potential victim."

The Bronx, which lies northeast of Manhattan, once was a rolling pastoral area whose face was irrevocably altered by swiftly changing immigration patterns.

After 1900, The Bronx became a refuge for many Jews seeking a rolling escape from the crowded lower east side of Manhattan, traditionally the landing point for successive waves of immigrants from Europe.

But since the Second World War, the South Bronx has absorbed new waves of immigrants—Puerto Ricans and blacks from the U.S. South seeking new economic opportunities. The South Bronx now is two-thirds Puerto Rican and one-third black.

That their search has proven cruelly elusive can be seen from the staggering city statistics on the area.

Of its 400,000 residents, 40 per cent are on welfare and 30 per cent are unemployed. Fifty per cent of the houses are without at least half of the time. Ten per cent have no water.

The infant mortality rate of 28.3 for every 1,000 births is far above the average for all of New York. New tuberculosis cases are more than twice the national average. And although it comprises only a tiny section of the city, it has 26 per cent of all reported cases of malnutrition in New York last year and 18 per cent of the reported cases of venereal disease.

Beyond the economic blight, there is the constant fear posed by an army of 20,000 narcotics addicts who must find fresh money each day to support their habits. And if a resident manages to elude the addicts, he must also dodge the growing number of youth gangs, now estimated to have 10,000 members in the area.

Parts of the South Bronx look like a city which has taken a steady bombing from the air. Crumbled buildings abound, many blocks contain empty lots where there is no sign of life and fires burn unattended.

"The South Bronx is a necropolis—a city of death," said Dr. Harold Wise, founder of the Martin Luther King Health Centre in the district.

A prime worry to many city officials is that the urban sickness shows signs of spreading to other parts of The Bronx. If The Bronx goes under, observers say, there may be little hope for the rest of New York.

Government officials quarrel over who is responsible for the conditions in the South Bronx and what can be done to arrest the blight, if not cure it.

City officials charge the state and federal governments have curtailed the urban renewal programs which they say are needed to bring a measure of health back to the core of the South Bronx. But a state official says: "The problem rests squarely in the administration of New York City and the manner in which it chooses to use state funds."

While government officials trade arguments, addiction rates climb, public health services face increasing burdens and the sense of hopelessness among South Bronx residents grows.

Among the primary victims are the children. For many, the choice is between narcotics, which help close the mind to the surroundings, and the violence of the youth gangs.

Those who do survive the initial challenges of crime and drugs often succumb to the daily privations of life in a tenement.

Health workers say that many people on the streets who appear to be more than 40 are really only in their 30s.

"There's a very rapid deterioration of the body in many people here after the age of 25," said Dr. Wise. "Something happens to your body when you spend the entire winter without heat."

Periodically, a new urban renewal program is announced for the South Bronx but none has yet shown that it can deal with the extent of the urban rot found here.

"You can't do things piecemeal—we need better education, better health, housing maintenance, support services," said Bronx Borough President Robert Abrams.

But others contend it is already too late to save the area.

"You must concede that this Bronx slum and others in Brooklyn and Manhattan are unrepairable," said Robert Moses, who guided New York's development in many of the post-war years. "They are beyond rebuilding, tinkering and restoring.

"They must be leveled."

Others object to this formula. "They think that the ghettos should be burned, but how can you just burn New York?" asks one black state senator.

To some extent, private capital has become involved in trying to help small businesses and residents in the area finance new construction programs.

Banker Michael Gill, who has become active in the community, said his superiors have supported his work "because they believe that if the South Bronx goes, the entire Bronx will collapse, and if the Bronx collapses the city will collapse."

Congressman Herman Badillo, a Puerto Rican, said: "It's going to take two, three or even more generations to start solving the problems."

Moscow Tunnels Meet Challenge of Motoring

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Moscow's city fathers plan to meet the challenge of the motoring age—and any worse challenge that might arise—by going deeper underground.

To cope with tens of thousands of new drivers surging on to the city's crowded roads in the 1970s, motorway tunnels are to be constructed.

These will be hollowed out beneath the city centre, duplicating the main arterial system above and linking eventually with bypass motorways.

The main aim is for drivers to reach any part of the capital within 20 minutes.

Additionally, underground parking spaces, garages and other services will be installed.

Staff members of 18 Moscow institutes now are poring over drawing-board projects to move warehouses, refrigerating plants, exhibition halls, swimming pools, cinemas, restaurants and food markets underneath Moscow.

Planners have given themselves 15 years to complete all these major extensions of underground life in the Soviet capital.

The whole scheme will be concerted with present moves to develop Greater Moscow. Metro, the underground train system, from presently 71 to 200 miles.

The new subways are to be deeply lying channels which will be used as atomic shelters in the event of a nuclear attack.

Some new apartment houses are equipped with deep basement shelters and strong steel doors. Essential enterprises in or near the capital have even deeper, better protected atomic shelters.

In the Second World War, the Moscow Metro, as in London, Paris and Berlin, became a refuge for city dwellers from bombing raids and—as the case of the Muscovites—from siege shelling.

In idea with the generally relaxed official atmosphere here city officials, when they talk of keep-lying Metro lines, do not link that with any precautions against nuclear strike damage.

Recently the mayor of Moscow, Vladimir Promyslov, talking about city traffic problems, told interviewers deep Metro lines could be laid just as cheaply as shallow ones.

The Moscow Metro transports more than four million passengers and at peak travel periods it is so crowded that, according to local legend, you do not really need to walk up the staircases—you get carried along in the crush.

Prescriptions Urged For Asthma Atomizers

OTTAWA (CP) — Over-the-counter sterilized containing potent medications for asthmatics should be sold only on prescription, says Dr. Percy Barsky of Winnipeg.

About 98 per cent of Winnipeg-area doctors surveyed agreed that the pressurized spray apparatus should be restricted to prescription orders, he said in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

Such orders were made mandatory in the United States and Britain following reports that agents used in the atomizers were linked with deaths of asthmatics and of young people trying for drug highs.

Dr. Barsky, medical director for family care at Winnipeg Children's Hospital, said fresh gas used in the aerosols has serious, sometimes lethal, effects on the heart.

"In Canada, these potentially-toxic items are carried by thousands of asthmatic children and adults who are using them daily. They are sold over the counter in every drugstore, are advertised by department stores at bargain prices and may be purchased by anyone without a prescription."

Dr. Barsky and his colleagues carried out a survey of both doctors and pharmacists.

The pharmacists reported that at least 25 per cent of buyers purchased the aerosols without prescription or direction from a doctor, the article said. Seventy per cent said they thought there was over-medication through their use.

The pharmacists said about 25 per cent of users complained of side effects, such as rapid heart throbbing or irritability.

Eighty per cent of the doctors thought prescription orders would pose no handicap for patients who needed the treatment.

Dr. Barsky said the federal health protection branch had been informed of the reported deaths in Britain and the U.S. In 1971, however, the branch said no such deaths had been evident in Canada.

Canadian manufacturers were asked to insert warnings on the labels advising the patient not to exceed the dosage recommended by his physician, Dr. Barsky said. But the position of the branch now was that prescription orders were not necessary.

"It is increasingly evident that a situation which requires some rectification or adjustment now exists," Dr. Barsky said.

The Canadian Pediatric Society safety promotion committee also has recommended restricting sales to prescription holders, he said.

"Such action could protect the lives of thousands of asthmatics in this country."

Skepticism Of French Dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — Languages commissioner Keith Spicer expressed dismay Tuesday over progress in bilingualism and encountered what he has called a worse danger than so-called English backlash—growing skepticism among French-speaking Canadians.

He told the Commons miscellaneous estimates committee he is not happy with the rate of advance of French in the public service, noted deep and widespread misunderstanding of the Official Languages Act and voiced shock at the small number of high school students taking French courses.

The skepticism was raised by Rene Matte (SC — Champlain), who said the continuing low proportion of French-speaking or bilingual public servants leaves many Quebecers fearing the impossibility of improvements.

"There doesn't seem to be any improvement whatsoever," he said.

Mr. Spicer, who reports to Parliament on the application of the Official Languages Act, told the committee April 19 that English backlash against the expansion of the use of French often has been overblown.

"There is another, and I think more dangerous, reaction which we should never forget: French skepticism.

"To prevent our French-speaking countrymen's skepticism from sliding into outright cynicism, and to prevent them from seeing in bilingualism policies just another 'trick' of the federal authorities to win them over, the pace of language reform must not be slowed down, but sanely and sensitively speeded up."

Northern Action Brings Criticism

OTTAWA (CP) — Many employers lay off workers when federal on-the-job training grants dry up, the Commons' manpower committee was told Tuesday.

C. Patrick Neale (NDP—Vancouver East) said many of the extra people hired for the training programs eventually are laid off.

Employers should repay grants if they cannot show their work force has increased following the training program, Mr. Neale said.

Bell Canada and two subsidiaries, Northern Electric and Northern Electric Mitrevey-Isms, received about $300,000 in on-the-job training grants for more than 3,000 employees, he said.

"Yet in 1971 they laid off 2,184 people, and 2,642 employees during the first six months of 1972."

Plant Begun

VARENNES, Que. (CP) — Construction began here Tuesday on a controversial $30-million petrochemical plant which the Quebec government considers a major coup at the expense of Ontario.

The plant, to be built by Hercules Inc. of Wilmington, Del., will be Canada's first producer of polypropylene, a plastic material used in the manufacture of carpets, appliances, packaging materials and other products.

Calgary Grows

OTTAWA (CP) — Calgary's population outpaced 21 other metropolitan areas with a growth rate of 26 per cent from 1966 to June 1, 1972, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

Its numbers jumped from the 351,000 measured in the 1966 census to 417,000 estimated for last year.

Firm Fined

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — Pfizer Co. Ltd. was fined $1,500 and issued an order of prohibition when found guilty in provincial court Tuesday of resale price maintenance.

Heads OMA

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Larry Wilson of Kingston was elected president of the Ontario Medical Association Tuesday at the end of two days of council sessions. He succeeds Dr. L. R. Harnick of Toronto, who will remain on the executive as past president and head of the public relations committee.

Unknown

OTTAWA (CP) — So far as John Diefenbaker is concerned, the post office department is slightly short on research efforts.

A letter to the former prime minister was addressed to his old address at Rockcliffe Village, about a half-mile from where he now lives, and it was returned to the sender, a Toronto judge, "moved, address unknown."

He says he frequently has received letters addressed to "Mr. Diefenbaker, Canada."

Security

OTTAWA (CP) — Small rural mail-carriers contracted by the federal government will have greater protection of their business interests in future, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet told the Commons communications committee Tuesday.

Mr. Ouellet said it was his intention to introduce legislation that would allow renewal, without bidding, of rural mail-carrier contracts not above $25,000.

Trial Speedy

TORONTO (CP) — Uncontested divorce actions now can be heard by the Ontario Supreme Court within a week of their being ready for trial, a judge said Tuesday.

Mr. Justice William Parker, head of a special judge's committee working the last five months at reducing court backlogs, said in an interview that as well, as reducing the waiting time for divorce—which has been as high as 12 months—the backlog of all civil cases continues to drop.

Expect Deficit

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office will have a large deficit for some years to come, Postmaster-General Andre Ouellet told the Commons' communications committee Tuesday.

The post office expects revenues this year of more than $600 million, but of this $500 million is paid into the general federal kitty—the consolidated revenue fund—and $91 million will be applied against expenditures.

Allowances Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Manpower Minister Robert Andras unfurled amendments to the manpower mobility program before the Commons manpower committee Tuesday.

The new regulations, which went into effect Tuesday, provide a $13-a-day living allowance for a maximum of five days to unemployed or underemployed people seeking work in other areas. Previous regulations allowed $20 a week for up to four weeks.

The present $500 allowance for purchasing a home in a worker's new job location will be increased to $1,500. A $1,000 allowance, previously paid for the sale of the worker's home, will be discontinued, Mr. Andras told the committee.

Flees Again

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Florence Niles, 23, who six days ago escaped from the prison for women and turned herself in next day, escaped again Monday night, but was captured Tuesday in a downtown apartment.

Police said she walked away from the Kingston Psychiatric Hospital after she took a set of keys and locked attendants in a ward.

Last Wednesday she climbed a prison wall to escape.

She is serving a 10-year sentence for manslaughter and is due for release in November, 1975.

No Decision Reached on Rebuilding

TORONTO (CP) — No decision has been made on rebuilding or relocating the Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. plant demolished by explosions and searing flames, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

"We haven't even recovered the bodies presumably there," said George Dube, general counsel for Ashland.

John Heracs, 23, of Toronto was killed when he was blown through a wall "like a bundle of rags", as a buns paint-mixing tank exploded Monday, setting off the fire.

Missing and presumed dead by both company and fire department officials are:

—Arthur Warnock 61, who returned to the burning plant to turn off valves.

—Giovanni Carino, 32, who was working his normal day shift.

—Lauri Lock, 38, who with his wife had been planning a Victoria Day holiday.

A police spokesman said the man's bodies may never be found.

Mayor Philip White of the pertinent officials are: Borough of York, where the plant was located, said Tuesday he will ask Ashland to relocate in another are if it plans to rebuild.

Mr. White said he will ask York council to buy the site of the wrecked plant with the idea of reselling it to a company which poses less of a fire hazard.

A company spokesman said the 60 employees will be invited to a meeting today "to let them know what is being done immediately for their benefit."

Of 14 employees injured in the explosions and fire, only one remained in hospital Tuesday and his condition was described as satisfactory.

Toronto Students Get Choice of High Schools

TORONTO (CP) — Freedom of choice took another stride forward Tuesday night. This time it's a high school for students unhappy with ordinary high schools.

The proposed school, already dubbed the Subway School because it would be located somewhere along the subway system, was approved by the city school board's programs committee.

If the board itself approves, the school would allow students to plan their studies around general themes such as transportation. They would pick up courses on those themes wherever they could and thus garner enough credits for a high-school diploma.

HENRY KISSINGER

Kissinger And Tho Talking

PARIS (AP) — Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho met today for the first time in three months to discuss how to enforce the Vietnam ceasefire they negotiated last winter.

Kissinger was host at the session in an American-owned Villa on a golf course at St. Nom-la-Breteche, 15 miles southwest of Paris. Neither he nor Tho made any statements but they shook hands smilingly at the door and waved cheerfully to the reporters in front of the house.

President Nixon's national security adviser and the member of the North Vietnamese politburo were expected to continue their latest round of talks for three or four days. It is reposted that Kissinger wants to be back in the United States before his 50th birthday May 27.

The two men who negotiated the peace agreement in Paris met last when Kissinger visited Hanoi Feb. 10-11. Following allegations by each side that the other is flouting the agreement, the United States and North Vietnam agreed to have Kissinger and Tho meet again in an attempt to make the ceasefire work.

The usually mild-mannered Tho raised his voice angrily when he arrived from Hanoi Monday, denouncing alleged U.S. bombing raids on areas of South Vietnam controlled by the Viet Cong. He ignored U.S. denials of the attacks and said if they were repeated, he would walk out on Kissinger.

It was the first time Tho had voiced such an ultimatum publicly in four years of talks with Kissinger.

Red PoW Sent South After Pact

SAIGON (CP) — Canada and Indonesia have presented the International truce team with the first in a detailed series of reports documenting cases of North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam, which they say is another violation of the Paris ceasefire agreement.

The report, presented to the four-country International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS), dealt with a prisoner captured by South Vietnamese forces in Da Nang region earlier this year.

The Canadians and Indonesians said their Da Nang headquarters representatives had interviewed the prisoner, now in hospital, and found that he belonged to the North Vietnamese army and had entered the south after the Jan. 28 peace agreement.

Polish and Hungarian members of the ICCS have already protested strongly that such investigations are outside the purview of the commission and have refused to take part. Nevertheless, the ICCS agreed Wednesday to forward the document as a regular report to the two-country joint Military Commission (JMC) made up of representatives of the Viet Cong and the Saigon government.

Pay, to Be Docked

TORONTO (CP) — High school teachers who booked off sick, closing two collegiates in the borough of Scarborough, Wednesday, will be asked to produce doctors' certificates. Those who don't present the certificates will lose one day's pay about $50 on average. Scarborough school board trustees decided Wednesday night.

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The scenario is being written today for a Buck Rogers style space adventure in which three astronauts will fly a repair mission to the disabled Skylab space station.

It will require one of the astronauts to take a space walk to install a shield between the overheated spacecraft and the blazing rays of the sun.

Plans for the flight are being drawn up by specialists at space agency centres at Cape Kennedy, Houston, Tex., and Huntsville, Ala., and at the contractor plants of Martin-Marietta Denver and McDonnell-Douglas Corp. in Huntington, Beach, Calif.

The area of the spacecraft facing the sun is about 20 by 20 feet. If this area could be covered, it would lower the temperature to the normal 66-to-78-degree range.

These three methods of installing a sun shield are being considered:

—In the most favored approach, an astronaut would enter the spaceship, open a hatch in the workshop area and roll out a window-shade device. This would require piecing together lengths of pipe and gradually extending the shade to the rear of the Skylab.

—The Apollo ferry ship would fly close to the laboratory and an astronaut would lean out a hatch. Using a long pole, he would attach the ends of a box to opposite ends of the section to be covered. Then he would pull a cable to release the covering.

—The least likely approach would be to have one of the astronauts open the workshop hatch and inflate an umbrella-like device.

Builders Demand Better Protection

Members of the Quinte Homebuilders Association last night charged they weren't getting enough police protection for their tax dollars and were losing thousands of dollars as the result.

The discussion ended with the members voting unanimously to contact by letter city council and the chief of police asking for stricter protection of construction sites.

A spokesman for one construction firm said he has lost $5,000 recently in equipment and building materials stolen from sites. Another interjected that would be a "conservative" figure.

"It is pathetic . . . for the taxes we are paying we deserve better protection," said one member.

While leaving the meeting, one member recounted the time when an order of building materials had to be delivered three times and only the third time was the material still on the site for following morning when work could begin.

Mike DeMark, president of the association, said "it isn't good enough to have a police officer sit in his cruiser, then down the particulars and never be heard from again. There should be some follow up."

"If we throw a rock through the mayor's window, we'd be in jail for it years while vandals can smash every window in our buildings and nothing is done about it," he said.

It was suggested during the meeting that the police offer a $100 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of thieves, as is the practice in Hamilton. An association spokesman will travel to Hamilton shortly to investigate the plans and to bring some back.

Combined Separate-Public School in North Proposed

The forgotten third of Hastings - Prince Edward separate school is counted for a first — a shared separate and public elementary school building under the jurisdiction of "three boards."

A southern portion of Hastings district to the north of Hastings county is included in the Hastings - Prince Edward board, but it has never appears on the letterhead. It doesn't need to, Rev. Louis Casartelli, trustee for the district, zealously promotes the far north and is now deeply involved in a scheme that will put it on the educational map.

His proposal is a new school at Whitney, on the eastern border of Algonquin Park. It would contain two wings — one housing public school children and the other separate school pupils. Uniting the two would be a core area containing a shared auditorium, gym and library. The separate school board would continue to provide a kindergarten in its wing. The separate school board now serves the area with kindergarten — the public schools buying education from it. The home economics and industrial arts rooms would be accommodated in the public school wing.

Ontario's ministry of education, advocators of such separate - public school sharing schemes, is solidly behind the concept. But the people of the north still need some convincing. Father Casartelli indicated at the board meeting Tuesday night.

Two public school boards are involved — those of Whitney and Madawaska.

Both public boards are isolated, in that they were not taken into any county system," said Father Casartelli. "Perhaps they are operating in the past, unaware of the advantages of larger systems.

Alone we cannot provide these facilities; alone they cannot provide them. Only by co-operation can both get the better facilities available in other parts of Ontario."

At present, 190 pupils attend the separate schools at Madawaska and Whitney and 120 attend public schools in the two municipalities.

For several reasons the public boards in the north are not yet completely convinced of the wisdom of building a shared school at Whitney. The conceptual sketch plans submitted by the separate school board give no indication of cost. The public schools at Whitney and Madawaska are now in a relatively good state of repair and the Algonquin parents are resentful of the transportation of their children to Whitney.

But Father Casertelli has not given up on the concept of the first three - board co-operative school in Ontario. Discussions are continuing, following a detailed study of costs and available grants.

Police Techniques Displayed

BRIGHTON — More than 200 public school students from the Brighton area toured the Brighton detachment, Ontario Provincial Police headquarters during Canadian Police Week Wednesday.

Special displays of identification methods such as photography, fingerprint recovery and tracking in cases such as burglary, hit-and-run and vandalism were set up.

At the rear of the building, Corporal Fred Goody of the Peterborough detachment was on hand with an OPP patrol boat. As he explained, David Meeny of the Newcastle detachment, in full special police uniform, really explained the workings of his high - speed police radar equipment complete with retractable revolving red light.

Inside, detachment safety officer Constable Larry Basford explained fingerprinting in detail, each of the happy youngsters going away with his or her thumbprint firmly imprinted on a special card.

Upstairs, Constable Bill Holdaway explained the displays and led the student groups to the communications room.

And to top off their visit, each of the youngsters received a fluorescent Trevor, the OPP Safety Dog tag for attachment to bicycles.

Summer Events To Be Planned

A co - ordinating meeting for all people involved in summer recreational programming will take place at the Pinnacle Street recreation centre on May 24.

Recreation Director Lorne Williams said the meeting, called for 2 p.m. would be for community officials, service people, and any others involved in recreational programming.

Hospital to Be Art Gallery

Early in June, Belleville will open its first art gallery — at no expense to taxpayers, and with no room for new or renovated premises.

The gallery? At Belleville General Hospital and it will house a permanent collection of art produced by Quinte area artists. The opening show, tentatively scheduled for Saturday, June 9, will feature 20 paintings and five wall hangings but there is a potential display space for up to 130 pieces of art.

The show will initially be housed in a busy corridor of the new administration wing, then will be rotated throughout the hospital in top traffic areas. The first show will last three months, after which a completely new collection will take its place.

"Each piece of art will display the artist's name, the price of the item, and a central phone number that potential buyers can call to arrange for purchase," said Mrs. Lois Bernard of the Quinte Arts Council who, together with physical rehabilitation chief Philip Rickard, is organizing the show.

To cover basic expenses, artists will be charged an entry fee of $1 per item. When a sale is made, 15 percent of the price will be paid to the arts council. Each piece of art sold, however, will remain on display for the full three-month period.

"Apart from promoting local artists," said Mr. Bernard, "the shows will be of therapeutic benefit to both patients and visitors."

The announcement of the new art showcase was made at the Quinte Arts Council board of directors meeting last night. May 15, at the Four Seasons Hotel in Belleville.

Also under discussion was the council's 36 lecture series that began in March. Although off to a slow start, it has been plagued by inadequate publicity, the March and April lectures brought only 15 members each.

The May lottery is reported to be selling more steadily and a booth at Quinte Mall, Saturday, May 19, should help push the prize higher. It was pointed out at the meeting that the now successful Quinte Help Line didn't begin with its first prize of only $15.

Lottery ticket books may be obtained from Mrs. Diane Aikken (962-9492). Individual tickets are on sale at major stores in Belleville.

Industrial Show Is Well Attended

After a simple ribbon-cutting by Mayor Robin Jeffrey and a luncheon for industrial management, work began in earnest for displayers at yesterday's Electric Motor Sales and Service, Belleville) Ltd.'s suppliers' show at the Quinte Curling Club.

About 100 representatives manned more than 30 exhibits from companies who supply the Belleville company. Organized by EMS and S executive, Roland Belanger, the show attracted an estimated 750 visitors, all with industrial interests, who came from as far away as Kingston and Lindsay.

After a thinning in the crowd around dinner time, the floor of the Quinte Curling Club filled again in the evening until the show closed at 10 p.m. "There were a lot of leads given out that will be followed up and a lot of orders went through," said Mr. Belanger.

He said the feedback he had heard was that everyone was very impressed with the displays and being able to talk to a suppliers first hand and on - the - spot. Exhibitors came from Montreal, Brantford, Toronto and many centres between for the day's show.

"We had a very favorable response from both suppliers and buyers, appreciative of the chance to both buy and sell," said Mr. Belanger.

"I hope it will do us a lot of good," he said. "Any company that does well does Belleville a lot of good as well — in terms of the money circulated and the jobs available."

From bearings and seals to power tools and paccaging devices, the range of displays was wide. Most had to do with industrial power transmission and control—electrical, mechanical, hydraulic and pneumatic. While many companies displaying enjoy a consumer and domestic market, the show was slanted toward industry generally.

Interest High at Trade Show

One of the simpler displays that caught a lot of interest at yesterday's Electric Motor Sales and Service (Belleville) Ltd. show was one of EMS and S' own—an encapsulated electric motor with teflon bearings that happily running in a tank of water. About 100 representatives from more than 20 participating supplier companies set up displays at the Quinte Curling Club that attracted an estimated 750 people associated with industry from as far away as Kingston and Lindsay.

Young Musicians Entertain

Hastings Is Selected Education Showplace

Hastings County will be the education showplace of Ontario two years from now. At the Education Week '73 Committee's final meeting in Madoc Township School, Wednesday, May 17, chairmen Art Brooks announced that Hastings has been chosen the host county for Education Week Ontario in April, 1975.

What this means is that Ontario's education minister and possibly the premier will be in Belleville to kick off the proceedings. It also means an extra effort on the part of Hastings educators to tell the story of the county's progress in education.

It was the consensus of the committee that, based on this year's effort, Hastings will get on a good show. Education Week '73 (April 8 - 14) was voted an outstanding success.

The outgoing committee nominated and elected officers for next year's group. They are: Chairman — Walter Raniowski, principal, Our Lady of Fatima School, Belleville; vice - chairman — Walter Cochrane, vice-principal, College Street School, Trenton; secretary — Mrs. Lynn Knudsen, Queen Alexandra School, Belleville; treasurer— Mrs. Pat March, regional vice - president, Home and School Association of Ontario.

Education Week '74 dates announced as April 21 - 27.

Can Recycling Problems Municipal Responsibility

TRENTON — An expensive advertising campaign by five Canadian companies promoting the success of the recycling of soft drink cans from garbage in Ontario, was derided in a Wednesday Globe and Mail report.

Mentioned in the front page article as one of the five companies was Continental Can Co. of Canada Ltd., with one of its seven operations on Dufferin Street here.

Wednesday, plant manager George Fofonoff admitted he had received copies of the ads before they ran, but says the problem doesn't so much lie with the companies involved, but with the municipalities.

He says if adequate recycling of used soft drink and food tins is to be brought about, towns and cities must co-operate. The ads back up this statement: "The city of Hamilton will be the first to benefit from recycling. Other cities will follow," the Globe quotes newspaper ads.

Unless adequate recycling methodS are found, Ontario can makers could be in trouble. The environment ministry is to-mule on regulations governing tins this summer. Three options proposed by Environment Minister James Auld have given the five companies cause to worry.

The stiffest solution he has offered is a complete ban on soft drinks in cans.

But such a move will have little effect on the Trenton plant, says Mr. Fofonoff. The majority of tins produced at his branch factory are used to contain foodstuffs. A direct conveyor line connects Continental Can Co. in Trenton and the Quaker Oats pet food division plant.

Mr. Fofonoff explained scrap from the Trenton plant is sent back to M and T Products of Canada Ltd. and then on to International Iron and Metal for recycling.

The Globe article reports an improved metal separator is to be installed in July by M and T, a subsidiary of M and T. Chemicals Inc., in the United States. Itself a subsidiary of the American Can Co., mentioned as one of the five companies sponsoring the ad.

"I see nothing wrong with the ad as I read it," the Trenton plant manager said Wednesday.

He said to further the recycling projects now under way, Continental Can's Trenton plant has installed a dumper where people can deposit used tins. "But only the dedicated make use of it," he said.

The canning industry's advertising talks including the Aluminum Co. of Canada, Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. and the Steel Co. of Canada Ltd.), rests heavily on the success of Hamilton's SWARU project, mentioned both in the Globe report and by Mr. Fofonoff.

The city - owned 58.5 million Kcal Hamilton Solid Waste Reduction Unit (SWARU) will sell the separated metal to M and T for detinning and sale to the steel industry.

But the man who designed SWARU, Gordon Sutin, is reported to have said he felt the advertising campaign was "too flamboyant and they were going to get into trouble."

It is estimated even with the new separator in operation by the summer, SWARU's capacity will only handle Hamilton garbage. Refuse for recycling from other cities as implied by the ads — will require construction of similar units throughout Ontario.

But as Trenton plant manager of Continental Can, Mr. Fofonoff is confident of success across the province. "As far as I know the scrap tins are definitely recyclable," he said.

Pressure on Farmers To Switch to Bulk

Industrial milk shippers still using cans will see increasing pressure for them to convert to bulk, according to Prince Chairman Harry Evans.

Speaking to an information meeting designed for industrial shippers Mr. Evans said the amount of can milk shipped had dropped drastically in the past three years.

He noted that there was a 20 cent per hundredweight differential for bulk milk shippers and said he personally had lost $600 last year as a result of shipping by can.

Mr. Evans said that converting to bulk cooler pays for itself in transportation costs and bonus rates.

But the news that can shippers could expect continuing pressure to convert to bulk did not sit well with a number of the approximately 100 farmers attending the meeting. They felt something should be done to permit can shippers to continue.

Currently there are just over 200 can shippers in Prince Edward and one farmer asked whether they were to be kicked out.

Allan Ketcheson of Madoc, area 'representative for the milk board replied that can shippers would not be kicked out.

But he could not guarantee the future as some factories already were refusing to accept can milk.

Much of the reason for this is the maintenance problem for can washing equipment for which parts are difficult to obtain.

Larry Matheson, county agricultural representative said the average can shipper ships about 200,000 pounds of milk annoually. This same amount in bulk shipments would increase his income by $405 a year. He said there were various loan and grant programs available to assist farmers to install milk houses and the necessary bulk equipment.

Pinning It Down

Following our recent piece on jargon we have suddenly been inundated with material on the subject. Thanks to a reader in Tweed we even have a copy of Vernon Wynn Principle.* Yes, Richard Wynn, professor of education and chairman of the Department of Educational Administration at the University of Pittsburg now claims he up there with the discoverers of Gresham's Law, Parkinson's Law, the Peter Principle and earlier sociological and scientific truths. He says he is in the league because he has pinned down the jargon thing with this definition:

The esotericism of job titles must be escalated with the rising affluence of a society."

Most of us are familiar with the new terminology and Professor Wynn, who obviously knows his subject, offers some further feedback, as the contemporary saying goes. It began to jell with him — like the gold it all together man — one day when he received what he terms "a piece of junk mail from a local cemetery." He was immediately struck by the euphemistic language of the letter. "One was not asked to buy a cemetery lot but rather to "invest in a memorial estate." Again, an ordinary lot salesman was called a "pre-need counsellor."

And as it went on, right through the various callings of our workaday society, from "instructional materials centre co-ordinators" (school librarians) and custodians (janitors) to "financial securities advisors" (brokers) to "hygienic sanitation services" (termite eradicators) and even "consultants in the occult" (fortune-tellers).

The list is endless, so we will conclude with what Canadian Press correspondent Bruce Levett describes as "a prime example of the recycled rhetoric that passes for communication in official Washington." It happened like this — the cafeteria people at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided there were too many dishes on the menu and removed a few in the interests of a more economic operation. In breaking the news to its eating public, NASA explained that the cafeteria was "featuring a lower food profile."

Foreign Legion

A fascinating program on television was the CBC's recent presentation on the French Foreign Legion. Here was a glimpse of the legendary force in the places where it is still based — in France itself, Corsica, Madagascar, French Somaliland and Tahiti.

The traditional image of the Legion is that of men seeking adventure or escape, or both, men of many nationalities and with their petty criminals. This is largely true. But whatever the background of the legionnaires — and it is part of their esprit de corps that no one asks a comrade about his past or his origin — that they are a superbly trained and disciplined fighting force no one can deny. For the five years minimum the men belong their whole life is to the Legion itself, and then to France. Their credo, the well known one from an earlier time: "theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do or die."

As the handsome young sous-lieutenant who did most of the talking, aside from the program narrator, said, if his times came in some future action he would hope to go "eloquently." In an accent which had acquired Gallic overtones — a sort of cross between a Richard Burton and a Jean-Pierre Aumont — he spoke of legionnaires who had died to the last man, in actions past, from Africa to Indochina.

A young Englishman also described his life in the Legion. It was a good life, he said, and he stressed the camaraderie. A third man, whose accent was Northern Irish, said he had been with them all — the U.S. Special Forces, Canadians and U.K. paratroopers, but the training of the Legion was the toughest of all. In a new version of the parade ground, in the opening scene, to some haunting piece of music, the legionnaires looked very much the part.

A Dying Art

Recently Thé Intelligencer ran a picture of professional storyteller Jack Claybourn. With words and gestures, Mr. Claybourn is intent on reviving this traditional art. He believes also that classroom teaching can employ the storytelling style to good effect.

The picture itself speaks volumes as a rapt audience of young people watch and listen to what he has to say. Not everyone though has Mr. Claybourn's talents; where they do exist, in or out of school, they certainly add an interesting new dimension to schooldays.

Claridge's Retains Victorian Elegance Amid Change

London of the Seventies

By RICHARD JACKSON

LONDON — Everything is changing in the heart of the Commonwealth pow going through the greatest transformation in its centuries of history.

Across seven pages," the Times last spread its photographs of landmarks condemned to demolition as the old Victorian city is being wrecked and rebuilt from Covent Garden to Hammersmith, from dockland to Whitehall.

Among the 58: the Portobello Road Market, Blackfriars Station and King's Cross, the Mermaid Theatre, Africa House, Earls Court, the White City Stadium, Debenham and Freebody's, Gamages and Charing Cross Hospital.

Even Piccadilly Circus, Trafalgar Square and the Thameside view of Big Ben are changing.

Better board BOAC and come on over before it is all re made in the image of New York, Toronto or Chicago.

But some things will never change.

Claridge's is one a hotel fashioned in the grand manner that is a museum piece to the sort of luxury that no longer exists.

In the rain and fevers of April and early May there were more than 500 "servants" as they call them working full-time to pamper an average "house count" of 200 wealthy and privileged guests.

Open wood fires burned in the bedrooms, and downstairs in the halls of the elegant public rooms, logs burned quietly in the grates, although Mayfair is suspected to be a smokeless zone.

"They are smokeless logs," explained the hall porter with the air of one who knows that such petty restrictions never were intended for Claridge's.

If you go into Claridge's in the evening, which is the time to see and feel it, the thing that strikes you is the intimacy.

For although the public rooms are spacious with high vaulted ceilings and great fluted Roman columns, people are talking in their normal voices, neither whispering as they do at the Ritz, barging as at the Hilton, nor shouting, as for some extraordinary reason everybody seems to do at the Savoy.

And there is nothing so vulgar as a bar. But solitary guests (and visitors appear in fair casualty counts at some) may have a drink in the tearoom, where the name Hungaria an orchestra has been playing for as long as anyone can remember. It was playing when former Prime Minister Disraeli-baker stayed there when attending a Commonwealth Conference, and it is still serenading guests morning, noon and night.

Like everyone else at Claridge's, the orchestra prides itself on the personal touch. And everyone who ever asked for a tune may hear it every time he visits the hotel. One Conservative MP was so delighted to be greeted with Land of Hope and Glory every time he dropped in for a drop that when he died he left members of the orchestra £150 each.

In the evening all the footmen in the public rooms wear velvet breeches to make the resident and visiting dowagers grandees and exiled royalty feel just like old times.

In the upper halls, along the royal blue corridors with their scarlet-patterned carpets and gold and white fittings, there is absolute quiet.

The hush amid all this nearly 80-year-old Victorian classical splendor is disturbed, but only slightly, when you stand at the head of the grand staircase, looking down through the Roman arches and chandeliers and over the soft, warm carpets to the glow of the log fires, and just faintly hear the strains of the Hungarian emo-strra sifting up through the friendly chatter and dignified comings and goings below.

Not only does Claridge's put welcome publicity but it has to be the only hotel in the world employing a press officer, namurs the hall porter, with the sole responsibility of keeping the establishment out of the newspapers.

The atmosphere then is more like a club than a hotel.

The guest on his first visit—about 585 daily for a two-bedroom room — could receive the impression that every "servant" in the hotel not only knows his name but those of his grandparents, his home background, educational record and whether he likes his whiskey with soda or water or on the rocks.

Two or three visits later, confidgs the hall porter, he will come to realize that this first impression was quite true. For not only are guests carefully and unobtrusively scrutinized before their booking is accepted but every personal whim and detail carefully entered into a book.

Buckingham Palace puts up many of its official guests at Claridge's. It is custom to do so when Queen Victoria went to tea at the hotel and approved its velvet padded elegance.

The Rocky Path to Troop Reductions in Europe

By CY FOX

BRUSSELS (CP) — The road to agreement on mutual, balanced East-West force reductions in Europe will be long and rocky—scarcely of the type to sustain public interest in the doings of West.

One estimate at North Atlantic Treaty Organization headquarters here is that little progress will be shown in the first year of the negotiations—even if they get under way next September or October as expected.

The preliminary talks, aimed at setting up the agenda for the eventual conference, got under way in Vienna this week after 14 weeks of behind-the-scenes haggling.

In prospect is tough, detailed bargaining on every point that has to do with the strength of the rival NATO and Warsaw pact forces that face each other in Central Europe.

The preliminary haggling was concerned with the status of Hungary in the negotiations. The Soviet Union insisted that the Hungarians be merely observers. The Western powers sought to have Budapest made a full participant.

For the moment the Hungarians are in as observers only.

But the seven NATO representatives in Vienna, which include the United States, Britain and Canada, have reserved the right to reopen the question of Hungary's status at the conference proper when it convenes.

The distinction between Hungary being an observer or a full participant is more than procedural. It hides the real issue of whether Hungary, with some 40,000 Soviet troops stationed on its soil and 135,000 military personnel of its own, will come within the scope of whatever agreements are finally hammered out in the projected conference.

If Hungary ends up as an observer only, it will not be covered by a force-reduction agreement. The Soviet Union will be able to maintain its military outpost in that country, undiminished in strength.

It has been suggested that if Hungary is to be included as a full conference participant, and therefore a party to a force-reduction treaty, the West would have to pay a price. The price would be inclusion of Italy, with its NATO facilities and own national forces, as a full participant, subject to all the troop reduction arrangements.

Italy is not now on the list of multi-fledged Western participants.

The Western countries would perhaps rather concentrate on reducing Warsaw pact forces in such central areas as East Germany and Czechoslovakia, rather than argue immediately shifts the army of forces in more remote Hungary.

But Hungary would remain significant in that any forces withdrawn by the Warsaw pact group from countries close to the NATO frontier might be transferred to Hungarian territory.

And Hungary would be a good jumping point for any Soviet-backed military "move against key European buffer countries such as Austria and Yugoslavia.

The Hungarian question is just one of a variety of thorny matters which await solution, or at least compromise agreement, before an agreement on force reductions can be achieved.

The United States and the Soviet Union, the super-powers on each side, appear to desire successful negotiations, each for its own state interest. And therein lies the best hope for believing that the months—perhaps years—of tough bargaining ahead may not prove fruitless.

The Right to Strike—But Do Workers End Up As Paws?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The news has long since ceased to be an informative enjoyable media to listen to over breakfast. We start the day with a rising crime rate, interspersed with dope addiction. Inflation is everywhere and if we are fortunate enough to make it safely to our mecca of employment, without becoming a traffic statistic, we find the doors closed and picket lines in full force arrayed with placards criticizing the other half of humanities found within the, map's inhumanity to man.

Verbert Electric Company, which in the past has had the enviable reputation of being a firm to which Belleville-ites looked with pride, is now involved in a campaign of strike. Here the workers are pawns in the chess game between big firms, the company and the union.

The company, which by labor terms is considered a small concept for realizing a profit, has for the first time paid a dividend to its shareholders. This new method in which the name of the game is money has stirred a very uneasy atmosphere among the workers, who no longer feel secure at their jobs, in the fear that the method which they are using may fail into obsolescence or not afford sufficient returns on the money invested and their jobs be declared redundant. The union, as always the champion of the worker, is stressing job security, a master concept involving all locations in which they are the elected representatives, wages, cost of living, plus the usual fringe benefits.

Proposals have been presented only to be parried by counter proposals and so the pushing match goes on, with the competitors adamant and noncompromising. This war of nerves is suddenly a startling game with no communications.

The poor pawn suffers in this delay because his sustenance to maintain an existence has been forfeited in this labor arena, and will continue to be so until negotiations have been settled.

We are the most learned yet stupid animal this pile of old earth has had the misfortune to inhabit. How we will stay awake at nights scheming the demise of our neighbor, only to have to support his family. Then we are reaching for cake when there is bread at hand.

Cannot a forum be introduced where economy and union present their proposals and we, the poor illiterate masses, decide what concessions would be accept-able, so work may resume-products sold while there is still time left for them and life continue on its stumbling irresponsible way.

Seven Senators Open Probe Into Watergate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seven United States senators sitting on a fact-finding committee open today their investigation into the Watergate scandals of President Nixon's re-election campaign.

With millions expected to watch live television coverage, the four Democrats and three Republicans begin a lengthy process of public exposure of the men, the policies and the complex web of events that have placed in question the U.S. electoral process and the integrity of the presidency.

As testimony was set to begin in the Senate Caucus Room with its memories of hearings into the Teapot Dome scandals of the 1920s, the Watergate story still was spreading.

The Washington Post, which has won a Pulitzer prize for Watergate coverage, says the break-in and bugging of Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate was but one incident in a huge White House undercover operation beginning in 1969 and involving still unreported cases of political burglary, wiretapping, spying and "the Post says the mental-health records of Senator Thomas F. Eagleton were in the possession of White House adviser John D. Ehrlichman for several weeks before the story leaked to the press that the Democratic vice-presidential candidate had undergone electric-shock treatment for nervous exhaustion. Eagleton then quit the ticket.

Personnel of the FBI, the Secret Service, the justice department and the White House were used in a wide variety of clandestine operations, The Post says, quoting "highly-placed sources in the executive branch."

The first phase of the hearings will be limited to the Watergate bugging itself, although developing testimony may take senators into two other major areas of concern: political sabotage and illegal campaign contributions.

The resolution creating the investigating committee limits the investigation to conduct of the 1972 presidential campaign—Republican, Democratic and otherwise.

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., the committee's chairman, is quick to point out that the committee is charged to "prove or disprove" any and all accusations.

Prisoner at Collins Bay Kidnaps Clerk and Flees

OTTAWA (CP) — Lazslo Eper, 34, an escapee from Collins Bay penitentiary, apparently eluded a police search near Manotick, Ont., 10 miles west of here.

Eper escaped from Collins Bay, near Kingston, Ont., Wednesday and took 25-year-old prison clerk Ernest Hughes of Kingston hostage as he drove into the prison parking lot.

Mr. Hughes said Eper produced a handgun and ordered him to drive toward Ottawa. Mr. Hughes was released unharmed on regional road No. 8 near Manotick.

"Just as we were leaving the penitentiary grounds, he noticed the city police car parked near the corner," said Mr. Hughes after his release.

"He told me 'If you warn them in any way I'll kill you and the cops as well. It'll be a bloody day today.'"

Eper was serving a double life term for the 1967 shooting of an Ontario provincial police sergeant in Hamilton.

The two drove around Ottawa for about a half hour and were near the international airport when Epers ordered Mr. Hughes out of the car.

Boardroom Battle Draws Heath's Ire

LONDON (CP) — A political storm has broken out here over disclosures of high living and tax-haven payments in big business, described by Prime Minister Edward Heath as an "unpleasant and unacceptable face of capitalism".

Heath's public denunciation, unprecedented for a Conservative leader, was accompanied by indications the government is planning to "modernize" company law in the next parliamentary session. His blast in the Commons was followed Wednesday by a flurry of questions from both sides on disclosures in the Lonrho case, a High Court action revolving around a boardroom squabble of rare dimensions.

As a result of the court case, millionaire Roland (Tiny) Rowland, a colorful entrepreneur with a freebooting style of running Lonrho, a company with extensive mining interests in Africa, lost his appeal against the decision of eight Lonrho directors to fire him.

Rowland, who 25 years ago was sweeping platforms at London's Paddington Station, clashed with his board on several grounds, chiefly that he made major decisions without consulting the other directors.

Among such decisions was the hiring on a part-time advisory basis of former Tory Minister Duncan Sandys at a salary of £50,000 ($125,000) a year and paying Sandys a lump sum of £100,000 ($225,000) to sever the agreement and become chairman of Lonrho. The money was to have been paid via the Cayman Islands, a haven from Britain's inland revenue.

Sandys, the court heard, has since repaid the £44,000 ($110,000) he actually received.

Also unveiled in the High Court were details about sixfoot Tiny's style of living on company expenses, among them a $250,000 ($625,000) country mansion by the Thames River at Maidenhead.

The Royal Family hadn't narrowly avoided collecting some of the Lonrho mud. Princess Alexandra's husband, Angus Ogilvy, resigned his long-standing directorship in the company when the Rowland affair looked like breaking into a public row.

But a cartoon in The Times Wednesday showed a courtier-type confiding to another: "I just wish Angus had gone into something uncontroversial—like photography". Princess Margaret's husband, Lord Snowdon, still works as a magazine photographer.

Labor MPs were particularly enraged by the tax-haven disclosures and Marcus Lipton, a gadfly London MP noted for his nose for potential scandals, urged Chancellor of the Exchequer Anthony Barber to use powers to force companies to publish details of directors' fees paid abroad.

Seventeen Labor MPs signed a motion urging the government to end such loopholes as those afforded by havens like the Caymans. Criticism also came from some Tory backbenchers.

SEC Chief Quits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman G. Bradford Cook of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) has become the 11th Nixon administration official to quit in the wake of election irregularities.

Cook announced his resignation Wednesday, 15 minutes before he was due to testify secretly before a House of Representatives committee amid speculation that he would be asked to discuss the Robert L. Vesco case.

The house Commerce committee's investigation subcommittee postponed Cook's appearance. Representative Harley O. Staggers (Dem. W.Va.) told reporters the session was tentatively rescheduled for Monday.

Staggers, chairman of the full committee and the investigating subcommittee looking into SEC actions, would not say whether Cook's planned appearance was tied to the case involving the secret $200,000 contribution by New Jersey financier Vesco to the president's re-election campaign.

Cook was the latest official of the Nixon administration to leave his job because of disclosures about Watergate and other campaign deeds. Ten others before him, including Attorney-General Richard Kleindienst and White House aides John Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman, have resigned.

A Senate subcommittee spent about five hours with Cook in a closed meeting last Monday, following reports that under political pressure the SEC, in a lawsuit alleging Vesco and 41 others conspired to loot $224 million from a foreign-based mutual fund, made no mention of the Vesco donation to the

The Royal Bank of Canada

Dear Mr. Sinclair:

It is a matter of record that the growth and strength of the economy of the Province of Ontario is in large part due to the contributions of the independent businessmen.

The Royal Bank has always supported the independent businessman and has grown with him. I consider it appropriate at this time to re-emphasize the importance of continuing and, in fact, strengthening that support.

There is good reason for this. Firstly, there is a real need for vigorous growth in this section of the economy and financing is one of the vital ingredients. Secondly, a bank loan is one of the prime avenues open to the independent operator to obtain funds.

Therefore, I would like to stress that Royal Bank policy is to give special consideration to applications for loans from independent businessmen. To make this happen I am asking you to use your maximum energy and imagination to developing such applications. If we are able to help smaller, independent businessmen, then in the long run we will be helping ourselves and Canada.

Sincerely yours,

Here's an important letter we've sent to all our branch managers.

Broadcaster Speaks At Halloway U. C.

Nancy Edwards, assistant director of Broadcasting for the United Church of Canada had a story about her work to tell United Church Women Wednesday afternoon at Halloway St. United Church.

Her involvement as producer of the radio show: "From Us a Story" was described to more than 50 women.

"I find people who care about others and share them in my interviews," said Nancy Edwards.

Among those Miss Edwards has interviewed are: Jean Vanier, Dr. Phillip Potter, Sylva Gelber, Dr. Bruce Mc-Leod and Judge George Thomson.

Miss Edwards said statistics have proved people move from the areas where they were born. The church, she said, should provide warm, welcoming fellowship to all newcomers.

The whole inhabitive world Miss Edwards said is her concern. This broadcaster has her own radio program: "Nancy Edwards Reports". The guest speaker said her interviews cover a wide range of concerns.

UCW members were encouraged to do more for their community by Miss Edwards.

"Women can help with programming," said Nancy Edwards.

By helping to tell the "church story" Miss Edwards said the warm, welcoming fellowship will grow.

Going on the radio isn't difficult, said Miss Edwards. Though it may seem difficult to speak into a mike, anyone can adjust to it.

"No one in another community can help you as much as you can help yourselves," stated Miss Edwards.

The United Church Women were told to be good neighbors and show their care and concern.

Phone - in radio programs were reported by the guest speaker at lacking participation from the community.

"Why can't your group elect two women each day to listen to the open-line show and phone people and ask them to go on the air.

Miss Edwards spoke about her job in northern Newfoundland where she grappled by dog sled to visit those in isolated areas. When she returned to the mainland, she would go on the air for her program.

"This was a great communication," said the guest speaker. That radio program was a way of telling those people I just felt that I arrived back safely."

Successful Living More Hope for Alcoholics

By DORIS CLARK

Statistics indicate that close to 50 percent of alcoholics are employed. And therapists in the field have long claimed that because of their still strong attachments to home, family, colleagues and social standing, such subjects are particularly suited to rehabilitative programs.

Judging from the success of the Addiction Research Foundation's centre for employed alcoholics' program, 8 May Street, in Toronto, as well as from the response of industry to-date and similar programs in other parts of the country, there is reason for optimism.

Management of some of the largest business and industrial firms in Canada are coming to 8 May Street to seek help in setting up specific programs to detect the worker whose job performance is being impaired by alcohol, and to help him overcome his "health problem."

The Toronto ARF (which uses a "constructive coercion" approach) is pioneering in this field. The direction of the program considers that each community needs to identify its particular needs and mobilize to meet them and they must be be met on the basis that alcoholism has to be treated as an illness.

Dear Doris: I'm a guy who really needs advice like! My problem is that I smoke pot. My girl friend doesn't smoke pot, and she doesn't have anything against me doing it, except that when I get wired, I yell at her a lot. I don't know if you can get hooked on this stuff, or if I'm heading for trouble. I don't want to give my girl a rough time — Smoking Up.

Dear Smoking Up: If smoking pot is messing up your life, then yes, you should give it up. There's a branch of an Addiction Research Foundation near you, and the folks there will help you with all the information and advice you want. Or write again, this time including a name and address for me to reply to, and I'll give you the address of your nearest resource.

Life is for living: Not for poisoning your body and mind with artificial peppers-uppers. You are heading for trouble and that's for sure!

Dear Doris: Remember the young man who signed himself "Nervous"? He shook, he perspired, he wanted to turn and run when he entered a room full of people? It even affected his digestion.

He took advantage of your letting him know I would try to help.

Even though it meant a drive of more than a hundred miles each way, he began coming to see me, weekly. Now, after six weeks, he is cured of his phobias, is now working on broader areas of his personality. A fine young man! — Psychiatric Consultant.

Dear P.S.: Triumph of psychiatry! But I know you are working these wonders every day of the week.

Speaking in a microphone isn't difficult says Toronto broadcaster Nancy Edwards a microphone demonstration with Miss Clara Adams.

'It's Hard to Eat Right'

TORONTO (CP) — It is harder to eat well nutritionally today than it was in the past because there are more foods available to eat, Dr. A. B. Morrison said Monday.

"In the past, our food intake was largely composed of traditional foods. Today . . . food technologists can produce palatable processed foods, such as purified proteins, carbohydrates and fats that may be entirely devoid of other nutrients.

"There is a trend away from three normal meals a day and toward an increased use of snack food. Some of these trends could result in serious nutritional deficiencies."

Dr. Morrison is assistant deputy minister, health protection branch, department of national health and welfare. He was speaking at a one-day session on nutrition Monday sponsored by the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada.

Dr. Morrison said there are not many cases of spectacular forms of malnutrition in Canada, but there is evidence of what he called clinical subnutrition.

About five years ago, researchers found 400 cases of rickets in three hospitals in Montreal and Toronto.

"The cost of hospitalization for nutritionally related causes in one hospital in Quebec was estimated at a third of a million dollars per year."

Dr. Morrison said new legislation may be necessary to make certain foods and substitute foods are not nutritionally inferior to traditional foods.

He predicted nutritional labelling of food will be required in about a year.

He said Canada needs to evaluate the content of Canadian foods and produce an updated guide on Canadian dietary standards.

He said the results of the survey of Canadian eating habits called Nutrition Canada should be available in October.

Dr. Z.I. Sabry, consultant for Nutrition Canada, said in a lunch speech he believes a high-powered advertising campaign to teach nutrition is necessary.

He said the results of the survey spend half their budget on such a campaign, or contribute to a central fund to promote nutrition.

He also suggested that foods that contain nothing but calories should be declared dangerous. He said they should be labelled "This food does not contribute to a balanced diet."

'Monarchy' At W.I.

"Power of the Crown" was the topic when Queensboro Women's Institute members met Wednesday at the Women's Institute Hall.

Mrs. Roy Rollins addressed the group on the topic.

Later, materials and trims were displayed by local girls and commented on by Linda Alexander. The girls also modelled leisure wear garments they had made.

Marrying Minister—Write for Details

TORONTO (CP) — The newspaper ad reads:

"Marriage services by Rev. R. E. Leslie, Ordained and Registered in Ontario. Will perform your wedding ceremony. For appointment or free brochures, please call 871-4522."

Marrying people is Mr. Leslie's full-time occupation.

"I will go anywhere to officiate, anywhere within reason, and if it is legal—homes, apartments, parks, my home. I have weddings booked through to the fall," he said in an interview.

Mr. Leslie, 35, of Waterfleet, Ont., worked in three Ontario pastorates over a four-year period. He then became a social worker with the Family and Children Services of the Niagara Region. Last March he became involved full-time in marrying on request.

He makes no religious demands on those who seek him out. They can profess any religion or no religion.

"I never question them in that regard. A lot of them talk about it of course. I'll do it—he knows as they bring their licence.

"My position is what they believe with their life is their privy (Disciples of Christ) and what I believe is my privilege. I've married people whose attitude is atheistic. That's their privilege. I believe in my religious privilege. I've also done it for almost every Ontario denomination."

Mr. Leslie provides each couple seeking his services with a choice of a dozen different services, from short ones to full formal weddings.

"They sit down and pick out the one they want. If someone has a poem that means a great deal to them, they go ahead and read it. If they want to write their own they can do that."

He said if the service is held in his house in a small chapel he will receive between $25 and $35 "though they can give me $15 as at City Hall." When the wedding is out he asks $50.

"I don't know what the average offering is. It's less than $1,000 a year."

Most people who seek his services are from Toronto, London and Midland, though some have travelled several hundred miles from north of Mcconnee, Ont., or the United States.

Mr. Leslie said he encounters no problems from his fellow ministers. He said he has no idea of what they think of his activities.

He said he never worries about compromising his Christian religion by not asking for any religious commitment from anyone.

Ann Landers

Brother Bugs Steady Reader

Dear Ann Landers: I am 15 years old (a girl) and a steady reader of your column. My 17-year-old brother bugs me about R. He says something is wrong with a person who is interested in reading about other people's problems. When I told him I learned a lot from it he said, "That's not why you read it. The real reason is because you are a sadist."

He pointed out that in the last few weeks you have printed letters from a woman who asks if God is a Mormon and a Republican, three kids who are fighting about their father's money and he isn't even dead yet and a nut who says she can't get a job because the only people being hired today are blacks, Indians and homosexuals.

Please give me a good answer for my crazy brother.—Your Fan

Dear Fan: Next time your brother needles you about reading my column, ask him how come he knows everything that's in it?

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a registered nurse working in a large metropolitan hospital. I have noticed a serious problem in the realm of hospital care and decided to write to you in the hope that you would issue a warning.

The problem concerns the use of drugs by patients without the knowledge of the medical or nursing personnel.

Twice last week patients scheduled for surgery took "downers" on their own, to calm themselves. Without realizing it, they set themselves up for an overdose, since most pre-operative medication includes a "downer" in injectable form. When that patient is wheeled into surgery he has a potentially lethal level of barbiturates in his bloodstream.

I couldn't care less what these people do outside the hospital, but I implore all hospital-bound drug users to leave their junk at home. If a person who is dependent on drugs should find himself in the hospital for an emergency, he should confide the fact to a health professional and chances are good that the problem will be dealt with discreetly. The lives they save might be their own.—Concerned R.N.

Dear R.N.: Thanks for an important letter. I'd like to add a word. The same goes for booze. Alcohol is by no means Dear Drug in the United States and can be very dangerous when mixed with certain medication.

Dear Ann Landers: This is for "Constant Reader With Kid Problem." We, too, moved out where space is plentiful. When we started to remodel there was a lot of lumber and equipment around the place. The vandalism and theft by the young boys in our neighborhood was terrible. Also, they used our yard as a short-cut between two very popular homes.

Doing my landscaping, topsoil and rock work had me snowed, so I decided to hire those same energetic boys to help. We served soft drinks and lemonade. The work progressed beautifully. Before long I noticed the kids took pride in our yard and their work. Now they are careful where they park their bikes. Big brothers remind younger ones not to step on our grass. Dogs are called off our lawn. They look after our mail, the newspaper and the yard when we travel. We encourage them to use our croquet set. We do jig-saw puzzles together and roast marshmallows. It's nice to have them for friends.—Foetus

Dear Foetus: A new twist on old slogan. "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." Only you invited them to join you. Thanks for sharing.

Useless Vitamins Cost Millions

PRINCE GEORGE, B.C. (CP) — Canadians are spending millions of dollars each year on vitamins they don't really need, say two prominent family physicians.

The views were expressed by Dr. Peter Grantham of Vancouver and Dr. Ian MacPhail of Calgary during a recent meeting of the British Columbia division of the Family Physicians of Canada.

Dr. Grantham, president of the B.C. division, said in an interview that British Columbians are spending $30 million a year on vitamin E.

He said vitamin E does them no harm, but has not been proven to do them any good either.

"Vitamin E is being bought in this province by people who think it will cure heart disease, varicose veins or whatever," said Dr. Grantham. "And yet doctors have been unable to establish that there is any reliable, whatsoever between improvements and the taking of vitamin E."

Dr. MacPhail, guest speaker at the meeting attended by some 80 family physicians, said no one need buy vitamins if sensible food rules are observed.

He also said the meeting that pregnant mothers should watch their intake of vitamins such as A and D because these are fat - soluble and can damage the foetus if taken in large amounts.

"There is evidence that large amounts of vitamin A, about 25,000 international units a day, taken over a period of three or four months, can cause congenital abnormalities in some babies," he said.

The average bottle of multiple vitamins, taken on a one-a-day basis contains 5,000 international units of vitamin A per tablet or capsule.

MP Finds Close Look At Middle East Trying

OTTAWA (CP) — During the Commons Easter recess, Ralph Stewart (L—Cochrane) took his wife and two teen-age sons for a first-hand look at the Middle East.

At first hand look they got—not to mention being holed up in a Beirut hotel for four days while bombs, rockets and machine guns blasted around them. The Stewarts arrived within hours of an attack by Palestinian guerillas.

They returned to Ottawa late Tuesday night, tired from their vacation that ended when they boarded a cargo boat in Beirut and sailed away from the shooting. They flew home from Cyprus.

"The boys thought it was great," said Mr. Stewart Wednesday, referring to Martin, 18, and Kevin 15.

Originally, Mr. Stewart planned to vacation in Cyprus and then decided to broaden the itinerary.

The Stewarts were scarcely in their Beirut hotel before the first bomb went off next door, knocking out some of the hotel windows.

"Actually, we never felt we were in much danger," Mrs. Stewart said Wednesday. "You seem to look at it objectively."

Her husband said she was "very stoic," although with six other children back in Ottawa there was some concern about getting home.

The airport came under attack and there was no way for the Stewarts to fly out to make connections that would have brought them back to Ottawa last Friday.

The Cyprus-bound cargo ship was discovered through officials at the Canadian embassy.

Stanfield and Lewis Join PM In Opposing Death Penalties

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will have to wait at least four more days to find out what's going to happen to the much-debated government plan to reintroduce a partial ban on the death penalty.

The leaders of three major parties aired their views in the Commons Wednesday but there are more than 20 MPs still to speak before second reading of the bill ends.

Today and Friday are opposition days and the Social Credit MPs are expected to spend today talking about Local Initiatives Program grants. It's not known what the Conservative topic will be Friday.

Prime Minister Trudeau assured the House commutations for murderers of policemen or prison guards will not be automatic if Parliament approves a five-year extension of the partial ban on capital punishment.

A similar five-year period ended Dec. 29.

Fifty-five death sentences have been commuted since the last hangings in December, 1962.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield and New Democrat Leader David Lewis joined the prime minister in personal stands against the death penalty. Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, an advocate of capital punishment, was not in the House.

A free vote-party loyalties not binding on MPs—will be held at the end of second reading.

A resolution to abolish hanging was defeated in 1966 and the partial ban was adopted in 1967. Since its expiry in December, pre-1967 law has been in effect, permitting all murderers to be sentenced to death.

Prime Minister Trudeau told the packed Commons—most MPs were present and the public galleries were jammed—he believed capital punishment should be abolished because "wanton or unnecessary killing is evil."

"The evidence available to us all has satisfied me beyond doubt that capital punishment—killing—is not effective as a deterrent against murder. Therefore, it is not justifiable for use by society as a means of self-defence."

He said he was aware of widespread feelings that the present way of administering a life sentence may be inadequate and promised to kp an open mind to ensure protection of the public.

This was in reply to MPs who cited cases in which a convicted killer or rapist had repealed the system.

Mr. Stanfield agreed there was no statistical evidence to support claims that capital punishment is a deterrent to crime.

Mr. Lewis said society has been progressing "historically, philosophically and morally" away from the use of capital punishment—vengeance was an attitude that belonged to "savagery and not to a society of civilization."

The only Social Credit MP to speak, Henry Latulipe (Compton), launched a fiery call for retention of the death penalty.

He nearly emptied the Commons as attendance dropped at one point to just seven Liberals, three Conservatives and two other Social Creditors out of 264 MPs. Prime Minister Trudeau walked out about halfway through Mr. Latulipe's speech.

He said the government obviously is not interested in following the letter of the law; Justice had not been done when policemen were killed during a partial moratorium on hanging.

"The people of Canada ... have every right to insist that criminal offenders, once convicted and imprisoned, remain in prison according to law.

"By their very nature, reformatories are not pleasant places. Society intended them in the first instance to be secure; and this government intends to ensure that they are secure."

The justice committee already has been given the job of investigating the correctional system.

Full Severity of Law Faces Escapees--PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the public must be assured that sentences imposed on criminals are not "broken willy nilly by escape."

"The people of Canada, the judiciary of Canada, the police officers of Canada have every right to insist that criminal offenders, once convicted and imprisoned, remain in prison according to law and not according to chance."

He told the Commons that society intends prisons to be secure "and this government intends to ensure that they are secure."

He also promised to bring "the full severity of the law" to bear on prisoners who have escaped, placing some rehabilitation programs, such as temporary leave, "in jeopardy for thousands of other prisoners."

"Those who mock the desire of Canadians for an orderly law-abiding community ... will be shown that society is not only resilient but capable of protecting itself and of meting out whatever punishment is required."

But punishment must not be imposed in response to the motive of vengeance, he said.

"No society can be vindictive and remain healthy."

Another Prisoner Escapes in Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — Another Quebec prisoner escaped custody Wednesday while a spokesman for prison guards blamed inefficient administrations of prisons and improper classification of prisoners as the main causes of escapes.

Douglas Driver, 35, serving eight years at the medium-security Leclerc institute for parole violations and possession of burglary tools, eluded his guard while visiting his sick mother in suburban Verdun.

Marmora

Mrs. Florence McNatt and her daughter, Mrs. Bill Nayler of Madoc, returned home Friday from a two week holiday in England and the continent. They visited England, Belgium Holland, Germany, France and Luxemburg. Mrs McNatt reports that the weather was very cool and rainy while they were there and the crops little more advanced than in Canada. She felt the tulips were much nicer in England than in Holland. They found things expensive on the continent, particularly food. They attended two stage shows in London and one in Paris and also enjoyed a boat trip on the Rhine River.

Scarce Gas To Affect Cars Most

NEW YORK (AP) — Large American cars consume about the same amount of fuel to carry each passenger one mile as the Concorde supersonic airliner, the managing director of Rolls-Royce (1971), Ltd., said Wednesday.

And the Concorde consumes about three times as much per passenger-mile as the Boeing 747 jumbo jet, Kenneth G. Wilkinson added.

For this reason, he said, the effect of world petroleum prices will be more profound on automotive design and driving habits than on aviation. Wilkinson spoke at an aerospace symposium in London and his remarks were made available in New York.

Mistakes

MOSCO W (Reuter) — A Russian who wanted to protect his garden from thieves planted home-made landmines on its approaches but while drunk he stepped on one and proved its effectiveness. He was blown up.

Another Russian, determined to keep trespassers off his small piece of land, built a self-firing mortar-like weapon set off by trip wires. Trespassers stayed away but his wife set one off and became an invalid at the age of 25.

Sue Nixon

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A lawyer for Watergate burglar James McCord said Wednesday he is preparing to file a damage suit that will name President Nixon as one of the defendants.

"The president has said he is assuming responsibility," said Henry Rothblatt. "And what was done was done for his benefit as a candidate."

Three Saved

ORILLIA, Ont. (CP) — Two Simcoe men, both in their 70s, and an Orillia man were rescued from the icy waters of Lake Simcoe Tuesday.

Frank Smith, 73, and Horace Eley, 74, both of Simcoe were fishing about 100 yards offshore with William Tomlinson, 48, of Orillia, when their outboard boat sank.

Killed Bride

TORONTO (CP) — William Mulligan, 23, was found guilty of non-capital murder Wednesday in the stabbing death of his bride Nov. 11 while on their honeymoon.

Mulligan was sentenced to the mandatory term of life imprisonment by Mr. Justice John O'Driscoll after the Ontario Supreme Court jury brought in its verdict following eight hours' deliberation.

Want Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — The conference of Great Lakes congressmen Wednesday urged the House of Representatives appropriations public works subcommittee to authorize $3.26 million be spent during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1974, for the water navigation demonstration program on the Great Lakes.

Seek Suit

TORONTO (CP) — Pollution Probe at the University of Toronto has asked the federal government to prosecute four metal can producers for false and misleading advertising contrary to the Combines Act.

If the corporate and consumer affairs department fails to act, the group has instructed its legal associate, the Canadian Environmental Law Association, to launch a private prosecution.

Pollution Probe said the full-page newspaper advertising campaign promoted the use of cans for soft drinks at a time when the Ontario government is considering environmental restrictions on beverage containers.

Soon Caught

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — A Toronto-area couple was arrested Tuesday following a jail-break attempt at the provincial jail here.

Police said a man went over the wall at the jail by means of a rope and landed in the middle of several Brampton policemen who were waiting for him.

Police said Michael Daley, 33, of Downsview, a Toronto suburb, was charged with escaping lawful custody and conspiracy to commit a jail-break.

Charged in Downsview with conspiracy to commit a jail-break was Frances Mary White, 23.

Land Titles Freeze In North Continued

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories claimed a psychological victory Wednesday in the opening skirmish of a legal battle that will have far-reaching effects on economic development of the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Justice William Morrow of the Northwest Territories Supreme Court ruled that he will retain legal control of the case involving an attempt by the Indian Brotherhood to file a caveat—or declaration of interest—against 400,000 square miles of land covered by unsettled treaties. He also directed that the temporary land titles freeze imposed on the Mackenzie Valley in early April be continued until at least the end of July.

"It certainly is a psychological victory for the Indian people," said Brotherhood President James Wah-Shee after the case was adjourned until July 9, this is the first action we've taken legally, with respect to land on a large scale and we're happy with the way things have turned out."

A packed public gallery in the stuffy little courtroom in this Territorial capital heard complex legal presentations from six lawyers during the two-day hearing, with the main argument centred on Mr. Justice Morrow's jurisdiction.

The major contention by Crown lawyer Ivan Whitehall was that Mr. Justice Morrow had no jurisdiction to rule on the merits of the Indians' claims. The Crown wanted a ruling on the application to file the caveat with the land titles office while avoiding the broader issue of aboriginal rights which forms the basis of the Indians' case.

Mr. Whitehall argued that the broader issues in the dispute should be heard by a superior federal court.

Lawyers for the Indian Brotherhood said the judge has enough jurisdiction to deal with aboriginal rights claims. They want the case heard in a Northern court.

Both sides expected Mr. Justice Morrow to make a ruling on jurisdiction, but he reserved decision and ordered lawyers to be prepared to present him with all the evidence involved in the case in July.

Mr. Justice Morrow said he could not decide about jurisdiction until he heard the evidence from both sides.

"I have heard argument based on references to aboriginal rights, Crown title, Hudson's Bay land, the manner of the handling of patents and land grants, transfers involving the two governments—none of which is before me in concrete form as evidence.

"There has been very little agreement as to the true nature of these things."

The judge's decision brought an immediate protest from Mr. Whitehall.

"You are in fact entering on the merits of the case," he said.

Mr. Justice Morrow replied:

"I agree that I am entering on the merits of the case. I appreciate your position entirely. At the same time, whether rightly or wrongly . . . I think these proceedings should be completed."

The judge also said he was reserving decision regarding filing of the caveat because if he upholds the Indians' application, it would impose a virtual land freeze on the N.W.T. "At the moment, I'm not prepared to take those risks."

Dr. Andrew Thompson, one of the Brotherhood's lawyers, said that if the caveat was filed, years of litigation could be required to remove it, stalling Northern development. With the temporary land freeze, any party experiencing hardship can apply to the court for an exemption, something which would require full-scale legal action in the case of a caveat.

"We want to get to the issues and that's what is happening," Brotherhood lawyer Gerald Sutton said.

Potter and McNie Announce Medical Schools Can Build

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has lifted a building freeze on the province's five medical teaching centres to allow renovation of obsolete facilities. The freeze was imposed two years ago.

The centres will be allowed to start a 10-year renovation and building program, Health Minister Richard Potter and Jack McNie, minister of colleges and universities, announced Wednesday.

Dr. Potter said the ministries want to see emphasis first on nurses at Kingston and Ottawa because of the obsolescence of their facilities.

The centres, also located in Toronto, London and Hamilton, include facilities for teaching biological sciences, plus associated hospitals for clinical training.

Building projects will be subject to stipulations that there be four active treatment beds per 1,000 population and that half the doctors graduated from Ontario medical schools should be family doctors, the ministers' statement said.

Consideration also must be given to the education of other health workers such as dentists and nurses.

The health minister said he expects the medical schools to "consider other innovative features that would be conducive to producing alternative care" rather than restrict their thinking to active treatment teach-

Zoologists Discover Why Herons Tilt Head

NEW YORK (CP) — Two British Columbia zoologists believe they have figured out why herons and some other wading birds often tilt their necks at a sharp angle when standing or wading slowly through water.

The birds are not, they concluded, simply scanning the waters for fish or estimating distances between their needle-sharp beaks and the darting prey beneath the surface of the water.

The tilted neck seems to be the heron's way of overcoming a problem familiar to any swimmer on a sunny day — glare from sunlight reflected off the water's surface.

The discovery was reported in the April 20 issue of Nature, a British journal, by John R. Krebs and Brian Partridge of the University of British Columbia's institute of animal resource ecology in Vancouver. A sketch of head-tilting herons is featured on the cover of the journal.

Prof. Krebs and Partridge, a student assistant, observed the birds' characteristic posture during a study of the feeding behavior of the great blue heron along the Pacific Coast of Canada last summer.

The long-legged heron, which stands about four feet tall and is often mistakenly called a crane, was seen holding its neck at an angle for minutes at a time. Then, suddenly turning its head, it would strike at a fish.

The zoologists noted that the head-tilting occurred far more often on sunny days and only when the heron was facing at an angle to the sun—that is, not directly toward or away from it. They reported that herons "almost invariably tilted their heads toward the sun."

Two possible explanations were raised.

First, fish may try to avoid predators by swimming out of the bird's shadow and toward the sun. Thus, over a time, herons may have learned to lean out toward the sun and cut off the escape route. If that is true, herons should strike at fish most often immediately below their tilted heads—which the zoologists said is not the case.

Second, they considered a "glare hypothesis." If one stands in the water facing the sun at an angle, the sun creates a patch of glare on the water surface in its own direction. By moving their heads, the herons shifted the glare patch out of their line of vision without leaving a promising fish area.

Krebs and Partridge tested this theory by training a hand-raised heron to hunt for fish in an indoor pool. The "sun" was a 500-watt floodlight, the only source of light in the room.

The heron tilted its head in the direction of the floodlight. As the light was moved, the heron moved its head accordingly.

This led Krebs and Partridge to the conclusion, as they reported in Nature, that head-tilting seems related to glare and "presumably enhances the hunting efficiency" of herons in sunny weather.

Truce Team Happy With Its Pilots

RATOON (CP) — Despite a continuing controversy over the April 7 crash of two peacekeeping helicopters, officials of the four-country peace secretary force believe they have the best pilots and aircraft available in Southeast Asia.

Col. J. A. (Tex) Mitchell of Winnipeg, officer in charge of all air operations with the International Commission For Control and Supervision (ICCS), says the pilots used on peacekeeping flights are "competent in every respect."

Mitchell, whose family lives in Renfrew, Ont., said in an interview that both the pilots and the aircraft, provided by a firm called Air America, are examined and tested rigorously.

He would not comment on rumors that the pilots involved in the April 7 crash were unfamiliar with the territory which they were flying over when fired on by Communist forces. All nine people aboard one helicopter, including Capt. Charles Laviolette of Quebec City, were killed. The second aircraft landed without casualties.

Mitchell stressed that pilots who do not know a particular region are usually taken on a "familiarization flight" before carrying ICCS personnel. If this has not taken place, the pilots are accompanied by people who are familiar with the terrain.

Air America was awarded the ICCS contract by unanimous agreement of the four participating countries, Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland. But not a great deal has been made public about the exact nature of the company.

Air America officials here refuse to grant press interviews but sources in Saigon and several published documents provide a broad outline of the firm's background and operations.

On paper, Air America is owned by the Pacific Corporation, a Delaware holding company whose board chairman have been mainly retired United States military personnel, such as Felix Stump, former U.S. commanding admiral in the Pacific.

The American writer Elaine Sheppard, in her best-selling book The Doom Pussy, said Air America is generally regarded as the "stepchild, cousin and brainchild of the American Central Intelligence Agency (CIA)."

The company had its origins in China following the Second World War defeat of the Japanese forces there by the Americans and Nationalist Chinese. At that time, it was called China National Airways (CNA) and was partially owned by Pan-American Airways, with other U.S. firms involved as well.

After the war, some of the leading officials of CNA formed Civil Air Transport (C.A.T.) with the assistance of the U.S. government, the United Nations and some war surplus transport planes. It became the principal flag-carrier of the American-supported Chinese Nationalist government before its defeat by the Communists in 1949.

Following the Communist victory, it became the covert carrier for Nationalist Chinese and American security operations, primarily concerned with dropping and picking up agents from the mainland and scattering anti-Communist leaflets.

C.A.T. was also active in Korea, providing support for state department agencies and acting as an airlift contractor for the U.S. government.

In the dying stages of the French war in Indochina, C.A.T. furnished air crews and transport for the French part of U.S. military aid program.

French-Indochina war, C.A.T. C.A.T. later formed a number of subsidiary companies, including Air America, Air Asia and Southern Air Transport to support state department agencies and other U.S. operations in Vietnam.

The personnel are contract crews on high salaries, many of them Vietnam veterans who generally restrict the comments to: "We don't car what's in the back, chum, a long as we get our pay."

Schumann's Attitude Helpful to Canadians

PARIS (CP) — Although Maurice Schumann resigned his post as external affairs minister shortly after his March 11 election defeat, spokesmen at the Canadian embassy here do not feel this will endanger Franco-Canadian relations.

Embassy spokesmen say they feel Schumann was a "performer" and that it was Georges Pompidou's rise to power in June, 1969, which permitted "normalization" of Franco-Canadian relations.

In the preceding three years, these relations had been marked by incidents due to General de Gaulle's particular interest in Quebec.

This interest still exists under his successor but is only evident in bilateral relations between the French and Canadian governments.

Defeated by his Socialist opponent, 62-year-old Schumann resigned after directing France's external affairs since June, 1969, just after Pompidou came to power.

Schumann replaced Michel Debre in the government of Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas and last year retained his post under the Pierre Messmer administration.

Certainly Pompidou is largely responsible for the improvement of Franco-Canadian relations.

However, it was after a meeting with Schumann in April, 1970, that Mitchell Sharp, Canadian external affairs minister told the Commons that France and Canada had decided to forget their past quarrels and begin an era of "good relations."

Sharp also mentioned a "categorical statement" by Schumann which in effect said France had no intention of allowing involved in Quebec's internal affairs.

He concluded that the sincerity and understanding of his French counterpart would permit avoidance in the future of those incidents "which caused, without reason, tension and friction between us in the past."

Sharp was referring to French intervention in Quebec's favor in Canada's internal affairs, such as direct invitations for Quebec to attend international conferences and statements by General de Gaulle during his 1967 visit to Quebec.

The last time Sharp and Schumann met to discuss bilateral relations was at the beginning of March when Sharp was in Paris with a Canadian delegation to the international conference on Vietnam.

The two ministers met privately to review Franco-Canadian relations and Sharp said later these relations were developing normally to the satisfaction of the two countries concerned.

In Canadian circles in Paris, it was generally thought that Andre Bettencourt, deputy external affairs under the Messmer administration, would be appointed to succeed Schumann.

Saskatchewan Uses Many Miles of Pipe

REGINA (CP) — Farmers in Saskatchewan have installed enough water and sewer pipe to reach from the Pacific to the Atlantic, says Don Kaplman of the provincial agriculture department.

Mr. Lehman, farmstead equipment supervisor, says more than 25 million feet of inexpensive plastic pipe, the equivalent of 4,725 miles, has been sold since the start of the family farm improvement branch's water and sewage program in 1960.

He said about 60 per cent of the farm homes in the province now have hot and cold water at the turn of a tap compared with 1960 when less than 10 per cent of rural homes had water pressure systems.

Those were the days of the rope and bucket and hand pump.

Because water pipe in Saskatchewan must be buried a minimum of eight feet for protection from frost, Mr. Lehman estimates more than 15 million cubic yards of earth had to be moved to make trenches.

This is significant compared with the average gravel truck which hauls five to seven cubic yards, he said.

Pressurized water systems have played a major role in aiding agricultural diversification, particularly into livestock production.

There has been a "gradual increase in the demand for automatic, frost-free livestock waterers."

A total of 2,162 were supplied in 1972 bringing the total number of waterers provided since 1960 to 18,287.

During the 12 years, the branch has supplied 22,286 frost-free yard hydrants, 12,219 precast concrete septic tanks and 13,515 sewage jets, the branch's own invention for sewage disposal.

There now are 27,309 water pressure systems and 16,512 sewage pumps.

Mr. Lehman said the total value of material supplied during the last 12 years to farms through the branch is more than $317 million.

Dr. Potter Is Target For Nixon's Criticism

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

NAPANEE — Liberal party leader Robert Nixon has declared himself "severely and personally critical" of provincial health minister Dr. Richard Potter and claims the Bellevillian is "a passycat" in his job.

Mr. Nixon, speaking at the annual meeting of the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association here, said Dr. Potter was a "first rate member of the legislature and an excellent backbencher for the Tories," however.

The Liberal leader said the total health bill for 1973-74 is estimated at approximately $2.2 billion and noted that health costs have soared since the introduction of medicare. The ministry has been ineffective in controlling these increased costs.

"We used to worry about education and thought 'Well this has got to be the heaviest we'll ever have'," he remarked.

"But if you put the cost of all the education in the province in one pot it comes to about $2 billion; if you put in the hospitals, it's about $1.2 billion, the doctors about $600 million, distributed among approximately 9,000 doctors and add the cost of our psychiatric hospitals to the same pot you get $2.2 billion. That's over our most expensive public responsibility," he said.

Mr. Nixon pointed out the only cutbacks in hospitals to date have been the reduction of 1,600 beds and amalgamation of services. This is a further indication of poor planning, since beds cannot be closed without seriously affecting the quality of care, unless they were not needed initially.

Dr. Potter last March announced that he would initiate a cooperation program to control medical costs as well. We have been waiting two months but neither Dr. Potter nor the constraint package is viable," commented Mr. Nixon.

He said the public is suffering because of the ministry's mismanagement, which cost a total of $105 million last year through two "serious errors."

"I rejected the constraint package prepared by Dr. Kinloch which was designed to save $50 million in the first year. Because of this the ministry had to vote an additional $50 million to keep the Medicare plan afloat," he said.

"The other $55 million was lost when the Hospital Services Commission failed to collect premiums while it was changing over to OHIP," he added.

Mr. Nixon said Ontario residents are paying for these errors in an increased sales tax that promises to yield $280-million this year.

He observed there can be no control of medical costs as long as fee settings lie with the doctors themselves.

"The Liberal party has long been advocating government negotiation with doctors on physicians' fees," he said.

The Ontario Medical Association in a recent brief has suggested a joint committee on doctors' compensation.

"The government seems to be at last realizing that it has a right to negotiate fees with doctors," said the Liberal leader.

Mr. Nixon also remarked that the committee of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons has set out a formula for general practitioners limiting their net income to $51,840 annually.

"If the health ministry is responsible for policy, why has the profession been allowed to send a directive to doctors announcing new policy?" he demanded.

"If the medical profession is responsible for policy, why does the government administer Medicare funds?

"The other question is 'Will this formula drive up doctors' salaries to $51,840 because that is now considered an acceptable medical income?'

Mr. Nixon said he does not feel doctors are corrupt or dishonest but parts of the billing process result from the way in which the program is set up.

Political Table Talk

Ontario Liberal leader Robert Nixon joins local party organizers for lunch in Belleville on visit to Quinte-Kingston region Wednesday. Talking politics with the leader are local party presidents Charles Bates, (left), Hastings riding, and Jack Bush, Quinte riding.

Nixon Is Determined to Quit But Grassroots Support Growing

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Has Robert Nixon's announced intention of quitting the Ontario Liberal leadership taken on a tinge of enigma?

Mr. Nixon Wednesday left a meeting of leading Quinte-area party organizers with his own answer:

He's sticking by his decision to quit. But he reserves the right to change his mind and go before a nomination convention later this year if he chooses.

He reiterated his reserved fight over lunch and the air on an open - line radio program — during a quick trip to Belleville, part of a day-long visit in the Quinte-Kingston region.

To Liberal organizers at the Four Seasons Hotel he pointed out the party constitution calls for a leadership convention.

But, he's suiting himself whether or not he'll be a candidate.

"I don't intend to be — and I've already announced my resignation," Mr. Nixon said after the meeting.

"But," he added "you meet people in the party who are enthusiastic in support and you've got to give that some consideration."

Does this mean he might review his decision if a popular party member develops in support of another Nixon term?

Mr. Nixon said he didn't want to put it on that basis.

"It's clearly a personal decision," he said, noting he had led the party in two elections since 1968. "I think somebody else ought to have a shot at it."

Nonetheless, grassroots support for his continuation as leader was indicated by top organizers in the two Belleville - area ridings.

"In our provincial constituencies, there is unanimous support for Nixon," claimed Charles Bates, Tyendinaga township farmer who is president of the Hastings Liberal Association.

Mr. Bates noted Liberal upset victories in recent by-elections in Huron and Toronto as indications Ontario voters are seeking alternatives to the Davis government. After six years Mr. Nixon has "established" himself with the electorate.

"He's given good leadership — it's through his efforts we won the two by-elections."

Jack Bush, former Sidney township reeve and president of the adjacent Quinte riding, which includes the Belleville-Trenton urban belt, had much the same reaction.

"It's disappointing to run a couple of elections and not win. But I think he's just coming into his own," said Mr. Bush of the party leader. "I think he's missing the boat not to go on."

But earlier answering Interests to Radio Station CJBQ, Mr. Nixon also noted voters' response to his earlier campaigns.

The electorate, he said, "doesn't seem to want to elect me Premier. I don't seem to be a great addition to the Liberal Party. I'm not weeping about it. But I don't seem to have a sort of overwhelming ambition to go at this again.

"There'll be another election in 1975. I've gone through this twice. To do it a third time seems to me asking a bit too much — not only of my family, but of the people who have to listen to me."

Provincial Budget Said 'Damaging'

NAPANEE— Liberal leader Robert Nixon has termed this year's budget "the most damaging in the province of Ontario's recent history."

"It is a budget in which the treasurer, because of his concern for dogs and cats and other pets and his feeling that shrubs should not be taxed, has seen fit to bring in a substantial large sales tax now returning to the revenue of the province $1.3 billion a year.

"The sales tax alone nets $4-million a day and the increase in the sales tax (ten per cent) nets about $1-million per day over and above the tax," he said.

Mr. Nixon said the province's deficits never have been larger than they now are under premier William Davis.

There has not been a deficit of less than $400-million since he took office. The increased sales tax brings in $1-million a day, the amount of the interest of the provincial debt.

"We are getting a million dollars a day moving the sales tax from five to seven per cent, an increase of 40 per cent and that is just enough to cover the interest on the provincial debt which has increased so tremendously in recent years," said Mr. Nixon.

He said the deck is payable on all the borrowings for which the province is responsible including the borrowings by Ontario Hydro. The hydro rates now are going up but in a period of 30 to 50 years will pay off, the money borrowed.

Mr. Nixon said the treasurer also was introduced a bill enabling the province to borrow money on the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. A total of approximately $2-billion goes into the fund annually.

"It permits the treasurer to use our expected income to borrow money; the bill gives him the authority to borrow another $900-million this year."

"So, that's something about the state of the business dealings of the province of Ontario," he concluded.

Terry Larson Heads Liberals

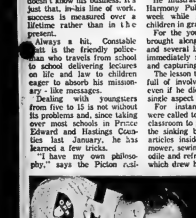
OPP Safety Officer's Job Is Never-ending



When Don Watt finishes a day on the job, he's never sure what he has accomplished.

Not that the OPP constable doesn't know his business. It's just that, in-his line of work, success is measured over a lifetime rather than in the present.

Always a bit, Constable Watt is the friendly policeman who travels from school to school delivering lectures on life and law to children eager to absorb his missionary - like messages.

Dealing with youngsters from five to 15 is not without its problems and, since taking over most schools in Prince Edward and Hastings Counties last January, he has learned a few tricks.

"I have my own philosophy," says the Picton resident. "Why give the kids a list of 20 do's and don'ts they may forget when you can give them half a dozen they will remember."

He illustrates his point at Harmony Public School last week while giving talks to children in grades two and six.

For the younger group, he brought along a model boat and several life - preservers, immediately stirring curiosity and capturing attention.

The lesson that followed was full of involvement and fun, even if he didn't cover every single aspect of water safety.

For instance, youngsters were called to the front of the classroom to pull objects from the sinking boat. Among the articles inside were a lawnmower, sewing machine, crockpile and refrigerator, each of which drew howls of laughter from the audience.

Of course, there was also a pail, paddle and life jacket on board.

The class reached a climax when it was time to guess the reason for the show and hardly a pupil had his arm down as all agreed: Don't put too many things in a boat.

Talking to the older students necessitated a change of pace for Constable Watt but, with the application of a little psychology, he was able to bring them, too, under his spell.

He began by "borrowing" a necklace and watch from two girls before turning to a subject that concerned all the 11- and 12 - year - olds' shoplifting.

While the girls squirmed uneasily, he got right to the heart of the matter by asking the students what might happen if they were caught stealing.

"The answers poured forth.

"Your heart goes thump."

"Your face gets red."

"You look bad to your friends."

"The store - keeper could phone the police — or his parents, or just tell you to stay out of his store."

Constable Watt described the perils of juvenile court, asking the students to imagine what life would be like with a 7 p.m. curfew for a year or two.

By the time the officer returned the girls' jewelry, 30 more youngsters had been aware of an important lesson not found in the standard curriculum. Constable Watt, his duty finished, could derive the subtle satisfaction of a job well done.

"The instruction is continued by the teacher, using the information left behind," he says. "With the grade two class, for example, they were printed sheets showing people shouldn't stand up in boats, should never switch seats, and other important rules."

Covering as many as nine classes a day, Constable Watt follows the example of his predecessor, Constable Brian Turner — recently made director of safety and information co-ordinator — by conceiving and producing all his own lessons.

The shoplifting talk was first presented after Easter in response to the recent outcreak of stealing among young persons.

Like everyone devoted to a cause, Constable Watt gets satisfaction from the knowledge that his efforts are helping to mold healthy minds for the future.

"It's a job that has to be done, and done well," he says.

The Safe Way

Constable Don Watt shows Chris Love, 8, the proper method of using a life preserver. The OPP officer was giving a boating safety lesson to grade two students at Harmony Public School.

Air Cadets On Course

Five air cadets from the 608 Duke of Edinburgh Squadron have been selected for summer power flight training.

Sgts. Dan Glover, Bill Johnston and Bill Kirkman and Cpls. Lewis Turcotte and Terry Wheadon, after completing a five - month ground school, averaged 88 percent in final examinations, surpassing the provincial average for the course by 23 percent.

Cadets will begin practical training in the latter part of July, spending 40 hours in the air to apply for power flight licence from the department of transport. Instruction will take place in Picton and/or in Prince Edward County.

Following successfully after eight hours flying, the cadets will spend the remainder of their time practising flying skills and then write a second examination for the department, similar to the one written for entry into the course.

The $600 cost of the course is taken care of by the Air Cadet League and donors.

Inspection Wednesday

The 608 Duke of Edinburgh Air Cadet Squadron will hold its annual inspection Wednesday, May 23 in the Belleville Armory.

Inspecting officer for the evening will be Lt. - Col. W. W. Garner, base administration Base, Trenton.

Circus Life Spans Generations

By MIKE PATTERSON
Staff Reporter

From 4:15 on yesterday, the Belleville Memorial Arena was packed with delighted crowds of youngsters and a heavy scattering of adults.

Usually the crowds are there to watch hockey or lacrosse. Yesterday it was the animals, acrobats, performers and clowns of Garden Brothers Three-Ring Circus that were winning the applause.

Presented by the Knights of Columbus Council 1078, the show went on yesterday in the best of circus tradition. Horses, dogs, elephants, leopards and a black panther were the animal stars. The human spotlight winners were the impressive show people who, more than many performers, live the show life every day in the show moves, often daily, from town to town.

Alberto Zoppe travels with two horses, 16 dogs, a rocker and a mountain cat. He is a fifth - generation circus showman and his young son joined the act when he was 12-months-old. His daughter was a performer at 18 months, and a second daughter, Tosca, is soon to start learning to balance. She is two months old.

Alberto is descended, father to son, from the founder of one of Italy's first circuses in 1812. Alberto moved to the United States in 1948 with Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus.

His horse acts were seen in Cecile B. DeMille's movie The Greatest Show on Earth and again in Thoroughly Modern Millie. He limps since a tall broke his hip and he stopped riding himself. He was somersaulting from one horse to another when the second horse fell.

"That was the only time I have ever thought of doing anything else—it felt like the end of the world for me," he said. Instead of leaving the show circuit he got dogs and trained them. "Then I had always liked horses — they have more flash," he said. "So I got them and trained the dogs to ride them."

The rocker was an Easter chick once, a present to his children. When it grew up it went in the act too.

"My wife convinced me to get a cat — I didn't really like cats," said Mr. Zoppe. "But I put it in the act too."

He lives for the audience. "When I'm in the ring and the people like what I do and applaud — that's the most any performer can ask," he said. "It's more important than money."

That's the difference between the real performer and the person who goes in for the money," he said. "If there is just one person or 10,000, it doesn't matter. You do all your act, the best you can."

The last most of the performers were European and born into the circus. Some have come in from gymnastic schools and so on, but 90 per cent of the performers in North America would be European born.

Lili Kristensen is no exception. Her father had a small circus in Denmark and Lili was born into the circus. Her husband is a performer and member of the union before he was four years old.

Billed as Liliana, princess of the Amazon, Lili puts the leopards and a panther through their paces. "I bought them from a Czech woman in California last year," she said. "She was getting afraid of the panther." A little while ago at San Francisco's Cow Palace the panther turned on the leopards and killed two.

"I love them and I think they love me too," she said. "It's just their nature to try to get you — sometimes they bet you to pet them." She had always worked with horses before joining the large cats.

Lili bought them after her fifth trapeze fall, the worst of her career. "It took me a year and a half to recover," she said. She, too, was a performer in The Greatest Show on Earth and several Walt Disney movies.

"I could never change my life style," she said of the circus. "My husband helped run a factory for a while but we couldn't stand it."

"You can make money in the circus if you're smart," said Lili and added with a grin: "I feel pretty smart."

And so they move on. This morning the caravans and trailers were gone from the arena parking lot. The circus plays in Brockville today, then on to Ottawa, Pembroke, Toronto and west.

They came together in April. Their contracts expire in September. After that there will be new contracts and new tours. But many of the faces will be familiar. "I know almost all the performers in America," said Alberto, "and many in Europe. We've performed together at one time or other, and probably will again."

It's in the Blood

Alberto Zoppe, (right), a star of the Garden Bros. Circus, dangles little Tosca (left), 2 months, on his palm. It will teach her balance for the day she will join the riding act. Giovanni (2nd from left), Alberto's son, has himself been in the act since he was a year old, the sixth generation to be in full-time circus. Bianchina is one of Alberto's dogs. A poodle-maltese cross, he was bred especially for the act. Dyed yellow with food coloring by Mrs. Zoppe, Bianchina rides horses and German Shepherds, climbs ladders and does balancing acts.

WHA Tightens Purse Strings

TORONTO (CP) — The World Hockey Association will continue its raids on National Hockey League talent but with a tighter hold on its purse strings, says WHA president Gary Davidson.

Davidson told a news conference following the opening round of the WHA annual meeting Wednesday that he expects the bidding war between the two leagues to level off.

"There are only so many players worth big salaries," he said.

One WHA official estimated there would be about 100 NHL players available for new contracts this season, but Davidson had a more cautious estimate.

"I believe there might be about 30 still unsigned.

"I would like to broaden our league's borders by signing about 30 to 40 players from the NHL for next season. I understand about a dozen have signed so far."

Davidson also smiled a note of caution with regard to signing of untried amateurs.

"It is worthwhile paying—let's say—$500,000 to a kid who is untried and doesn't deserve sell tickets for you? No it's not—it's a bad economic risk.

"You have to take into consideration what the 15-percent juniors players are requesting in the way of compensation and the bonuses and evaluate it with the possible signing of a minor leaguer who is also exceptional or not—but you know what he has."

Davidson said his league was concerned about reports that many NHL clubs had already signed players chosen Tuesday in the NHL's draft of over-age juniors.

The WHA will conduct its own draft of Juniors Friday and Davidson said he was afraid many of them may already be committed to NHL teams.

He said it was unlikely any WHA team would try to pay the price some top juniors, such as Denis Potvin of Ottawa 67s, are demanding. Potvin, drafted by the NHL New York Islanders, is reported to be seeking a $200,000-a-year contract.

"Really, some of the figures demanded are beyond the realm of realism," Davidson said.

In addition to the cost of the player contracts, the NHL pays the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association $3,000 for each of the first 32 players drafted and an additional $1,000 when the player signs a professional contract.

Davidson said the WHA has discussed a similar arrangement with the CAHA but the amateur association's demands have been excessive. He said the WHA signed "six or seven amateurs last year.

"If we get only six players a year from the amateurs, I don't think we should do a thing in the way of paying. If we get a fair portion, we should help.

"But right now, I don't think our league should help develop players for the NHL. I prefer to let the NHL develop our players.

Among other items discussed at Wednesday's closed meetings were player procedures and priorities and league expansion.

Davidson said details of further expansion moves will be announced "in the next two or three days."

"We are looking at seven cities . . . we have a strong interest in Vancouver and Edmonton and San Diego, primarily because they would complete a western division that would greatly reduce costs."

He said expansion to include Phoenix, Denver and San Diego for the 1973-74 season was a possibility. There are also strong interests from Detroit, Indianapolis, Baltimore and Miami, he said.

The 12-team league has already accepted an expansion franchise from Cincinnati which will join league play in 1974-75.

In today's draft of professional players, and Friday's draft of amateurs, Cincinnati will get the 13th and 14th choices in the opening rounds before switching to the top club for the second round.

The order of selection: Chicago, New York, Quebec, Toronto, Vancouver, Alberta, Minnesota, Los Angeles, Houston, Cleveland, Winnipeg, New England and Cincinnati.

Kip Keino Returns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After alarming the International Track Association by missing two of its meets, Kip Keino returned to the United States from his homeland of Kenya Wednesday, saying he planned to rejoin the pro tour.

Keino said in Nairobi that he went to Kenya for rest and personal business and learned as last weekend's Toronto and Philadelphia meets too late to enter.

He indicated he would pick up the pro track tour this Saturday at San Diego.

Jack Bisteflah, ITA executive vice-president, confirmed Keino's return, saying, "We haven't had any explanation why he was gone but we never had any doubts he would return."

Keino's duels with Jim Ryun in the mile were set as the ITA's top attraction and the former policeman and Olympic medal winner from Kenya has won $2,800 in six meets before disappearing.

Cosmos And Toros In 1-1 Tie

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Miami Toros and New York Cosmos played to a 1-1 tie in North American Soccer League action Wednesday.

The Cosmos took the lead six minutes into the second half when Randy Horton, last season's most valuable player, took a pass from Malcolm Dawes and headed a shot past goalie Reuben Mondoza.

The Toros tied the game minutes later when Warren Archibald sent a 20-yard shot past goalie Jerry Sularz.

The Cosmos now are 1-0-2 while Miami is 1-1-1.

AC Milan Tops Leeds

SALINICA, Greece (Reuter) — AC Milan Wednesday night became the first team to win the European Cup-Winners' Cup for the second time when they scrambled to a 1-0 victory over Leeds United of England in a whistling final in which two players were sent off in the final minutes.

The match ended in near tumult with Greek referee Dominique Michas giving England international Norman Hunter and AC Milan's Riccardo Sogliano their marching orders for fighting.

Several other players were booked and the crowd shouted, "Shame, shame" at the referee, who had earlier refused three Leeds' penalty appeals after Mick Jones was twice brought down inside the penalty area and a Milan goal was disallowed the ball.

In the end, it was Chiarugi's third-minute goal that decided the issue and took the trophy away from Britain for the first time in four years. He scored on a free kick just outside the Leeds penalty area.

Homer And City Winners

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Toronto Homer and Hamilton City came out on top Wednesday in the only two games played in the National Soccer league.

Toronto Homer blanked Toronto Polonia 4-0 with Mike Kanavas opening the scoring 44 minutes into the game on a penalty kick. Other scorers were George Akapoulis, Gus Testempasis and George Petalys.

In Hamilton, the City edged St. Catharines Heidelberg. Mike Kanavas opened the scoring 44 minutes into the game on a penalty kick, with other goals by George Akapoulis, Gus Testempasis and George Petalys.

New Pros

Tom Lysiak, drafted by Atlanta Flames during the NHL annual draft meetings Tuesday in Montreal, congratulates Denis Potvin (right) formerly of Ottawa 67's who was the first pick in the draft and was chosen by New York Islanders. Both players expressed satisfaction with the teams that had drafted them.

FR MAN NAMED . . .

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Widdrington of Barrie has been named public relations director of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

PATRIOTS DROP THREE

New England Patriots of the National Football League placed three players on waivers Wednesday. They were veterans wide receiver Hubie Bryant and rookies Stanley Cherry, a linebacker, and Joe Carter, a tight end.

Scotland Jolted

GLASGOW (Reuter) — Northern Ireland jolted Scotland's British soccer championship hopes with a surprise 2-1 victory over the Scots before 30,000 fans at Hampden Park Wednesday night.

This means that England need only draw against Scotland in the round-robin Saturday to clinch the title after beating Wales 2-0 Tuesday night and the Irish 2-1 five days ago.

Ireland never looked back after taking a 2-0 lead after 18 minutes. Winger Trevor Anderson centred for Martin O'Neill to open the scoring in the third minute and then Anderson added the second goal following a pass from Dave Clemenis.

Scotland, which beat Wales 2-1 last Saturday, came to life when former team captain Billy Bremner replaced the injured Pat Stanton five minutes after the interval. Bremner was playing for Scotland because a suspension prevented him from appearing for his club, Leeds United, in the European Cup-Winners' Cup final against AC Milan.

Ireland defended doggedly against Scotland's mounting pressure and it was not until two minutes from the end that Kenny Dalglish scored a consolation goal for the home side.

Peterborough Defeats Legionnaires

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Peterborough PCOS scored eight goals in the third period to defeat St. Catharines Legionnaires 15-10 in an Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A game Wednesday.

Peterborough trailed 9-7 at the end of the second period but scored twice in the first minute to tie the game and went on to score six more goals to run up a 15-9 advantage.

Guy Legault and Randy Bryan scored three goals each to lead Peterborough. Glen Ferguson, Steve Plunkett and Brian Evans got two each. Jan MacLee, Jim Johnston and Ted Floyd added one each.

John Mouradian led Legionnaires with four goals, Bill McKenzie, Bruce Richardson, John Howe, Tom Patrick, Mike McGrath and Scot Hudson got the others.

"I blew a two-foot putt, $12.50 at stn. Joe's friendship, and our club membership!"

Agreement Reached Soviet Tour Is On

MONTREAL (CP) — An agreement was reached Wednesday between the National Hockey League and members of the Ice Hockey Federation of the Soviet Union for an eight-game tour of NHL cities by two Russian teams.

The eight-game series will be played between Nov. 25 and Dec. 8. However, NHL President Clarence Campbell said it still is not known which league cities will feature the exhibition games, although all eight game will take place in NHL cities in the United States.

Campbell said applications had been received from 12 NHL cities for the eight games.

Neither Montreal Canadien nor Toronto Maple Leafs apparently expressed interest in playing host to the visitors in the middle of the NHL regular season and Vancouver Canucks have been lukewarm to the proposition.

Coley Hall, a director of the Canucks, said he had been away when the teams were polled about accepting a game, while Lyman Walters, vice-president of the club, said Vancouver "would take a game if it was available," but that he did not know how anxious the team was to get one.

While one club, Buffalo Sabres, already has set aside Nov. 27 as a date for a visit by a Soviet team, Campbell stressed that the final decision on what cities will play host was not to be made before the league's annual meeting here in June.

Campbell said the NHL had entered the agreement as a joint venture" with the National Hockey League Players' Association and that prior approval to negotiate with the Russians had been received from the players.

He said the Russians must get their respective authorization from their own hockey federation and from the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF).

Prime Minister Salutes Kings

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau took time off from his regular duties Wednesday to pay tribute to the achievements of the Kenmore Lumber Kings of the Central Junior Hockey League.

Mr. Trudeau dropped in briefly at a luncheon and told members of the Kings that "on behalf of the Canadian government I want to say how proud we are of you."

The Kings, winners of the 1972-73 CJHL championship, advanced to the finals of the Centennial Cup, but lost the best-of-seven series to against Portage La Prairie Terriers of the Manitoba Junior Hockey League. The team returned early Wednesday from the western series.

Mr. Trudeau met team members at a luncheon given by Lorne Hopkins (L—Renfrew North-Nipissing East) who represents Pembroke in Parliament.

The Kings set a record of consecutive wins—40—during the past season.

The team went on to defeat St. Paul Minnesota Volcans, Chatham Maroons and St. Jerome Alouettes to win the Eastern Canada section of the Centennial championship.

Rollins Construction Tuning Up for Opener

Rollins Construction, winner of it all in the Belleville Commercial Softball League last season when the team rolled to the regular season and playoff titles, won't present many changes in its roster this time around.

One major addition this season is coach Fort Coegan, who is marking his comeback to the senior softball whirl. He has been busy lately whipping his charges into top shape as the club prepares to defend its titles.

Back as manager is Russ Soule who reports that the team will play its first game this Saturday night in Cobourg. Russ says the plan is to get everyone into the exhibition game at Cobourg in preparation for the club's first Commercial League start Monday, May 21 when the Howard and I entry will be supplying the opposition in the second game of the opening twin bill at Alemite Park.

Soule said Monday that only two new players have been signed by the club to dive. They are Dave Akey, a catcher, and first baseman Bob Parsons who last season was with the now defunct Quinte Hotel entry.

The references are centre fielder Ralph Plane, pitching aces Ken DeMille and Ted Waite, infielder - outfielder Dale Duval, outfielders Ralph Dave Lott and Steve Ling, third baseman Wayne McTaggart, catcher - outfielder Carl Paul Goodfellow.

As well as fulfilling its commitments in the Commercial League, Soule says the team will also be taking part in several tournaments this season. This year necessitate the recruiting of two or three extra players to fill in for those who are unable to play in these weekend tourneys due to work obligations.

Gord Moorhouse Juvenile Coach

Things are definitely looking up for the Belleville Juvenile entry in the South Central Lacrosse Association.

After experiencing some difficulty getting players out to the practices, a total of 15 came to Wednesday night's workout at Quinte Secondary.

Not only has the team a good nucleus of players, but it has a new coach.

Gord Moorhouse was prompted to call Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association president Roy Payne after "noticing in the paper that Roy needed coaches".

Though Moorhouse has had no previous coaching experience, the Huntsville native came up through the city's minor system and topped his playing career off by playing for the junior as well as the senior Hawks.

Although the new coach does not emphasize winning, he did say that he hoped the team would get as close to the top of the league as possible.

"The major mistake a team can make is the lack of coordination," said Moorhouse. "If you are a little weak in passing, that one bad pass can give the other team the ball."

Moorhouse is looking for a team that plays steadily with as few mistakes as possible.

Tom Helm, a former Belleville Merchants Jr. B lacrosse player, had the coaching duties prior to Moorhouse's arrival as new head coach. "I'm glad that the team has a new coach," said Helm. "I was getting ready to give it up. Players weren't coming out after they said they would and when they did, it was difficult for me to coach them.

"Gord can be stricter with them because he doesn't know them as well as I do."

Helm said that the 15 players who turned up with sticks at last night's practice was the largest number out to date. He conjectured that the possibility of a sponsor and the nearness of the first game of the SCLA schedule brought the players out.

Though the season opener was scheduled for next Wednesday against Whitby, the opening game was pinned Roy Payne to cancel out of the commitment and postpone the outing to July 11. As a result, Belleville's first game will be at home against Picton May 23.

"This will allow the new coach to practice his players together at Memorial Arena" said Payne. "A school gymnasium doesn't allow for a good practice, nor can you set up lines and see how they play together."

Payne said that he should know by tonight whether the Juvenile team will have a sponsor for the upcoming season in SCLA play.

On Ice Bush Style Shortens Play Time

By AL ZABAS
Staff Sportswriter
(Trails of Series)

Though he felt he should have been given the opportunity to play more often in the Metro Jr. B playoff series, Dwayne Dayton provided the explanation for his only two outings in the 18 game battle for the league title.

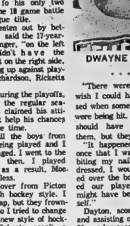
"I was beaten out by better players," said the 17-year-old right winger, "on the left wing, we didn't have the strength. But on the right side, I was coming up against players like Richardson, Ricketts and Wall."

Wall, during the playoffs, but also in the regular season, Dayton claimed his attitude did not help his chances for more ice time.

"I saw all the boys from Belleville being played and I got discouraged. I went to the wrong side then. I played worse and as a result, Moo-played me less.

"I went over from Picton with a bush hockey style. I liked to scrap, but they frowned on me. So I tried to change to a whole new style of hockey. The Bobcats aren't a rough team, they're a fast skating team."

Although Dayton felt that he did not fit in with the team at the beginning and during the course of the season, nevertheless the Picton Jr. C Quinte Canucks graduate "definitely" thought he could have helped the team.



DWAYNE DAYTON
. . . gives reason

"There were times that I wish I could have been dressed when some of our players were being hit. The other guys should have been helping them, but they didn't.

"It happened more than once that I was sitting there biting my nails. If I'd been dressed, I would have jumped over the boards and helped our player out. But I might have been decked myself."

Dayton, scoring four goals and assisting on nine over his 36 regular season games played mostly with Ken Holmes and Paul Lavender, will be eligible for a reunion with the Cats for another two years.

After a season with Picton's South Central Lacrosse Association juvenile entry, Dayton will "hope to earn a spot on the team next season."

UIC on Long End Of 20-4 Score

Public Utilities and UIC made their first starts in Industrial Softball League play this season Wednesday and when the seven innings were completed, the teams had chalked up 24 runs, 28 hits and 12 errors.

UIC came out of the losing end of the score, recording a 20-4 win. The winners held an 18-11 edge in the hitting department and took advantage of eight Utilities' errors.

Pete Hamilton and Joe Scanlon handled the pitching for UIC. For the losers, Gary Matier started and worked the first three innings with Brian Lebow coming on in the fourth. W Bulpit took over for Lebow with two out in the fourth and finished up. Bulpit closed the door on UIC in his three inning-plus stint.

A 14-run fourth inning highlighted the winners' attack. The Utilities' scoring was confined to two runs in each of the sixth and seventh innings.

Bernie Coughlin rattled out four singles for UIC while Mike Terris, Clint Halliday and Bill Healy checked in with three base hits each. Ron Emsbury homered.

Bulpit's double and two singles led the Utilities' hitters. Larry Mason connected for two safeties with one each for Bob Bogle, Jack Banville, Mashey Sly, Steve Ethier, Bob Hayward and Jay Miller.

Win 2-1

TRENTON — Pitcher [illegible] booted two balls out of the corner quickly [illegible] second half and Bill Lucas and Steve Reeder latched on to the corner kicks to put them into the Whitely Traveller's goal for a 2-0 lead Wednesday.

Although B111 Wilkinson scored against Belleville Parsons later in the half from a scramble in the goal mouth, the Parsons held on for the 2-1 win in their Bay of Quinte Soccer Association season opener.

A Present for Martin

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Billy Martin got the flu and flew the coop.

Mickey Stanley hit a sacrifice fly when the scene.

Gates Brown hit a two-run homer in his first game in left field, then left quickly.

It almost seemed as if Detroit Tigers had lost an American League baseball game and didn't want to talk about it.

But in fact, manager Martin's Tigers had just given him a special present for his 45th birthday—first place in the zany American League East via a 6-5, 10-inning victory Wednesday night over Boston Red Sox on Stanley's sacrifice fly off Luis Tiant.

It was the Tigers' first extra-inning victory in six tries this season, and it was the first game won by the Detroit bullpen.

In other American League games, New York Yankees defeated Milwaukee Brewers 11-4, Texas Rangers beat Kansas City Royals 2-1, Minnesota Twins beat Chicago White Sox 8-6 and California Angels defeated Oakland A's 7-2.

The Tigers entered the game in third place, trailing leader Milwaukee by one game.

Martin, who coached third base the first inning, left the dugout in the fourth inning and was sent home immediately after the game by the team physician who said the manager had the flu.

Reliever John Hiller was outstanding in picking up his first triumph in three decisions. He came in to pitch in Boston pinch hitter Ben Oglivie in the ninth with men on first and second and one out. Hiller struck out both Oglivie and Tommy Harper, then retired the side in the 10th.

"I'd just as soon have saves in the bullpen," the native Toronto lefthander said. "When you're in the bullpen it's more impressive to say you have so many saves rather than a 'W.' 'W's' sometimes can come pretty cheap."

There was nothing cheap about his win Wednesday. The three men he retired in succession in the 10th were the second, third and fourth batters in the order: Mario Guerrero, Carl Yastrzemski and Orlando Cepeda.

Pittsburgh right fielder Manny Sanguillen opened the gates for Philadelphia in the first inning.

The Phils loaded the bases on an error by Pirate second baseman Dave Cash, a single by Del Unser and a walk. All three runners scored when Greg Luzinski singled to right and Sanguillen's throw to the infield skipped all the way into the Phils' dugout.

Twitchell kept the Pirates in check until the ninth, when reliever Mac Scarce came in to get the last two outs.

16th Loss for Bucs

Philadelphia Phillies manager Danny Ozark has a cure for what's ailing Pittsburgh Pirates—a good swift kick in the pants.

Ozark's Phils scored four times in the first inning, then rode the five-hit pitching of Wayne Twitchell to a 5-3 National League baseball victory over the Pirates Wednesday night.

It was Pittsburgh's seventh loss in its last eight games, and lowered the Pirates' season record to 13-16.

"When you're in a slump like they are, you just have to kick yourself in the pants a little," Ozark said. "But they're still the National League East champions, and you can't consider them a dead ball club."

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets beat Montreal Expos 8-3, St. Louis Cardinals beat Chicago Cubs 5-1, Atlanta Braves beat Houston Astros 5-2 in 11 innings, Cincinnati Reds outlasted Los Angeles Dodgers 8-6 in 11 innings and San Diego Padres beat San Francisco Giants 6-1.

Aaron Getting Hate Mail

HOUSTON (AP) — There's one good thing about going on the road for home run slugger Hank Aaron of Atlanta Braves—he doesn't have to open his mail.

Aaron, who is closing in on Babe Ruth's career home run record of 714, is getting a steady stream of hate mail.

"If I was white, all America would be proud of me," Aaron said. "But I am black. There are some sick people in this world. Or else I wouldn't get the mail I do. These are sick people who thrive on trying to make other people miserable.

"It's very offensive. They call me 'nigger' and every other bad word you can come up with."

The Braves have a full-time secretary in charge of Aaron's mail, which is increasing as he gets closer to the record. And Hank reads it all.

Why read such letters and postcards?

"That's a good question, he said. "I don't know why. Except I always have, from the very start of my career. You get a piece of mail and you have to read it. I want to look at my own mail. I want to read what people are writing . . . what they think."

Aaron doesn't like the slurs he receives through the mail, but they won't deter him from his quest for the Babe's record.

"You can't ignore them. They are here. But this is just the way things are for black people in America. It's something you battle all of your life."

Before Wednesday's game against Houston Astros, Aaron had hit 663 career homers.

Lack of Rumors Puzzles Laurin

BALTIMORE (AP) — Trainer Lucien Laurin found it difficult to accept what was happening the cold Secretariat, and reporters outside his barn at Pimlico race track.

There was the usual activity as groom Eddie Sweat attended to his charge following a record-breaking victory in the $150,000-added Saturday's Kentucky Derby and Preakness.

Almost daily, there were reports about Secretariat—that his left foreleg was unsound, that he wasn't prepared properly for a top effort in the Preakness, and nobody broken down prior to the race that he had been scratched.

Laurin patiently denied every report, and then after the Meadow Stable colt ran the 1¼ mile Derby distance in a record time of 1:59 2-5, he said: "We guess that takes care of the rumors."

"The rumors had me worth it, though, to win the Derby. Now, I'd like to win the Preakness. I've never that."

Secretariat is an early 2-to-5 favorite to win the 1 3-16-mile Preakness. But Laurin remembers when Riva Ridge, another Meadow Stable colt, went off sharp, just right. With some top heavy 3-to-10 choice last year and wound up fourth as Bee Bee scored a major upset on a sloppy track.

Laurin said Secretariat, who will be breezed through the stretch Friday in a final tuneup, is sound as he approaches the Preakness.

"If anything," Laurin said, "he's in better shape than he was before the Derby. Not too much, is not as beautiful as he was here."

"He didn't come here to be second. If we didn't think Sham was the best, we wouldn't be ready to pack it in prematurely and bypass a shot for the $125,000 winner's share of he $181,

"We always worry about Secretariat," Martin said. "But we think we can beat him.

Sham's trainer, Pancho Martin, has a good shot prior to the Derby, but he's not back, we could have a good shot prior to the Derby, but he's not Saturday."

Secretariat's chief opposition is expected from Sham, Sigmund Sommer's colt who also broke the old Derby record but finished second, 2½ lengths behind.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

FRIDAY, MAY 18 . . .

Aries (March 21-April 19): Being near home all day pays well. People take sides and you can tell who is with you. Resist temptation to overindulge.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Get your mind off details and on to the broad perspective; then put in for whatever extras you deserve.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Your friends readily involve you with unexpected people and places. Proceed with due caution.

Cancer (June 21 - July 22): Comes an unplanned business test. Declare your feelings! Expect a day of diverse moods.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): The role of peacemaker may be yours. Do whatever you can quickly. Change scene for evening, pursue romance.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept 22): Slow going may in the long run produce sounder results, therefore have patience. Proceed at your own pace.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be open and lend the way—people need your example. Later, gather old friends for a reunion.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A survey of your resources and suggestions should recover lost items, outstanding loans, etc. Wind up a long dragged out project.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finishing touches are the thing now—you'll never again have this fine an opportunity. Tomorrow starts a different trend.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Square away details—leave no incomplete business, for next week you have extra work.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Distance is no barrier to communications—phone or write. Emotions are uneven, causing confusion.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Extra touches afford better satisfaction. Nothing much can solve family problems today. Continue to pray!

Fibroid Tumors Usually Harmless

By GEORGE C. THORTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: What is myoma uteri? The doctor says that is my trouble and second quite concerned. I had one told a year ago that it was a small fibroid and nothing to worry about.—M.E.

Dear Doctor: I am 39 and have fibroid tumors. I would like an explanation of the advantages and disadvantages of having the tumors removed, or of having a hysterectomy instead.

I now have one child and do not wish to have more. I understand that when hysterectomies are performed there is a chance the ovaries will develop cysts.—Mrs. M.M.G.

Myoma uteri is the technical term for a fibroid tumor, a sort that appears in the uterus with considerable frequency.

In most cases, when fibroid tumors are discovered, the woman is told not to worry, because in the majority of cases there just isn't anything to worry about. Very often these tumors remain as they are for years. Indeed, sometimes after menopause they recede in size.

The exception is that occasionally a fibroid tumor—myoma uteri, if you prefer that term—grows to enlarge, can cause discomfort, or bleeding. Rarely, over the years and sometimes even becomes malignant.

If any of these symptoms occur, that's time enough to get rid of the tumor. So in E.R.'s case I would take it for granted that her fibroid has begun to show some changes and the doctor judges the time has come to remove it.

To answer Mrs. G.: Sometimes a small fibroid can be removed from the wall of the uterus, yet leave the uterus itself in place. But this is not always possible. The size and location of the fibroid is one consideration. The fact that at times there may be several, or even quite a number of fibroids is another.

In such cases it is much more satisfactory to resort to hysterectomy—that is, removal of the entire uterus.

The fact that Mrs. G. does not want any more children, and is 39 is approaching menopause and that a child-bearing years, would indicate that hysterectomy would be preferable to trying to remove just the fibroid.

As to cysts of the ovaries following hysterectomy, that is one can happen, but it can happen without a hysterectomy, and in other words, ovarian cysts are NOT something to be expected after a hysterectomy.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: What is poly-migratory-arthritis? Is this common only among teenagers? —A.R.

It would be arthritic pain that moves from joint to joint, the prefix "poly" meaning "much" or "multiple."

If it is indeed rheumatoid arthritis, then it certainly does not affect only teenagers.

Rheumatic fever can cause this too.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: If one is exposed to german measles (rubella) when more than three months pregnant, is it harmful to the baby even if the mother does not get the disease? I had the vaccination three years ago. —Mrs. R.S.

No, no danger. That's why you had the vaccination—so the baby would not be harmed even if you happened to be exposed.

Dear Dr. Thorteson: Does the pill cause varicose veins? Or is it hereditary? One doctor says the pill is the cause and another says it is heredity. Also, do garter veins turn into varicose veins?—C.L.

Birth control pills don't cause varicose veins, but can in some cases cause trouble with clots if the varicose veins are there already. (Heredity is the major factor in varicose veins.)

No, spider veins do not turn into varicose.

The bidding:

|---|---|---|---|
| Pass | 1♥ | Pass | dbl. |
| Pass | 4♠ | Pass | 4 NT |
| Pass | 5♥ | Pass | 5 NT |
| Pass | 6♦ | Pass | 7♥ |

Opening lead—six of spades.

It's better to be lucky than clever, and here is a hand to demonstrate the point. The deal occurred in a playoff match between my team and the Curt Smith team to determine which of us would represent the United States in the 1973 world championship.

It was the first deal of a 128-board match and it was a harbinger of things to come. At my table, Smith and Greenberg got to a perfectly reasonable seven hearts and unluckily went down one when my partner, Jeff Rubens, led a spade — a killing lead.

Rubens reasoned that on the bidding there was a good chance of North-South holding nine spades, and he therefore chose a spade as the best shot to stop the grand slam.

At the second table, where our teammates — Andy Bernstein and my son, Mike Becker — held the North - South cards, the bidding was briefer. In fact, Bernstein got to seven spades in two bids. The bidding went:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♦ | Dbl. | Pass | 4♠ |
| Pass | 5♦ | Pass | 7♠ |

Bernstein (North) naturally started to think in terms of a small slam after his partner had doubled the preemptive three club bid (takeout), and he backed his appraisal with a cuetid of four clubs. When Mike showed more and more than a fair - to - middling spade holding in his hand, Bernstein happily went all the way.

Strictly speaking, seven spades was not as good a contract as seven hearts — there was a greater chance mathematically of a heart ruff with spades as trump than a spade ruff with hearts as trump — but spades was the winner, while seven hearts was the loser. The moral: It's better to be lucky than clever.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

Entertainment Briefs

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Ellington received an honorary doctorate of music Wednesday from Columbia University, where he was denied the Pulitzer Prize in 1965.

He was recommended for the Pulitzer by the music committee but the Pulitzer advisory board at Columbia vetoed the recommendation and no music prize was given.

Before Wednesday's graduation ceremonies, Ellington was asked whether he thought Columbia was making amends now by granting him an honorary doctorate.

"What has one thing got to do with the other?" he asked.

"I'm a pretty good criminologist; I read Sherlock Holmes when I was 14, but if I thought that, I'd have to have a devious mind, wouldn't I? I would never say that about a respectable organization.

"It's just like I said then—they didn't want to make me too famous too young."

Ellington is 74.

CANNES, France (Reuter) — The Cannes Film Festival woke up Wednesday with the showing of a 3½-hour French entry, La Maman et la Putain (The Mother and the Whore).

The producers had been ready for the theatre to be half empty by the time the film ended, but only about 10 per cent of the audience left and the film won frequent applause.

The film, set in Paris, gives a realistic picture of a love triangle.

The language is basic and director Jean Eustache told a news conference that he animated each character used little more than 10 different words.

By one count, a basic four-letter word was used 228 times in the film.

CHICAGO (AP) — The commissioning of a new opera by Polish composer Krzysztof Penderecki was announced Wednesday by Carol Fox, general manager of Lyric Opera of Chicago, as part of the company's celebration of the United States bicentennial in 1976.

At a news conference, Penderecki said he had no idea what the subject of the opera would be or whether it would follow the traditional operatic form. However, he said he would like the opera to have an American theme and a libretto in English. No librettist has been named.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Beginning May 25, the public will be able to see a $3-million relic of the elegant era when movie stars lived like movie stars.

The grandest of all the Hollywood mansions—Harold Lloyd's—now is undergoing preview tours and next month will be open to the public. Lloyd died two years ago at 71.

The visitors will see luxury that few of today's film stars can afford. For instance:

—A Versailles-like formal garden with dull houses that are completely livable.

—A huge living room with built-in pipe organ.

—Two 1924 Rolls-Royces and a 1935 Packard.

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Yoko Ono, wife of former Beatle John Lennon, won permanent custody of her child in a hearing here Monday, but the girl is still missing.

In a hearing in 1972, Lennon and Miss Ono were granted temporary custody of her daughter, Kyoko, by a previous marriage to documentary film maker Anthony Cox.

Cox disappeared with the child in December, 1971, following release on bond after serving one day of a five-day contempt-of-court sentence for refusing to produce Kyoko for a visit with Mrs. Lennon.

Ed Murr, local lawyer for the Lennons, said the permanent custody order still allows Cox visitation rights but the child must live with the Lennons—if she can be found.

The Lennons have been fighting a deportation order since 1968 conviction in England for March of this year. Lennon was refused permanent residence in the United States because of a possession of hashish.

Hospital Advertises Low Costs

TORONTO (CP) — The poster reads "Super savings in all departments" but it's not advertising a supermarket. It's hanging in the halls of Wellesley Hospital.

The poster is a gimmick of Dr. Charles Godfrey, chairman of the downtown hospital's cost-control committee, and it's designed to make employees aware that budgets must be stretched since the Ontario government placed restrictions on hospital budgets this year.

His campaign, called "Buck stop," includes flashy red and white posters advertising "this great opportunity" to "help our hospital meet its budget" and it asks employees to tell their "budget-stretching idea" to their supervisors.

The campaign has hit the front page of the 600-bed hospital's periodical with a picture of a buck—of the four-legged variety—pulling up short in front of the stop sign on the hospital's front lawn.

The caption, reads, "The buck stops here."

Dr. Godfrey said some departments have already made important savings. In the radiology department routine, non-essential x-rays have been eliminated.

He said a professor at the University of Toronto has prepared a summary of low-cost drugs for hospital doctors who can "stop the buck" by choosing a less expensive antibiotic when other drugs are equally desirable.

"As a result of the cost control campaign," Dr. Godfrey said, "we hope to be able to meet our budget restrictions without sacrificing the quality of our patient care."

Irish Tourists Few

Empty rooms in Dromoland Castle, a 19th-century home converted into a tourist retreat in the remote west of Ireland, reflects the fall-off in the tourist traffic in Ireland due to the troubles in Ulster, 10 miles dustry after agriculture pinorth. Irish tourism, the country's biggest single industry, was down 20 per cent in 1972. (CP Photo)

Nixon Urges Negotiations Over Doctor's Pay Ceiling

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon called Wednesday for negotiations between the government and doctors over fees and ceilings on payments under medical care insurance.

In a prepared statement, Mr. Nixon said it is time to eliminate the "chaos and confusion" over government financing that has resulted from empty promises and poor planning.

He said the ministry of health "has appointed many task forces and committees and still we do not have any clear policies on controlling health costs."

Mr. Nixon said the ministry has been completely ineffective in controlling health costs since the advent of medical care insurance.

Last year, he said, the health ministry made two serious errors that cost a total of $165 million.

Mr. Nixon said the ministry rejected a constraint package designed to save $50 million and lost another $55 million in premiums during a changeover in insurance plans.

He noted that in the past the government has not interfered with the setting of fees for doctors.

"As long as this is left to the doctors themselves, there cannot be any control of medical costs," he said.

He said his party long has called for fee negotiations between doctors and government.

The total health bill for 1973-74 is estimated at $2.9-billion.

East-West Travel Difficult in Africa

NAIROBI, KENYA (Reuter) — Often the quickest way to get from East Africa to West Africa is to fly north to Paris, London or Rome, change planes and fly south.

For even in this second decade of Black Africa's independence, east-west communications links across this vast continent leave much to be desired.

It is possible to fly direct from Nairobi to Lagos, on the right days of the week for transcontinental air services do — barely—exist. There is no railway across Africa.

There are roads. But the drive from here across to Nigeria would prove to be a stern test both of man and machine.

Now, however, all this is to change.

There are bold plags for a 6,000-mile Trans-African highway from Mombasa, Kenya, to Lagos, with a hardtop, paved roadway linking, like beads on a string, the nations of Kenya, Uganda, Zaire (the former Congo), the Central African Republic, Cameroon and Nigeria.

A network of feeder roads may bring half-a-dozen more states into the transcontinental hookup.

Recently, a co-ordinating committee of the six countries across whose territory the projected highway will pass met to discuss the plan at Mombasa, under the chairmanship of Dr. Robert Gardiner, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa.

Gardiner told participants the project could be completed within five years. The cost is not yet estimated, although preliminary surveys by British experts have shown that existing roads, and road alignments, could be utilized. This might mean a total expenditure perhaps as low as $50 million.

Irish Troubles Hit Castle-showing Trade

PERGUS, Ireland (CP) — The lofty, expensively decorated rooms of Dromoland Castle, designed as a North American tourist retreat in the remote west of Ireland, yawn empty behind locked doors although in normal times the spring season would be well under way.

But these are not normal times, and Dromoland Castle in its 1,500 acres of wooded parkland is opening later than usual this year because bookings are thin. The ghost-like air of This 19th-century baronial pile, formerly the home of Lord Inchiquin and now owned by an Illinois millionaire who spent $2.4 million on its conversion, is not uncommon among the hotels built for Ireland's soaring tourist boom of the late 1960s.

For a year now, since the worsening of the Ulster situation and its explosive side-effects in England and Dublin, vacationers have shown a marked reluctance to visit the emerald isle. Irish tourism, the country's biggest single industry after agriculture produced earned $240 million last year but was down 20 per cent compared with 1971.

The first disaster to hit the important British market, which still provides the bread-and-butter of Irish tourism, was the burning of the British embassy by a Dublin mob in February, 1972. British holidaymakers cancelled in droves. Aer Lingus, the Irish national airline, felt a chilly draft, and a perceptible anti-Irish feeling built up.

It was made worse by the subsequent bomb attack at England's Aldershot army barracks, which killed several civilians including mothers of families. The provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army later admitted responsibility.

When one travel writer observed some weeks later in The Sunday Times that touring Ireland with British "licence plates on his car produced as friendly a reception as ever, he received a mailbag full of abusive letters from 'irate Britons. The word "irate," he said, was one of the kindest epithets applied to him.

More shocks were in store for Ireland's volatile tourist trade.

"We took a bit of pasting in 1972, which was understandable," said an Irish Tourist Board official in Dublin. "But then an extraordinary thing happened. At the Ireland-England rugby match earlier this year, the England team got a five-minute standing ovation from the Dublin crowd.

"That was seen by thousands in England, and it did more for Irish tourism than we could have accomplished with £5 million. There was an almost immediate increase in travel bookings.

"When came those stupid bombs in London, and the murder of the three soldiers in Belfast. That really put the kibosh on us."

The March 8 bomb explosion, generally assumed to be the work of IRA Provisionals, injured more than 220. The machine-gunning of the British soldiers in Belfast—all non-combatants and two of them Roman Catholics—was brought about by two local girls luring them to their deaths, and caused shocked reactions in the Republic.

Tourism chiefs in the Shannon area of western Ireland have been advised by British newspaper editors they can forget about promoting Ireland in the British press this year. In an attempt to recoup some British package-tour custom, the Tourist Board has built in a special clause guaranteeing to refund the cost of "any part of the holiday found to be unsatisfactory."

Most efforts, however, will concentrate on inducing the Irish in Britain to come on reduced fare visits to their homeland and on wooing North American travel agents. The American and Canadian market also dipped last year, though to a lesser extent.

A Tourist Board spokesman said Americans are highly sensitive to visiting anywhere with a reputation for ire alloa with a reputation for trouble, even on the fringes. Canada, he added, were generally better informed and showed a greater understanding of Irish geography.

For Ireland's hoteliers, meanwhile, it means another year in the red, because the 50,000 visiting Irish expatriates expected on the cheap-fare scheme will probably stay with relatives or friends. Some hotels did close last year because of the Ulster troubles, but the Tourist Board says the number of major ones forced out of business can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Many more, however, are barely ticking over.

Heavy Hydrogen Finder In Demand at Eighty

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — On the calendar is written "Houston this week and a conference aboard the moon."

In June, Barcelona and the origins of life. In August, Australia and the solar system. . . .

A dozen other invitations on Harold C. Urey's desk are impossible to accept. He is 80, and the demands on his time seem to be growing.

"I feel a bit fragile," said Urey in an interview. "I still go down the stairs, all five floors, but I take the elevator up.'

A one-time Indiana farm boy, he has been a working professor and scientist since the University of Montana appointed him in 1919. At the age of 38, he discovered heavy hydrogen, the substance that combines with oxygen to make heavy water—the essential ingredient of the hydrogen bomb.

The Nobel Prize was awarded Urey for that discovery in 1934, and the honors, awards from governments and special degrees still come. His secretary recently counted 30 such medals and awards and 18 honorary degrees, including nine from foreign countries.

Among the latest, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration honored Urey for "pioneering cosmo-chemistry theories of the origin and history of the moon, the meteorites and the planets . . . and for major experimental contributions to the theories of the origin of life on earth and elsewhere in the universe."

Life wherever it exists is as close to the white-haired Urey as the orchids and peace-roses which he nurses with a painter's touch in the backyard of the home where he and his wife, Frieda, have lived since 1959.

In the same breath in which he talks of eons of time—he believes man's solar system began as a huge gaseous mass, contracting as the sun formed in the center, throwing off goblets of gas and solids that collided as planets—Urey is a modern man.

The rear bumper of his 1967 model car displays this sticker: "Don't blame me. I voted for McGovern." The Nixon administration's cuts in scientific research funds have saddened him, and he thinks the American people have allowed rioting by "a small handful" of activist college students in the 1960s to permit this.

"The social problems in the United States today are not just going to go away," Urey said. "All the people—American Indians, blacks, Mexicans, Chinese, Japanese or any other—are eventually going to be brought into this society by one method or another.

"And we had better try our best to make all of our people the best kind of people we possibly can."

Urey, who served as one of three program chiefs of the Manhattan Project from which the atomic bomb grew, believes "it's a very bad mistake to cut back on education so rapidly . . . I don't understand it at all."

Although he often laments that the hydrogen bomb was developed as a result of his discovery, Urey says another country would have done it later and heavy hydrogen "may allow us to have the fuel of the future, someday, possibly furnishing power for man for up to five billion years."

Challenge Is Facing Pipe Firms

VANCOUVER (CP) Canada's pipeline industry will have to change its use of capital and labor if it is to meet the challenge of laying a $5 billion natural gas pipeline through Canada's north, says the new president of the Pipe Line Contractors Association of Canada.

When pipeline construction begins, a trench nine feet deep and six feet across will be dug out of solidly frozen ground along 3,000 miles of uninhabited country.

"It's a monstrous task. It's so vast and so tremendously complicated that it's like a gigantic peacetime exercise in logistics," said Charles Ivan, newly-elected association president.

"There's 3,000 miles of pipe to build in Canada's most remote region. The pipe isn't only gigantic in its 48-inch diameter but also in its wall thickness.

"We're dealing with three-quarter-inch wall thickness compared with the .25 - inch and .45-inch thickness which have been standard."

This means the industry will have to use different, bigger equipment.

"One of the greatest problems will be coming up with a ditcher that stays in one piece that will continue to give high performance day after day," said Mr. Ivan, adding that such a piece of machinery may cost between $300,000 and $600,000.

The lifting equipment suitable for 36-inch pipe, the current standard, is practically obsolete for the new diameter.

Labor requirements must also change.

"Our manpower has to be retrained. They also have to be prepared for a task like this."

He said the project means labor relations policies must also change.

"But I am certain we can get our unions to realize the size of the project and the significance of stabilization.

"I think organized labor is mature enough to understand that the feasibility of a project like this is in their interest as well as our own."

He said he expects pipeline contractors will have to hire European and American help.

"You aren't going to gear the 30 spreads that will be needed in such a short time. I don't know if groups that would be ready now to prepare the size of spreads required."

Each spread is expected to employ 50 to 600 men.

Storm Misses Quinte

Snow Falls In New York

By MIKE PATERSON
Staff Reporter

A storm that dropped six inches of snow on central New York State earlier today and in some areas will not interfere with the plans of Victoria Day travellers north of Lake Ontario.

Treston Canadian Forces Base duty forecaster said the snow clouds were now dropping rainshowers as they headed east, south of Lake Ontario. Saturday's weather here, he said, would be sunny and milder, changing to showers by evening. Sunday's forecast reads cloudy and cool.

This morning, however, a state of emergency was declared in Oneonta, New York, in the aftermath of the unseasonal snowfall. Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation spokesman said 1,000 customers were without electricity overnight in the Utica area. Snow had downed trees, power lines and closed schools and roads in central New York State.

Although only an inch of snow was reported in Utica, the Niagara spokesman said it collected on treetops, toppling trees onto power lines and severing service. Numerous schools in the area were closed today.

At Oneonta, Boonville and Bainbridge, nearly 100 miles apart, six-inch snowfalls were reported.

"It's a real wild thing," said Barbara Douglas of Hamilton, N.Y., who said several inches of snow closed Madison Central School where she is a teacher. Schools were closed too in Waterville in Oneida County and the Sherbourne Earlville school district in Chenango County had to close school doors.

"Never in my experience have I seen this phenomenal weather," said Raymond Eckart, Utica area manager for Niagara Mohawk.

Already the storm has largely broken into rain showers, leaving southern Ontario unscathed.

Spacelab Repair Mission Delayed

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Astronauts and engineers worked today to perfect equipment and procedures for flying a delayed repair mission to the overheated Skylab space station.

The United States space agency had hoped to mount the unprecedented mission to erect a sun shield on the orbiting vehicle Sunday but decided Thursday it couldn't be done that soon and delayed the attempt five more days.

John Disher, deputy Skylab program director, said the mission might have to be put off an additional few days.

"That will depend on how well we do with the fabrication of the sails and extension devices and with the training of the crew to erect them," he said.

The sails are awning-like sun shades whose experts are developing and which the astronauts will carry as they fly to a linking with the 83-ton Skylab 272 miles above the earth.

They will take two types of shades and decide which would be the easiest to install after they reach the station and inspect it during a fly-around maneuver.

Disher said that, if possible, the astronauts will attempt to place a shade by manoeuvring the Apollo ferry ship within 10 feet of the Skylab and have one of the crew lean out the open hatch.

Using a long pole with a shepherd's crook on the end, he would attach streamers from a parachute-like bag to two points at the base of the lab. Conrad then would fly slowly to a point atop a telescope mount near the front of the big vehicle for another attachment.

A jerk of a streamer would unfurl the sail, an isosceles trapezoid with two sides 29 feet long and with one end measuring 20 feet and the other 10 feet.

If this is too risky, because of an ability to run risky because of jagged edges or other protuberances that might have been caused by the mishap that tore off the thermal shield during launching last Monday, an evaluation then will be made on the second approach. If this seems feasible, the astronauts will deck with the station and enter an airlock compartment, opening a hatch.

One of the astronauts would poke his head and shoulders outside the hatch and use a 42-foot T-shaped frame to extend a 20-foot-by-20-foot shade over the critical area of the workshop.

Much Work Outlined For House

OTTAWA (CP) — Government House Leader Allan MacEachen said Thursday the government aims to have Parliament adjourn at the end of June for summer vacation.

But he then announced a long list of business the government wants dealt with before the adjournment, some of it bound to bring prolonged debate.

Replying in the Commons to the Progressive Conservative House leader, Robert Baldwin, Mr. MacEachen said the government hopes to have the capital-punishment bill dealt with plus a bill reducing corporate and personal income tax, the government bilingualism resolution, a bill to increase family allowances, technical amendments to the Canada Pension Plan and a bill dealing with the distribution of parliamentary seats.

Brezhnev In Bonn

BONN (AP)—Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev arrived today for his first visit to West Germany and his first trip to the West in 19 months.

The West German capital has been turned into a virtual fortress for the occasion by a small army of protecting police.

The Russian leader's five-day summit meeting with Chancellor Willy Brandt marks, symbolically at least, a significant step toward healing the wounds of a war that killed 20 million Russians and more than 3½ million Germans.

Brezhnev is the first Soviet leader to visit West Germany and the most guarded official guest the Bonn government has ever had.

For Brandt, the visit represents a new milestone in the drive to improve relations with the Soviet bloc.

In Appreciation

Martin Boundy, conductor of last night's massed choir and band concert in Belleville Arena, was mobbed by young fans after the performance. Musicians from Hastings county elementary and secondary schools joined to present the first concert of its kind in the city. More than 250 instrumentalists performed in the massed band and 350 singers presented the 1½ hour program. Mr. Boundy, director of music at Fanshawe College in London, Ont., was brought to the city by the Hastings County Music Educators Association to direct the massed choir and band and conduct music workshops in the schools.

Davis Being Protected

Welch Asks Legislators Not to Query Security

TORONTO (CP) — A government spokesman said Thursday everything possible is being done to protect Premier William Davis, who has received nine death threats in the last three weeks. He urged members of the legislature not to discuss questions of security.

"Any discussion about question of security in itself creates problems," said Robert Welch, social development secretary.

"I have no intention of answering questions regarding security," Mr. Welch said. "The information I have is that even such conversations as this aren't in the best interests of those who are to be protected and in the public interest."

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon had asked Mr. Welch, who was acting premier in the absence of Mr. Davis, about protection for the premier.

The death threats were disclosed by Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier at the public accounts committee meeting Tuesday.

Mr. Bernier had refused to table flight log books of planes used by the premier citing reasons of security.

Mr. Bernier told the committee he was in the air he had been threatened in the last few weeks and added that commercial airlines like Air Canada and CP Air had indicated to the premier that they would prefer he not fly with them for security reasons.

Spokesmen for the Canadian airlines denied that statement and Mr. Davis, who has been in England all week heading a trade mission, travelled there last weekend by Air Canada.

Mr. Bernier also was questioned by opposition members about his statement that the major airlines were reluctant to carry the premier.

"A member of my staff made this known to me," Mr. Bernier said. "It was definitely not an official request from the airlines.

Mr. Welch said he had "no comment" on the airline question.

McCord Says Nixon Knew Of Clemency Offered Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — Watergate burglar James W. McCord Jr. testified today he was told President Nixon was aware of the offers of clemency and "the results of the meeting would be conveyed to the president."

He also said "at a future meeting there would likely be a message from the president himself."

McCord said the offer "was conveyed to me in 1973 by John Caulfield to assure my silence, my executive clemency by going off to jail quietly and I was told ... I would receive financial aid and later rehabilitation."

Then, McCord said, Caulfield assured him of the president's interest.

The meeting in January was during the time McCord and G. Gordon Liddy were on trial for the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate building.

McCord and Liddy were the only two of seven men originally charged who stood trial. The other five pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy, burglary and illegal wiretapping.

McCord did not say where the meeting took place. He made his statement when committee lawyer Sam Dash asked about political pressure applied to the defendants.

McCord told about the meeting with Caulfield and said:

"I was further told at a January meeting in 1973 that the president of the United States was aware of the offers and that the results of the meeting would be conveyed to the president and at a future meeting there would likely be a personal message from the president himself."

McCord said he got mixed up in the Watergate affair because he was told Attorney-General John N. Mitchell, presidential lawyer John W. Dean III, and Nixon campaign deputy Jeb S. Magruder had approved it.

McCord, taking the stand in the second day of televised hearings, said he was sorry he had been involved in the affair.

He repeated that he had received money after his burglary arrest, and that he was told it came from the Committee for the Re-election of the President and was given in return for his silence.

The retired Central Intelligence Agency employee said the CIA had in no way been involved in the wiretapping. "Quite the contrary," he said.

The committee's chief lawyer, Sam Dash, asked McCord: "Why, after a lifetime of work as a law enforcement officer, without a blemish on your career, did you engage ... in a program of burglary and breakin?"

McCord said there were a number of reasons, but "a very important" one was that "the attorney-general himself, Mr. John Mitchell, at his office had considered and approved the operations according to Mr. Liddy." He referred to G. Gordon Liddy, the alleged mastermind of the Watergate raid and one of seven men already convicted for it.

He said Liddy also told him that the project had been approved by Dean and Magruder. And he said another fellow conspirator, E. Howard Hunt, also had told him that Dean approve the mission.

The committee chairman, Senator Sam J. Ervin (Dem., N.C.) noted that McCord's testimony was hearsay, but said it is acceptable in such cases as establishing McCord's personal motives.

ICCS Said Facing 'Emergency Crisis'

SAIGON (CP) — The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) is facing "an emergency financial crisis," a commission sources said today.

The sources added that the commission no longer has enough funds to pay it's private contractors, although so far none of the contractors has cut off services.

It is understood that the ICCS owes almost $750,000 to Air America, which supplies all air services for the commission.

The ICCS has asked the four parties to the Paris peace agreement—the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong—to match their original contribution of 4.5 million French francs apiece as an interim measure. There has been no reply from any of the parties. The issue will be discussed at a meeting of the commission later today.

Helicopter Crash--Was It Accident or Incident?

SAIGON (CP) — The four member countries of the international truce team have reached fundamentally different conclusions over the nature and causes of the April 7 crash of a peacekeeping helicopter.

Sources in the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) said today the Hungarian and Polish delegations insist that the crash, which killed nine persons, was an accident and not the result of anti-aircraft fire from the ground.

Canadian and Indonesian representatives have concluded that the helicopter was shot down over a "contested area" while on an observer mission to Lao Bao, in the northwestern corner of South Vietnam.

A second helicopter fired on in the incident was able to land without casualties.

Killed in the crash was Capt. Charles Lavielette of Quebec City, two American pilots, a Filipino crew member, two Hungarians and an Indonesian and two Viet Cong representatives.

Sources say the Canadians and Indonesians found that the pilot of the accompanying helicopter had radioed nearby Quang Tri saying: "He's been hit by a missile and he's going down."

One ICCS source said this is "the single most important incident we've dealt with; It's unfortunate we couldn't come to a common conclusion."

The report will be formally discussed when the commission holds a "regular meeting Wednesday." But sources indicate it may be some time before discussion of the hefty document is completed.

Hungarian spokesman have said in the past that the cause of the crash was probably the pilot's attempt to elevate too quickly, pulling too much strain on the rotor. This position is likely to have been re-stated in the report.

There are reported to have been some differences in the views of the Canadians and Indonesians but sources said Hanoi were "masters of detail and nuance."

The Polish and Hungarian positions, while contained in separate statements, are basically similar.

The two East European countries have been referring to the crash as an "accident" since the time it happened, while the Canadians and Indonesians have always called it an "incident."

The Viet Cong who claim control over the area where the crash took place, also describe the crash as an unfortunate accident.

Sources say there was unanimous agreement that the aircraft were off course at the time of the shooting.

"Frankly I am doubtful whether there will ever be an agreement reached by the full ICCS on what happened," one commission official said.

In other developments, Canadian delegates pressed the Polish chairman of the ICCS today to pass on a formal request for an investigation of Viet Cong charges of renewed American bombing in the Iasmin of Binh Hoa, located in the area where the alleged bombing took place.

The investigation was agreed to unanimously by the commission Monday, but the chairman had delayed in forwarding it to Bien Hoa. The reasons for the delay were unclear but some sources said the Poles may have been awaiting the outcome of a Paris meeting between Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser, and the Viet Cong's Le Duc The before taking any further action.

Substation Is Planned

More than $400,000 may be cleared off the cost of water filtration plant extensions if city hall can appeal to the years of Canada's senior governments.

Necessary extensions and modifications to Belleville's water filtration plant are estimated to cost $2,383,400.

The Public Utilities Commission Thursday resolved to contact city council when it turn can apply to the Federal - Provincial Winter Capital Projects Fund to cash in on the saving.

The fund, in the case of an approved applicant, would loan the necessary monies to complete the project with the added bonus of picking up the tab for an idle labor costs.

During the six summer months, the fund would pay for 50 percent of on site labor and for the six winter months 100 percent. This would mean a saving for local taxpayers of $472,500.

The project was not scheduled to begin for another two years but is being advanced to take advantage of the government scheme.

Plant modifications would include a new water intake placed further into the bay than the existing intake and would increase the flow of water from 12 to 16 million gallons a day.

ARE YOU A QUICK EATER?

A major Agricultural Department report shows that diets at all income levels are, nutritionally speaking, much worse now than they were ten years ago. Hurried breakfasts and lunches are leaving little time for well balanced meals. A hamburger and a bottle of soda-pop are not enough to supply all the necessary vitamins and minerals.

Teenagers and college students are usually careless about their meals. Just one good vitamin capsule can insure that they get a daily supply of the needed vitamins and minerals.

Northern Talks Stalled

While negotiations between Northern Electric Co. Ltd. and three separate unions are jammed by a deadlock the six level further talks will be held at, representatives of 1,900 office staff laid off Wednesday in Montreal have said the move may be a lockout "in disguise."

Management says it has already said the Montreal office workers would have their jobs back as soon as the strike was over and the layoff had been made necessary by a lack of work.

A personnel department representative said there had been no layoffs to date at the Belleville plant. "I don't know what the situation is," he said. "It will call for some decision making depending on how long the strike goes on."

Also in Montreal, the company has obtained a Quebec Superior Court injunction limiting pickets to four men at each factory gate. The injunction was extended to May 25. Wednesday. Public relations director, John Bent, for the firm said no injunctions had been sought in Ontario.

The issue that has halted negotiations is a request by Northern Electric for 18 month bargain locally and its rejection by United Auto Workers. The union's chief negotiator, Robert Nickerson said the union would not be backing down.

The union and the company had agreed March 21 to master contract talks, he said, and the union intended to press that decision.

Mr. Nickerson said similar requests by the company for individual contract negotiations have not been made to plant chairmen representing office workers in London, Belleville, Kingston and Brantford.

Mr. Benet has said the company would not resume talks until they were held on a local basis.

The federal labor department yesterday released the opinions of conciliation board members Rudyard a contract dispute between the company and 630 telephone installers working from Sarnia to Ontario to British Columbia. The board has failed to solve the conflict.

Chairman of the board, R. G. Geddes of Toronto, said in his report that the "extraordinary situation of those involved, together with the nature of the proposals from both sides" had made conciliation impossible. He recommended an eight per cent wage increase retroactive to November 1 last year and another six per cent increase effective October 31, 1973.

Mr. Geddes also proposed a cost of living allowance to be paid from June 1, 1973, but said he opposed union requests for semi-private hospital and dental plans.

Union representative to the conciliation board, William Walsh of Hamilton called for 12 and ten per cent raises in successive years of a two-year contract and a cost of living increase of one cent an hour for every 0.4 change in the Consumer Price Index with October 1972 as a base.

Company representative, S. E. Dinsdale of Toronto, felt that rapid increases in the cost of living may justify a wage increase or a cost of living clause; but not both."

A total of 2,850 United Auto Workers members are on strike at plants in Belleville, Kingston, London and Brampton. At Brampton another 1,331 United Electrical members are on strike. Four Montreal plants are closed by strike action.

Orderly picketing continues at all plants.

Province Can Help Pay Hospital Bills

Not everyone can afford provincial government health insurance but they needn't be without medicare.

Many still go without coverage — and Belleville General Hospital officials are anxious to provide information that may solve the problem.

They have good cause to be involved.

Provincial government assistance is available to pay health insurance premiums for Ontario residents on marginal incomes.

But few seem aware such subsidies exist, say BGH finance department spokesmen.

The result is a vexing administration problem for hospitals: A steady flow of unpaid bills.

The volume of unsettled accounts is consistent and higher than may be realized, says Marjorie Smith, supervisor of patients' accounts.

Mrs. Smith estimates about 10 per cent of in-patients — around 1,000 a year — leave hospital with bills unpaid. Hospital costs start at $77.35 a day for a standard ward bed.

The number of out-patients treated at BGH's emergency unit is even greater, she says.

But, past experience indicates many defaulters are people without steady income or on low incomes.

"We think in many cases the problem is caused because these patients don't know they can get premium assistance," says Mrs. Smith.

In a way it's tragic, since these can be the people who also have more health problems.

What they don't know is that the provincial government provides assistance in its own Ontario Hospital Insurance Plan. The subsidies range from total payment of premiums for those with no taxable income to 50 per cent for low wage earners.

Single people with taxable income of $1,000 or less and families with taxable income of $2,000 or less pay half the regular premium rates.

OHIP premiums payable every three months are $11 for single persons, $22 for family coverage on ward rates.

The hospital is willing to provide full information on premium assistance and how to apply for it. A telephone inquiry to the patients' account department will result in the necessary advice, says Mrs. Smith.

One suspected reason why some people don't have OHIP coverage may involve work layoffs.

When a worker finds himself jobless, the main occupation is with unemployment insurance, often health insurance — which has been deducted, probably shared, by the employer — is forgotten, says Mrs. Smith.

The problem for BGH's accounting department begins after a patient has left hospital with a bill unpaid and coverage lapsed. If the bill is rejected by OHIP because the patient has no coverage, the often protracted process of attempting to collect the money begins.

It all results in "reams of extra work" for her department, says Mrs. Smith.

Like most other unpaid bills, hospital accounts also wind up in division court. Then, if possible, arrangements are worked out so the debt can be retired in installments.

Expansion Planned

TRENTON — Fred Parker, president of Bayside Dyeing and Finishing Company Ltd., Tuesday revealed his company is expanding production by approximately 30 per cent.

Further details will be released at a later date, he said. However, Mr. Parker increase, manpower at the said because of the "seasonal" Film Street plant has increased by 25 per cent.

In 1972, the company employed 50 workers. Now, there are 65 on the payroll.

Bayside Dyeing and Finishing processes textile fabrics.

At present the company is engaged in union negotiations.

Veterans Plan D Day Ceremony

By HOWARD KOKESH

The 29th anniversary of D-Day will be commemorated by the Veteran of Belleville Council on Sunday, June 3 at Westminster United Church, Walthridge Road. Small groups of the three veterans' associations and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment together with members of the 14th Field Regiment, RCA, who will be holding their reunion in the city, will attend the eleven o'clock service. Dedication of a memorial light to complement the honor roll that was dedicated last year at a similar service will highlight the morning activities.

The Concert Brass will provide the music and J. C. Lundberg and Padre Bram Humphreys will assist Rev. Frank H. Mitchell with the service by reading the lesson and delivering the sermon. Plans were also made by the Veterans Council to hold their Decoration Day service early in July this year with hope of stimulating more public participation than has been evident in the past when it has been held in late September.

The Veterans Council added three more names to the advisory committee at a well attended meeting held on Saturday afternoon. With the surrendering of the charter of Branch 597 Ex-Servicewomen RCL, Ina Rollins and Doreen Barney, who represented their branch were transferred to the advisory committee so that the council may continue to receive their help and advice in the future. Envoy Bram Humphreys was appointed honorary padre and also added to the committee.

The Duke of Edinburgh 608 Squadron Air Cadets will hold a rehearsal this week in preparation for their annual inspection to be held on Wednesday, May 23. Inspecting officer will be Lt.-Col. W. W. Garner, senior administration officer, CFB Trenton and the public is cordially invited to attend the inspection at 8 p.m.

Fred Parry and Ed Cornish were presented with their 25-year pins at a well attended general meeting of the Duke of Edinburgh Unit 381 ANAF held last week. Following the presentation of the quarterly financial statement by treasurer Les Shore, the members adjourned early to enjoy the Stanley Cup final in the lower lounge.

Sick comrades in Belleville General Hospital are: J. H. Boyle, room 701; Sandy Shackburn, room 630; Roy Foran, room 606 and Red Carmichael in room 616.

Sam's Sermon: This is an age when, if you miss a day's work, the government loses almost as much as you do.

Arena Clock Is Costly To Maintain

The electric time clock at the Dick Ellis Memorial Rink installed only two seasons ago at a cost of $3,000, is already causing problems and expense.

The question of clock maintenance was raised Tuesday at the recreation-arena committee meeting when two bills for repairs were up for approval.

Recreation Director Lorne Williams said the problem was one of excess humidity in the arena which affected the electrical pulse mechanism.

He said that since the clock was installed two years ago approximately $500 had been spent in maintenance. The same problem was being experienced at Peterborough with a similar type of clock.

Mr. Williams noted a solid state type clock, with no moving points necessary, was now available. Cost of this type would be approximately $5,000, less the trade-in value of the present installation.

Organization for Deaf Agreed to in Ottawa

OTTAWA — Dr. J. C. Desmeules, superintendent, Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville, was among provincial government representatives to a national conference which voted Tuesday to form a national organization to help solve problems of the deaf.

The organization will be concerned with promoting better job opportunities for the deaf, better health care and education, and encouraging development of local groups for deaf people.

The blind have the Canadian National Institute for the Blind working for them and the deaf need something similar," said Keith Campbell chairman of the conference.

The two-day event was organized by seven men working with organizations for the deaf. Two of the seven are deaf. About 200 delegates attended.

Special emphasis will be placed on developing a Canadian university for the deaf. Mr. Campbell said most deaf Canadians who want higher education must go to a United States university.

Taste-removing Filter Introduced

A new firm has been launched in Belleville to do something about the city's controversial drinking water.

Roger Cooke, owner of Cooke's Gourmet World, is marketing an activated charcoal water filter that he says is guaranteed to take the taste and smell of algae out of the Bay of Quinte water.

Mr. Cooke says it took him a week to adjust to the "smoky" water here after he moved to this city from Kingston. But his tropical fish never did.

"They turned belly up and died," he says.

His tropical fish experience caused Mr. Cooke to investigate a water filter system based on that of aquariums.

The city has already investigated activated charcoal treatment as the filtration plant but found it would cost millions to install and $250,000 a year to operate. Individual household filters were the answer, Mr. Cooke decided.

His company, Belleville Filtron, will guarantee the filter, install it and provide servicing for the same price that discount houses charge for the filter alone, he says.

The service will be a low-profit operation, according to Mr. Cooke, who is also offering filters to remove sulphur and iron from country water supplies.

Culhane at Conference

In Hamilton until Wednesday is Belleville Fire Chief Les Culhane. He's attending the annual conference of the Ontario Association of Fire Chiefs.

Hobo Believed Cause of Fire

Fire officials suspect a careless vagabond may have been responsible for a blaze that gutted a 30-foot trailer being used as a construction company office.

Reg Christopher, inspector, in the Belleville Fire Department, said this morning the fire appeared to have broken out in one end of the trailer. Only the springs were left as flames ate their way through the aluminum walls and roof.

"The door was destroyed so we couldn't tell if it had been broken into," said Insp. Christopher.

He said there was no evidence to show whether the fire was set intentionally.

The trailer, which also contained kitchen facilities and cupboards, had been used by Cobourg Construction at the site of the Belleville Utilities Commission's new reservoir on Herchimer Street until early last week. It was rented from Truck and Farm Supply of Belleville.

A spokesman for the leasing firm estimated the trailer's value at $2,000. He said Cobourg Construction had been using it as an office since last fall.

African Tragedy

The killing of two young Canadian women and the wounding of a 28-year-old American by Zambian army soldiers firing across the Zambesi River is one of those sickening episodes that reflects badly on all humanity.

There is violence enough in our world without flagrantly irresponsible and unjustified acts of murder such as this.

The fact that it happened at Victoria Falls, a Rhodesian tourist attraction which draws thousands of visitors every year from all over the world, would suggest that this might be another incident deliberately conceived by Zambia, in the war of nerves with Rhodesia. Troops from the latter country have been engaged in a war of containment against African guerrillas operating along both the Zambian and Mosambique borders. If tourists are dissuaded by this incident from visiting Rhodesia, the country could be deprived of an important source of revenue.

It is noteworthy though that the Zambian government has promised the Canadian high commission its "complete co-operation." Since regular troops and not guerrillas are believed responsible, the Zambian authorities are going to have some explaining to do.

Travel And Relaxation

Maybe the unlimited travel opportunities afforded by the auto and by commercial jets outweigh the simpler pleasures of "the good old days." Yet there is something about the literature of pioneer days and filmed reenactments that is very appealing.

We see it also in the art of times past — scenes in which people are strolling in the park or sitting by the riverside or enjoying a picnic.

Today such uncomplicated forms of relaxation have been replaced by the frantic rush from A to B — the greater the distance the greater the status — by car, jet or whatever. Getting there is no longer half the fun, for your trip may be jeopardized by delays, traffic, security checks and overcrowded airports.

Even a picnic is scarcely a picnic any more but as often as not a full course meal cooked on mobile equipment rivalling that of the home. The result: instead of encouraging fitness there is a tendency to put inches on the waistline which makes the likes of a long slog along the beach less comfortable as it can be potentially hazardous.

In winter, instead of memories of those old prints showing families skating on the local pond, we have snowmobiles and shock waves of mechanical sound. Oh well, if those earlier, supposedly simpler, times are gone we may still opt for relaxing pastimes relatively close to home: picnics and all, in the manner of an earlier era.

That is, if we can resist the temptation to go faster and farther, often exhausting ourselves in the process.

Spelling Bees

We are not too sure if spelling bees are a common practice these days, but it is encouraging to note the efforts of the Y's Men's Club in this sphere. And all the more so in view of the current flap over the educational basics — reading, writing and arithmetic and all that. The club has just held its second annual spelling bee and readers will have noticed the handsome trophy awarded eleven-year-old Audrey McSherry of St. Joseph's Separate School for her win in the Grade 6 category. This sort of thing is an excellent incentive to better performance by the young people.

Tulip Festival

Awful weather or not, the 21st annual Canadian Tulip Festival is under way in Ottawa. And a glorious sight it is too, especially across there from Dow Lake where there are more than 150,000 blooms in what is claimed to be the largest display bed in the world. Ottawa is fortunate in having this unique floral presentation — a legacy from Queen Juliana's sojourn during the war — to enhance still further an already attractive area of the capital city.

The Human Touch

Foreign Affairs: The Things You Don't Hear About

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The difficulty in commenting about foreign affairs is that they are rarely "public affairs" until a country's government or foreign minister chooses to make them public. Often they sound remote from the daily lives of our citizens. In fact they aren't.

Now this anonymity isn't quite true about national, local and especially sports events. Sports news these days should be allocated to the business pages, since about half of it deals with how much cash a player should get or an owner will receive for selling his club.

Any enterprising reporter with pen or better still tape recorder can invite himself in on half a dozen suburban coffee parties or luncheon convenes to lions and come up with a "survey" on high food costs and turn-in-the-street opinion.

But foreign policy? What is it? Where is it? Who makes it? Questions which scarcely suggest it relates to "me." During a recent visit to Washington, in what has become its "Watergate era," and with access to some of the powers-that-be or "that were" in that town, a retired diplomat over hotel room from the briefing session puts you back in the world of people problems heard in bars, shops and from taxi drivers, concern or pleasure with those things that make up the minutiae of daily life.

Recent years in Washington acquainted me on an inside track courtesy of State Department and White House briefings on Canada-U.S. economic problems, I purposely surveyed the Washington and regional newspapers pages reporting on local events.

And what did I read? Well, at Bailey's Crossbucks in, nearby Virginia, that secret terror of high rise apartment buildings which took place when a crane crashed through 23 storeys of a $200 million complex, splitting it in two, killing eight workers.

The U.S. Government's Environmental Protection Agency informed the U.S. car buyer that the Mazda rotary engine is the third "uneconomical" car engine to meet U.S. 1975 automission standards. "The Navy's Official Jazz Orchestra" to repeat the folksy term of a U.S. Navy press release, is no other than the famous U.S. Navy Band, announced its first public concert of 1973.

And most touching of all, that American lieutenant-colonel who brought home Mai Co the North Vietnamese spy from his longtime Hanoi prison, was honored at a ceremony by the Washington Football Rescue League. How about that!

And yet, if you look very carefully at all these local vignettes picked at random, foreign affairs impinges heavily on each one. On food costs, spokemen for the farmers, food packers and chain stores have now all told us food is a smaller item in the growing cost-of-living in Canada and the U.S.A. than in Britain, Germany or France. And they are right.

Building standards in America are constantly being compared with those here and in Europe, in Scandinavia for example. Japanese car imports currently accounting for about 15 per cent of American dealers' car purchases, are a major factor in the worst U.S. trade deficit in American history.

A trade bill to do something about this, plus expected tax and-bleavy Japanese-American trade talks on trade problems are already in the works.

As for little Ma Co, and Lieut.-Cdr. Davis, his former captor-owner, a prisoner for seven desperate years, they are just the tiniest, heart-tugging cutcosm of the biggest U.S. foreign policy move of all, that end of the war in Vietnam and with it, bringing the boys home from a primitive, drab and all-too-often cruel North Vietnamese captivity.

Costs Up—But Investors Will Benefit Too

Interest Rate Boost Has Silver Lining for Consumer

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumers Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The cost of borrowing money has taken another jump this week. This latest interest-rate increase follows the last rise by only five weeks.

What does it signify? That depends on who is explaining it.

The Bank of Canada, which initiated the increases, contends that borrowing costs are merely catching up with interest rates in other countries. In effect, says the central bank, Canada had become the Bargain Basement of international money market—and that was beginning to spell big trouble.

The bank's critics agree that there is trouble, especially unemployment, but they contend that increases in interest rates just make things worse.

Let's look first at the Bank of Canada's action, and the reasons for it.

The central bank, as the federal government's agent, has the job of keeping Canada's money system on an even keel. That job has grown more demanding in recent months because, for the first time, it has become cheaper to borrow money in Canada than in the United States.

(Canadian interest rates were kept artificially low last summer, when the federal election was approaching. U.S. interest rates, on the other hand, have been rising sharply, reflecting lenders dissatisfaction with U.S. economic problems and outlook).

Everybody loves a bargain—even big U.S. corporations. Parent companies in the U.S. have been taking advantage of our lower interest rates by encouraging their Canadian subsidiaries to borrow as much as they can from Canadian banks. The Canadian subsidiaries would then dutifully remit to their U.S. headquarters whatever funds were not needed for their Canadian operations.

The net result: Big U.S. corporations enjoy a cheap source of credit. Smaller Canadian borrowers find they can't get bank loans. That's the situation that the Bank of Canada is hoping to reverse.

Let's look next at the case against the Bank of Canada's action in raising the bank rate twice since early April, by half a percentage point each time, to its new level of 5¼ per cent. As the interest charged by the central bank on its extremely infrequent loans to chartered banks and investment dealers, the bank rate is largely a symbol. But when the Bank of Canada increases that rate, it is telling the banks that it believes that the general level of interest rates ought to be raised.

By mid-week, all major Canadian chartered banks had taken the central bank's hint and increased their interest rates.

In practical terms, the immediate effect is that would-be borrowers either change their minds (plans for that new plant are scrapped, construction jobs vanish, and potential long-term jobs go down the drain)—or the higher borrowing costs are accepted and passed on to the ultimate consumer.

In either case, the economic impact is felt directly by the individual Canadian, and not just by the fat cats of the business world. If you plan to borrow to buy a house, a car or any other major acquisition, you may face considerably higher mortgage or credit charges.

But there is always a silver lining. If you have funds to invest, the higher yield available to you should be a full percentage point higher than it was in early April. And if you own a bank—or stock in one—a significant increase in earnings is a sure bet.

The Free Church was reunited with the Church of Scotland in 1929 but many "Wee Free" congregations repudiated reunion and continue apart in the Scottish highlands to this day.

Can Our Chill Winter Be Made A Drawing Card?

By DON O'BEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

Efforts are to be increased in the U.S. and Europe to try and attract tourist busines.

Those who get involved appearently will study their work out soon.

An Air Canada official made a statement recently, which you may or may not have seen, in which he reported that few people across the water are interested in tourists to Canada as tourists.

Those who do visit here now, and the number, of course, is substantial, do so mainly to visit relatives.

And when you think of it just what good reason is there for someone from the other side to visit here?

We have some lakes, lots of lakes, fishing, a few good hotels and restaurants, Niagara Falls and some reconstructed pioneer villages and forts.

Not much, except for the Falls, that isn't at home, and much easier and cheaper to get outside.

One thought is that if we are going to try and sell Ontario and Canada outside this continent for recreation that best possibility might be in its winter potential.

One thing that is unique to this country is its winter. And we now are holding up a substantial winter recreation plant.

If we do get some European visitors they may be met with some remarkable menus if young minister of industry and tourism, Claude Bennett, has his way.

Mr. Bennett has been plugging the old theme of getting typical Ontario dishes on our menus. Something which has been talked about for years, but which has pretty well stumped everybody.

Perhaps it may be stumping Mr. Bennett also.

In a recent speech in eastern Ontario the best he could come up with was a suggestion for Seaway Valley Apple Dumplings.

And Bruce Peninsula Perch Fudge? Or Trent Canal Tomato Soup?

Well, if young man's genius, one would say, does not lie in haute cuisine?

Wherever he will stay in there pitching. He is a political athlete. He has come to play.

And he has shown he can learn.

When early in office Bennett speeches, and there were, and still are, many of them, had the ring of papal bulls. They spoke as though he had considerable, if not total, ownership of the world.

Like one excerpt: "From Kenora to Cornwall, my challenge is being picked up. And the lessons my ministry learned will flavour our future plans." (With compliings?)

His texts were so egotistical they were a caricature.

Recently the minister has started speaking from notes.

Perchance has somebody told god he isn't, God?

Hypocrisy Revealed

Kingston Whig-Standard
A Rhodesian woman journalist, Stella Hughes, recently accused Canadians of being pious hypocrites in their racial attitudes.

Canadians have certainly never been backward in their criticism of the racial policies of other countries such as South Africa and Rhodesia. But, according to Miss Hughes, by the average Anglo - Saxon Canadian, Christian and middle class, is totally blinkered as to the deplorable story of Canada's native people since the colonization of that part of North America. It never occurs to them that they themselves are colonists par excellence. This colonization, incidentally, was only a little earlier in parts of Canada than the advent of the white man in Rhodesia and was being after the first settlement in the Cape."

Miss Hughes then told a story about a Canadian couple who had visited East Africa for three weeks. On their return they became the local experts on African affairs. Drivers with these people in Alberta, Miss Hughes saw some run-down shacks — "Hovels" — and asked them with broken windows, ragged, barefoot children, wrecked cars in the yards. She asked who lived there and the man interrupted his explanation to point relations in East Africa to reply, "Oh, Indians."

Our mistreatment of native people has not been so blatantly cruel as the treatment of natives in some other parts of the world. We have succeeded in covering it up with a mush of ostensible paternalism. But the results have been the same: the ruin of a formerly self - sustaining, proud and happy people. And, as Bruce West asked, in his recent column dealing with Miss Hughes' charges, "Are there more Indians to deal with, if they were numerous enough to threaten our way of life, would we have refrained from the obvious brutality used in Rhodesia ?

Interest in conservation of existing timberlands and reforestation of denuded areas in the northern part of the county as a program to assist in retaining an adequate water supply was expressed by members of the Belleville Rotary Club at their regular luncheon meeting. ## Bible Digest

By H. B. EAGAN

"Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." — Isaiah 55:7

Isaiah is very serious enough about sin to forsake it, we can depend on the Lord to forgive us for previous sin freely and abundantly. Why carry the load of sin when the Lord has promised to lift it? Jesus said, "Come unto me and I will give you rest." Fa her, we come to you now asking for forgiveness, freely and abundantly and deliverance in Jesus' name, Amen.

CP News Roundup

Dief Home Donated to University

SASKATOON (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker donated the family homestead to the University of Saskatchewan Thursday, on two conditions:

—Revenues from the farm must be used to found a scholarship to encourage public speaking and debating.

—The land must be maintained "for all time as an example of the pioneer homesteading days of the first years of this century."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the land, when leased, provides a net income of about $1,000 a year which should provide a scholarship for not less than 99 years.

He made the presentation during the 62nd spring convocation of the university of which he is chancellor.

Abortion Limits

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Senate voted Thursday to outlaw abortions in the last three months of pregnancy except to save the life of the mother.

The bill, adopted 29 to 4 and sent to the House, also would require abortions be performed in a hospital in the fourth through seventh months of pregnancy. Abortions would be outlawed in clinics or other medical facilities after the third month.

Safety Envied

PETERBOROUGH (CP) — The standard of policing in Ontario is "the envy of many of our neighbors," Solicitor-General John Yaremko said Thursday.

"There are many people who come to Ontario so they can enjoy moving around safely and freely," he told a service club.

He said his ministry will "strive to supply the police with all the mechanical tools they need to carry out their duties, but they also need continuing public support and encouragement."

Teacher Boycott

TORONTO (CP) — Teacher protests against the provincial government's ceiling on education costs intensified Thursday night with Scarborough teachers boycotting a meeting with the borough's trustees over the issue.

Only 15 of the 1,700 high school teachers in the borough showed up for the meeting, adding fuel to a protest earlier in the day by North York borough teachers, many of whom booked in "sick" to express their displeasure over the spending limits.

Drug Ban Voted

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended Thursday that PMA, a powerful new amphetamine drug, be added to the controlled list of the Food and Drug Act, making its possession and sale illegal.

The jury, inquiring into the death March 31 of Ralf Claassen, 19, of Kitchener from an overdose of the drug, also recommended that needle and syringes should be obtained only on prescription.

Seven other persons in southern Ontario have died from what authorities believe is the result of taking PMA.

Jail to Hospital

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Steven Gaspich, 75, of St. Catharines, Thursday was ordered transferred from jail to psychiatric hospital in Hamilton while he awaits trial June 11 for capital murder.

Mr. Justice L. T. Pennell of the Ontario Supreme Court ordered the transfer after evidence indicated Gaspich, charged with the stabbing death of his wife March 10, would suffer a recurrence of mental problems if confined in jail here.

Skiing Damages

TORONTO (CP)—Sondra Fink of Toronto was awarded $2,777 at Ontario Supreme Court Thursday for injuries she suffered in a skiing accident in April, 1970.

The judgment by Madam Justice Mabel Van Camp was against Paul Greenlaw, 21, also of Toronto, who was found guilty of skiing recklessly when he and Mrs. Fink collided on a slope in Collingwood, Ont.

Mrs. Fink, 27, had sought general damages of $35,000 and her husband, Stanley, special damages of $10,000 against Mr. Greenlaw. Her husband was awarded $231.

Mrs. Fink's injuries included a broken leg.

Kerry Marshall ... New at BGH

BGH Nursing Director: Filling Community Needs

"It's not good enough to discharge a patient and say 'come back when you're sick again.'"

With that, Kerry Marshall, Belleville General Hospital new director of nursing services, gets into one of her favorite topics: the extension of nursing service to the community.

Miss Marshall, who was graduated from the University of Toronto's diploma course in hospital administration this spring, believes its time for nursing to move from the corridors of hospitals into the community, at least on an informal level.

"Nursing service must be part of the total health care team," she says, citing as one personal goal the establishment of good community relations "so the public is aware of our potentials and our limitations.

"We have facilities here we have to be sure the community is aware of the programs we can supply."

Adaption by a patient and his family to chronic illness, education in community resources to aid a patient, health and maintenance, mental health and maternal and child care are some of the areas nursing services can bridge between hospital and community, she says.

"We treat diabetics in the hospital, then discharge a patient and send him home. But he's got to live with it - it's not going to go away. Our responsibility shouldn't end at the hospital door," Miss Marshall says.

At 30, Miss Marshall has just completed a year of residency in hospital administration at York County Hospital, Newmarket, in conjunction with the University of Toronto master's level courses.

Former supervisor of medical - surgical nursing at Toronto General Hospital, she won her Bachelor of Nursing at McGill University, Montreal.

At BGH she's responsible for 340 full time and 41 part-time nurses, nursing assistants, orderlies and clerical support staff.

Currently it's her second week — she spends her days becoming acquainted with the staff and with BGH's unique "nurse - server" system.

"I'm becoming accustomed to the (Gordon) Friesen concept . . . It's a new concept to me although of course I know the theory," she says.

The concept, briefly, calls for hospitals to be designed so that all patient services, from linen to medication are decentralized from supply rooms on each ward to treatment rooms.

"I'm spending time in each area with clinical supervisors to find out what the ramifications are for the nursing staff, . . .

"To me it's a beautiful system."

Part of the beauty of the concept, Miss Marshall points out, is its adaption to team nursing.

Team nursing, she says, has replaced "efficiency nursing" where one nurse gave medicine, one took temperatures and so on.

"It's much more satisfying from a nursing point of view," she says. "It puts the responsibility at the patient - care level."

Team nursing is just one of the "astounding" changes in nursing in the relatively few years since the new director began nursing in a Detroit ghetto hospital across the river from her native Windsor.

"Technology has forced us to learn new methods and the hierarchal structure has been modified. Now we expect a nurse to grow into her own competency."

Miss Marshall says she misses nursing — "every nurse does" — but opted for administration because as a staff nurse and supervisor "I saw problems I'd like to take a crack at.

"My personal complaint has been that administrators don't keep up with the needs of staff nurses.

"It's exciting to help direct where nursing will go."

By the Consumers Association of Canada

Consumers' News and Views

If the purchase of a home occurred every year or so, buyers would become more astute.

They would know the ways in which the scales are so frequently tipped against the consumer. Consider, for example, just two aspects of the present National Housing Act in relation to the consumer. If you are buying a new home with an NHA mortgage loan, an inspector will call at least three times during construction to examine the work in progress. To protect you the buyer? No, to protect the lender who is providing the loan. As purchaser you get no firm guaranty of the materials and workmanship, though you may, of course, hire a competent examiner on your own account. When you buy an automobile, a refrigerator or television set, you get a guaranty that gives you a certain measure of protection, but there is no firm guaranty when you take on the much costlier and long-term-purchase of a home.

Again, if you get an NHA mortgage loan you pay a premium — presently 1 per cent (formerly 2 per cent) of the total loan, which goes into a Mortgage Insurance Fund held in trust and managed by CMHC. For whose protection? You the buyer? No, the MIF is for the protection of the lender in case of default, BUT — you pay the premium even though the lender already holds your mortgage. An Editorial in the October, 1972 edition of The Financial Post said that the "MIF is now worth an impressive 200 million dollars" while "claims outstanding against it are only 10 million dollars". Consumers have certainly paid handsomely to buttress the operations of mortgage lenders.

As for costs, the monster inflation has got completely out of hand. Here again, figures can be deceptive. A house which was priced $16,000 in 1960 and today costs $24,000 is not just 50 per cent higher, but more like 150 per cent higher because of interest and other charges. By rough rule of thumb, an increase of 1 per cent in interest rate adds 10 per cent to the capital cost of shelter, so that the 4 per cent increase in mortgage rates from the early 60s added a hefty 4 per cent to the consumers' long term bill for housing. The cost of buying the average NHA house actually doubled in the 1957-70 period. Back in 1960 about half of Canadian families could afford to buy the average NHA house — now the percentage is more like 10 per cent and in Toronto it is closer to 5 per cent.

Canadian housing needs to recognize and provide for alternatives, new approaches and other choices. It must put far greater emphasis on preservation of existing stock. Medium - density multiple housing should be favored against single units on one hand and highrise on the other. One of the most interesting new forms of housing on the Canadian scene is the housing co-operative in which a number of families, typically 50 to 100 or more in a fairly large city, jointly own a multiple project of townhouses, row housing or apartment units and operate it under the traditional rules of co-operative ownership.

Canadian consumers want and expect a range of choices to satisfy individual preferences and meet the great variety of situations and conditions across Canada, at a price they can afford.

Fashion Bazaar With Pizazz

TORONTO (CP) — A bazaar with pizazz is the idea behind the Fashionable Flea Market being held by the Fashion Group, Inc. of Toronto.

Designer members of the group have produced a collection of clothes to be sold at silent auction May 15. Customers will browse for bargains among fashions, jewelry, cosmetics donated by makers of some of the better labels. Underpriced prizes are a Fiat and a Rolex watch by Joe Rosenthal.

Co-chairman Merle Parker says, "We wondered what we could do that would be interesting and different, fund raising with taste and flair. We didn't see ourselves in the ordinary bazaar category. One wanted to involve fashion.

"Someone said, what about a fashion flea market, and somebody said, what about a fashionable flea market."

The group is arranging all kinds of working skills to bear on the market. A member display expert will help set up boutiques and bridal corners. A member lighting expert will be producing special lighting effects. And, at the intensely practical level, members are sorting and pricing the donations that will be sold.

Mrs. Parker says, "Almost everything has been used. Everything is clean. We pay for nothing that is sold. Our expenses are renting Casa Loma, where the market will be held, paying for security and deliveries."

The Fashion Group is a non-commercial association of women who work in the fashion business. Mrs. Parker is a fashion co-ordinator. Co-chairman Claire Dumas has a hat shop.

Cathy Carroll, a committee member, says the donations to the market are good business.

"Through the years, we do an awful lot of shows, and we get in touch with the designers and manufacturers. And they think the Fashion Group is a kind of stamp of approval."

The group has about 125 members. Its flea market committee has been working on this year's market since last May. They held the first in 1970 and raised upwards of $12,000.

The money this time will go to their new fundraising projects, bursaries for fashion students and costume funds for the textile division at the Royal Ontario Museum. They will share it with the Canadian Hemophilia Society, Toronto branch, and Street Haven, a shelter for women with problems. Miss Carroll says people at both organizations have been working with the Fashion Group on the market.

Miss Becker is going to design a fur hat for the member who sells the most tickets.

Ann Landers Should His 'Best Pal' Be Put Away?

Dear Ann Landers: I am 12 years old and don't know where to turn with my problem. You're my only hope. I am praying that you will think my letter is important enough to print.

This morning, very early, I heard Mom and Dad talking in the kitchen. They thought I was still asleep. What I heard tore me up.

Mom and Dad want to put my dog Prince to sleep. I realize he is old; but he is not suffering or in pain or anything like that. He walks awfully slow and bumps into the furniture because he can't see very well anymore. But Prince is not sick or anything. And he is no trouble at all.

I want to keep Prince as long as I can. I figure with good care he should be around for another five years. He is my best pal, Ann. Please help me.—Bill B.

Dear Bill: Ask your parents to take Prince to the veterinarian for a consultation. Go along. The vet will be here him over and decide what is best for your pal. And you do want what is best for him, don't you? So whatever the vet says should be the final word.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter comes to you from St. Simons Island, Georgia, where I am enjoying a wonderful vacation. I am a retired businessman and have been coming here for a number of years. The one and only drawback is that the area papers that carry your column print it only occasionally.—I made it known to my friends in Connecticut that missing Ann Landers's column was the only thing that made my annual vacation less than perfect—so I have been receiving clippings from the Hartford Courant regularly.

They arrive, anonymously, each week in a different envelope, to throw me off the trail. No clue as to who sends them. I thought I knew who my "benefactors" were, so I thanked them individually. All pleaded innocent.

Recently I received word from a friend who overheard two gentlemen discussing the success of their "secret project." She was amazed. So was I! To think that two of my golfing buddies would have time for play, "Who's Afraid of Sending Ann Landers?" You probably enjoyed the secrecy as much as I enjoyed the columns.

I wanted you to know that you have enhanced my vacation considerably and that you are very important to the Gerrild set.—Wonderful Vacation

Dear Mr. Wonderful: Please identify those "area papers" that print Ann Landers "only occasionally" and I'll nudge 'em. Also, kind sir, the Hartford Courant will be happy to send your paper to Georgia while you're vacationing there.

Dear Ann Landers: We live in St. Petersburg and enjoy your column so much—as do many of our friends, also retired.

My husband and I laughed when we read your definition of Lace Curtain Irish. Dad has another line to add to yours. Maybe it will give you a laugh.

"Lace Curtain Irish are people who have fruit in the house when nobody is sick—and flowers when nobody is dead."—The Kennedy Clan of Florida.

Dear Clan: Bless you. Several Irish readers were not very happy with my definition; in fact, they were insulted. It's good to have some Kennedys on my side.

Successful Living Who Are Your Friends?

By DORIS CLARK

One day a socially active person referred to another and said, "I guess he's the only friend I have. I've known him all my life." Another is speaking of a person with whom she spent a great deal of time, said: "She's not really a friend. She's actually just a neighbor."

It made me wonder. Can't a neighbor be a friend too? Do you have to know someone a lifetime in order for them to qualify as a friend? Surely if there's a true meeting of minds and interests, a friend can be a stranger you have known only a few weeks.

Perhaps those who complain that they have trouble making friends are setting rules that are a little too rigid. Perhaps they are not sure what a friend is.

Next time you think, "I haven't a friend in the world", stop and ask yourself who seeks out your company, who asks your opinion, who does favors for you unprompted? There's almost always someone! — Dorothy Turcotte.

* * *

Dear Doris: A good friend of mine in the seventh grade had a ruptured appendix. After her his parents took him to the hospital, they had to wait two hours for a doctor to see him so he could be admitted.

He didn't have an appointment, and the nurse wouldn't let him in as an emergency. This is ridiculous! He could have died! He has been in the hospital three weeks now. — Annoyed (12 years old).

Dear Annoyed: I don't blame you for being upset! You can bet your friend's parents have some into this thoroughly with the hospital authorities, and the nurse probably realizes now that this was a genuine emergency.

Perhaps, though, the doctor should have been called when your friend was first in pain, rather than waiting until the appendix ruptured. Many hospitals across Canada are overworked and understaffed.

Note to Readers: A thoughtful correspondent has sent us in a poem entitled, "What's Father Shook The Stove?"

It tells how a young fellow was jarred awake with the "steel on steel" racket, and he goes down deeper in the covers. The poet concludes that today's thumping and pounding radiators don't have the fascination for him of the old days when Jack Frost painted pictures on our window panes and there was a promised awakening and new warmth in those stove shakings.

The reader just wanted to share it. Said "It really sounds like the good old days!" We'll share it - if anyone cares to write in for it, enclosing 20 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

(Doris cannot begin to answer all your questions in the column. To make sure of your reply, remember to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, sending your letter in care of this newspaper.)

'Equal Pay-Equal Work A Myth'

EDMONTON (CP) — Equal pay for equal work is a myth, says Catharine Arthur, recently appointed director of the Alberta Women's Bureau.

"I've had years of discrimination," she said. "But bitterness costs too much.

"There has to be more work done for the people who need it most. In cases where the law is not adhered to, women need help, encouragement and backing to fight for their rights.

"People don't know how to get to the review procedures and we have to let them know."

Miss Arthur succeeds Irene MacGregor, who resigned in January after serving as director since the bureau was founded six years ago.

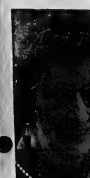
Mrs. MacGregor said the bureau has reached its goal of assembling and distributing information of interest to women in Alberta. But Miss Arthur added that, with the information gathered and presented in readable form, she now would like the bureau to become a more effective organization for women.

"The laws have been passed and made readable," she said. "Now I don't want the laws, or women, to go to sleep.

"We must make all women and get the statutes protecting their rights enforced.

"We don't want recognition beyond men, but we do want equality," said Miss Arthur.

"Eventually, it (the women's bureau) should be a people's bureau, part of a department of human rights."



Catharine Arthur

Few Divorces In 'Very Arab' Lebanon

BEIRUT (AP) — Divorce is increasing in socially conservative Lebanon, but this small eastern Mediterranean country still has one of the lowest rates in the world.

Despite its Western appearance, Lebanese society remains very Arab. Family and religion still play a dominant role, especially if a marriage is heading toward the rocks.

A recently divorced Lebanese said: "It was a pretty shattering experience. First uncles and cousins and other relatives tried to help, then we were sent off to see a priest. But nothing worked. The marriage was a mistake."

According to United Nations figures, the Lebanese divorce rate is 0.6 per thousand population. Egypt's is 1.32, and the United States' is 2.92.

Experts here agree divorce is highest among young couples and usually occurs in the first five years of marriage.

Echoing many of his contemporaries in other countries, Rev. Fuad Bahnan, secretary of Lebanon's Protestant community, said: "Young Lebanese tend to view marriage as a kind of experiment which may or may not succeed. The old spirit of commitment is fading."

As in neighboring Israel, marriage and divorce are in the hands of religious authorities in half-Christian, half-Moslem Lebanon to preserve communal harmony. Thus breaking the nuptial knot takes time and money.

Divorce, which the Prophet Mohammed, founder of Islam, called "the most hated human weakness," is easier for Moslems than Christians. This has led some Christian with marital trouble to convert.

Although the practice is dying out in favor of a more formal court procedure, a Moslem husband still has the right to say "I divorce you" three times to his wife before witnesses and then repudiate this repudiation with a sheik or religious leader.

A Moslem wife has no such legal right, but she can bring a divorce action under terms of the marriage contract.

Christian ecclesiastical courts are reluctant to dissolve any marriage unless stringent requirements are met and often order the couple to try to settle their differences.

The divorce rate probably would rise sharply if civil courts had jurisdiction, but religion remains a powerful force in Lebanon. The law is unlikely to be changed soon.

Engagement

Mrs. Harold Conner, RR1, Carrying Place, is pleased to announce the forthcoming marriage of her daughter Velma Marion, to Larry Oliver, RR1, Ameliasburgh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Giles. The marriage will take place June 16, 1973 at Rednersville United Church.

Two-year-old Joey Sips, Sings—Then Sleeps It Off

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Mrs. Joseph Peterson is bursting with pride over her two-year-old's vocabulary of more than 270 words. Because as anyone who has kept pet birds around the home knows, budgies seldom learn more than a few words or phrases like, "hello," "how are you," or, if his owner is luckier, something a little seamier.

But Joey, who Mrs. Peterson thought had "something special about him," when she bought him from a department store, had mastered 278 words at last count and can string them together quite proficiently.

Joey is reserved with strangers at first.

"Good morning," he'll squeal politely.*

But if he feels he's in good company he'll try to relax the situation a bit with: "A nice drink for Joey," justifying his habit with a hearty shout of "Happy New Year."

Mrs. Peterson brings Joey and his guest some beer and he really begins to open up. A little less coherently, perhaps, when under the influence.

"It's raining cats and dogs. Look at all the snow. Jingle bells, jingle bells, jingle all the way."

Joey sips and sings until he gets bored with his one-sided conversation and declares:

"No more drinks today. I'm very exhausted."

So while Joey sleeps it off, Mrs. Peterson remarks that if he keeps adding to his vocabulary he could become the world's most loquatious budgie.

The budgie with the fastest beak, according to the Guinness Book of Records, knows 500 words—which gives Joey a good shot at the title.

But he's obviously not interested.

Hearing this, he'll deny it all. "Birds don't talk, birds don't talk," he lies.

Sister Teaches the Poor At Guatemalean Mission

Though the Indians Sister Julia Hamilton teaches in her mission at San Cristobal, Guatemala have appalling poverty, she said their nature is kindly.

Addressing Holy Rosary Catholic Women's League Mother and Daughter pot luck supper, Monday, Sister Hamilton described her mission work.

Teaching the poor in centres (villages) is part of her work with the Mission of her order in Latin America. She has taught adults to read and write in hope that they will come back and carry on as leaders of their people.

Sister Hamilton who left her home in Kingston six years ago for the mission said her work relies on donations from Canada.

She said the wealth there lies with a few and conditions are poor among many.

Two nursing and two teaching Sisters work at each mission. These nuns try to help the Indians better their conditions and make the most of what is at hand.

Using slides, Sister Julia Hamilton showed not only the difficulties under which the Canadians work but also the gaiety and kindliness of the people.

Sister Hamilton, who is visiting the convent in Belleville was promised proceeds from the quilt raffle for her work in Latin America by Mrs. Dorothy Pope, Ameliasburg.

Sister Mary Joan, from the teaching staff at Nicholson College was spending last summer's vacation assisting at the Mission introduced the guest speaker.

Bilingual Policy Said Failure

OTTAWA (CP) — Government attempts to make the public service of Canada truly bilingual have been a failure and a separate French-Canadian public service should be set up for those whose first language is French, Rene Matte (SC—Champlain) said Thursday.

Leading off a day-long Commons debate on a Social Credit motion that deplored alleged government delay in implementing the official Languages Act, he cited the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., which provides both French and English service.

Under House rules, there was no vote at the end of the debate.

Today the Commons considers a Conservative motion criticizing the government for not increasing the basic pension of war veterans as forecast Jan. 4 in the speech from the throne.

Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier, delivering the main government rebuttal to Mr. Matte, said the Social Credit motion was based on a false premise. Thus it was impossible to debate in a reasonable way attempts to make government service and information available in both French and English.

He said hiring more and more French-speaking Canadians is an example of progress in the public service.

Claude Wagner (St. Hyacinthe) and Herward Graffney (Brome-Missisquoi), the only Conservatives elected in Quebec, said the bilingual question should not become a political question.

Bill Paul Harney (NDP—Toronto Scarborough West) said he did not see how politics could be kept out of such a vital question.

"You will hear jackasses braying on both sides," he declared.

Gilles Marcau (L—Lapointe), parliamentary secretary to Mr. Pelletier, said a recent survey of the secretary of state department showed that 16 per cent of the employees were only French, 14 per cent only English and the remaining 70 per cent are bilingual.

Walter Baker (PC—Grenville-Carleton), whose riding includes a large number of public servants, said the fault is not in the bilingual policy but in its administration.

Jean-Robert Gauthier (L—Ottawa East) said French-Canadians have lived for 300 years under injustice. It was time for a change. He derided opposition charges that English-speaking public servants in Ontario have cause for complaint.

Team Canada Doctors Stress Helmets' Value

TORONTO (CP) — Drs. John Zeldin and Charles Bull have some advice for the parents of all young hockey hopefuls:

"A lot of injuries and lives can be saved by one simple thing: Hockey helmets—good ones."

The two doctors, team physicians for Team Canada when it played against the Soviet Union last fall, had been talking to members of the Ontario Medical Association Thursday about head injuries and their prevention.

A good hockey helmet is a must for kids learning to play hockey, Dr. Zeldin, an orthopedic (bone) surgeon, told a news conference later.

"Kids who are just learning to skate trip (backwards) over a stick behind them and go flat on their back—with the back of the head bashed in like a grapefruit."

He said a good helmet should be adjustable, with screws that allow the helmet to be fitted and molded to the head; made of high-impact plastic that won't bend or break if the child should slide head-first into the boards at full speed; complete with a mouth-guard; well padded with firm plastic; and reinforced in the back.

A secure fit is important.

"Take the kid with you when you buy it," said Dr. Zeldin. The helmet should be slightly hard to get on and off and it should fit snugly over the head.

Dr. Zeldin said the Canadian Standards Association has started testing helmets and soon will be listing those that have been passed.

Once you have a good helmet, make sure the child wears it whenever he plays, he said.

A majority of head injuries for young children occur while they are playing "road hockey" in the driveway outside their homes, and most facial injuries occur there.

The doctors said they were disgusted with National Hockey League authorities for not insisting the use of helmets mandatory for Team Canada players.

"Here we were with the 36 highest-paid hockey players in the world and only three were helmets. You'd think they'd at least have wanted to protect their investments."

Two-price Oil System Is Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — A two-price oil and gas system to prevent Canadian consumers from being hurt by the United States energy shortage is under consideration by the federal government, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday.

He told the Commons the proposal is being given close scrutiny because the government does not want Canadians to foot the bill for U.S. energy shortages.

If adopted, the system would mean one price for oil and gas exported to the U.S. and a second for oil and gas products used in Canada.

Mr. Macdonald was responding to a question from T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands) who said Canadian oil companies are taking advantage of the United States' shortage to raise prices in Canada.

Recent price increases announced by major companies have nothing to do with production costs or supplies, he said. They are merely a response to demand in the U.S.

COSTS RISING

Mr. Macdonald said oil costs are rising in Eastern Canada because of higher prices for foreign oil. But a two-price system might be adopted if prices continue to rise in the rest of Canada which is supplied by oil from Western Canada.

For the moment, he said, Canadian oil exports do not appear to be affecting supplies available at home. But the situation was being watched closely and action would be taken if necessary.

Probe Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons Thursday that Zambia has promised a full investigation into the shooting deaths Wednesday of two Canadian tourists in Rhodesia.

Killed by gunfire, apparently by Zambian troops, were Christine Louise Sinclair, 19, of Guelph, Ont., and Marjan Lubuna Dreijber, also 19, of Rockwood, Ont.

Alberta Sheep

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta agriculture department's statistics branch estimated that there were 184,000 sheep and lambs in the province at the end of 1972, including some 50,000 in southern Alberta around Lethbridge and Fort Macleod.

New Ethnic Programs Announced

OTTAWA (CP) — Seven new and expanded programs designed to stimulate ethnic awareness at a cost of more than $10 million were announced Thursday by Stanley Haidasz, minister responsible for multiculturalism.

Also announced was creation of a Canadian Consultative Council on Multiculturalism comprising spokesmen for different ethnic groups.

Mr. Haidasz told the Commons the strengthening of the government's policy of "multiculturalism within a bilingual framework" entails an increase in funds for the program in $10,132,600 in the 1973-74 fiscal year from $4,154,000 in 1972-73.

"Our identity has a dynamic rather than a static quality, constantly revealing new facets and new dimensions of that illusive creation called a national identity.

"We do know about our country is that there is no typical Canadian, no stereotype that we must all strive to imitate.

"The new programs include a Canadian Identities Program designed to increase awareness on the part of all Canadians of the different lifestyles and cultural traditions within society.

This is to include an annual folk festival as part of the August program of the National Arts Centre in Ottawa and regional festivals in winter.

Mr. Haidasz said the main function of the new multiculturalism council will be to act as ethnic affairs consultant to the government.

It will consist of a national chairman, two vice-chairmen, five regional chairmen and other members across the country.

National chairman is Julius Kelelec, 42, a Winnipeg lawyer who also is national director of the Canadian Folk Arts Council. He is president of the Folk Arts Council of Manitoba and vice-president of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

The vice-chairmen are Dr. Agatha La Certe, 70, of Quebec and Dr. Lino Magagna, 40, of Port Credi, Ont.

YMCA Will Hold Own Fund-raising Drive

Belleville's Family YMCA board of directors voted this week to hold a private fund-raising campaign in the early portion of next year.

Target for the campa on has been set at $100,000 which the Y board intends using for the balance of the mortgage on the Y building on Victoria Avenue.

Dr. Douglas Horne, president of the board, told The Intelligencer Thursday evening, "the campaign would be a private one with donations coming from a list of companies and individuals numbering about 250." He termed the names on the list as "Y friends."

These "friends" are those individuals and 36 companies who donated to the last Y fund - raising campaign, held some six years ago.

The Y was urged by the United Community Services to hold its fund drive in the early portion of 1974, not to conflict with the fall United Appeal campaign, run by the UCS.

The Y board had done some groundwork in preparation for the campaign and had intended launching it this month.

"The UCS wouldn't approve it, thinking it would conflict with their fall campaign," said Dr. Horne. "If we had just gone ahead with the drive, regardless of UCS wishes, it would have ruined our relationship with that board."

Just prior to Christmas last year, the YMCA was thrown out of the United Appeal on charges it was not meeting enough community n e e d s. Only recently was the Y admitted re - entry following a series of discussions and meetings.

"Because the UCS must approve such activities, for us to go ahead now would have been a breach of contract," said Dr. Horne.

The delay means an additional $8,000 added to the Y's capital cost through interest on the outstanding $88,000 to be paid on the mortgage. "It kills us every year," said Dr. Horne referring to the interest rate.

The Y, since rewriting the mortgage has reduced it by $12,000 from agency revenue. Dr. Horne is confident the Y will reach the mark, saying board members, advisory board members, banks and trust companies have already come through with $28,000 in donations.

Hugh Pepper, president of the UCS board said his group endorsed the fund drive saying "somehow they (Y) have got to get out from under".

Commenting on the timing of the drive — sometime between January and March — Mr. Pepper s a i d "they wouldn't raise what they were going for now . . . I think early '74 is the best possible time."

Time Out for Percussionists

A massed band of more than 250 high school musicians presents volume problems, resulting in some of the big sound players having to take turns on their instruments. Doing his stint on the kettle drum at last night's We Believe in Music show at Belleville Arena is Paul Woodley, of BCI's band. Waiting their turns are Penny-Lee Weese, also of BCI, Jim Irvine of Centre Hastings and Lee Mandigo of Centennial. Students were bused in from all over Hastings county to perform in the concert that Murray Irwin, president of the sponsoring body of county music teachers, hopes to make an annual event.

Loyalist College Buildings Named

Buildings at Loyalist College have at last been given names to replace the alphabetical designations they have carried since the college was founded.

Building A, the temporary building first constructed on the campus will be known as the Pioneer Building. The permanent building, housing three wings, will be known as the Kente Building. The former Building B, first of the permanent structures to be erected, will be known as the Lennox-Addington Wing; Building C will be the Hastings wing and Building D will be the Northumberland Wing.

A committee comprised of students, staff members and governors of the college recommended the names which were approved at the May meeting of the board of governors.

Bus Terminal Plans Delayed

TRENTON — Plans for construction of a new bus terminal on Ontario Street are being held up as developers discuss incorporating a small shopping plaza into the same building.

Art Palmer, secretary-treasurer for Alyward Real Estate Holdings Ltd. of Port Hope, said in a telephone interview Thursday, "We're thinking of changing our plans to include a plaza."

He declined to release further details pending negotiations, but said the terminal would definitely be completed by the end of the summer, with or without the plaza.

Original announcement of a new terminal on the site of The old Harry Lafferty and Son Feed Mill at the corner of Hawley and Ontario Streets was made in mid-March. Several bus depots are being developed by Alyward in Eastern Ontario along the same lines as the terminal in Belleville.

The depot site had to be rezoned to allow construction. According to town records, only the land on which the new bus station will be built was rezoned. However, included in the new official plan that still requires new zoning bylaws to be prepared — is the complete rezoning of that portion of Trenton for commercial development.

Hugh O'Neil, whose real estate firm sold the property to Alyward, said Thursday that land adjacent to the 165 by 125-foot terminal site, is also zoned commercial and owned by another Trenton firm.

Mr. Palmer would not state whether or not further land purchases are being sought.

Thief's Work Doesn't Pay

Even thieves sometimes find hard work doesn't always pay off.

Kirk Scherf of 68½ Cedar St. returned to his apartment Wednesday afternoon to find someone had forced three locked doors to get inside.

But when he searched his belongings, all that was missing was a case made for storing cassette tapes.

The thief, for all his efforts, wasn't even entitled to a song. Inside the case? An address book.

Medical Centre Nearly Ready

DESERONTO — This town's medical centre, now rapidly nearing completion, should see its first physician in practice by July.

The project's completion will be a feather in the community's service cap of the Lions Club, which undertook its sponsorship a year ago.

Construction started immediately the club received approval of a $34,000 federal Local Initiatives Program grant in late January.

Since then work progress has kept to schedule and now the handsome white brick building is ready for interior painting, says Reeve George Lyons.

Dr. David Miller, 27, who recently finished interning at Halifax, should be ready to open practice about July 1, says Reeve Lyons.

The speed with which the project in this town of 1,800 has become reality is of special satisfaction to the reeve.

He initiated the idea with his fellow Lions and its appeal was instant.

The feeling of accomplishment has begun to involve the community as the building nears completion, says the reeve.

"We're really pleased with the comments we're getting and I believe people are beginning to feel they're part of the project — and they're pretty proud," he says.

Estimated cost of the building is $60,000 and fund-raising for the balance needed when LIP funding expires is going favorably for the Lions. Among the donors, local senior citizens have programmed special events to raise $1,000.

Donations recently were acknowledged as tax-deductible by the national revenue department, which is expected to speed contributions, says Reeve Lyons.

This town is also a service centre for a surrounding rural population of 8,000. The centre has space to spare should another physician and a dentist decide to practise here.

Its facilities include two doctors' offices, four examination rooms, office space — including an X-ray room — for a dentist.

Minister Replies

Ontario's minister of social and community services has suggested in a letter that a speedy, amicable solution to complaints surrounding Hastings County Welfare Department be reached.

Cabinet minister Rene Brunelle was contacted last Friday by Belleville's Citizens' Bureau which asked for the suspension of a welfare field worker on charges of mistreatment and abuse.

Mr. Brunelle did not comment on the charges but wrote "I regret the situation that developed and hope an amicable understanding can be reached in the very near future."

A spokesman for the bureau here said if the problems were not reconciled before May 31, when the bureau is scheduled to run out of Local Initiative Project funding, the bureau will continue without pay until a solution is reached.

Deseronto Mill Rate Reduced

A 1973 levy of 148.84 mills commercial and 124.15 mills residential has been struck for the town of Deseronto.

These rates are down 22 mills and 26 mills respectively from the 1972 levy.

Town clerk - treasurer Sam Knapp said 1973 taxes on a residence assessed at $2,0' would be $248.30, or d o w $51.78 from the $300.08 collected last year.

The 1974 per cent decrease in taxes is attributed mainly to the new additional grants to municipalities announced recently by the province, and which have been passed on to the taxpayers.

The county of Hastings levy for 1973 is down 56.800 from 1972 while the town's $72 surplus has its effect offset any increase in town's general purpose requirement, as well as increased levies from schools and the library board.

All sewer rates are excluded from the above analysis since these are fixed annual rates and are collected separately.

This year, for the first time in the history of Deseronto, there is a new levy for separate schools with two mill rate structures. About 75 town properties are involved.

It's Nearly Ready

Deseronto medical centre is now nearing completion — a community project that already has attracted one physician to the town. Building has space for two doctors and dentist.

Grass Was the Culprit!

Snooky's honor is saved!

Last week we reported the concern of the cast of the next Belleville Theatre Guild Production, Teahouse of the August Moon, over the condition of Snooky, a young nanny-goat who is on stage for an hour of the comedy. Snooky seemed to be showing signs of pregnancy, and this show might have had to go on without her.

Well, we're happy to say that Snooky's unmarried status is no longer in doubt. After a conference with her owner, Dr. Matheson of Stirling, Director Ted Bairstow reports that the swollen stomach is nothing more than a severe case of overeating the lush green grass of spring at her temporary home in Hillier.

Ted and the cast are relieved. They didn't want an extra character or two dropping in to the play midway through the run.

By the way, the other embarrassing thing a goat might do on stage has been well prepared for. Young actor, George Kneisel has an extra line, a bucket and a shovel all ready for it. -

Tennis Rush Adds Eight New Courts

The recent upsurge in tennis popularity is causing a flurry of court construction in the city.

At the recreation arena committee meeting Tuesday it was noted that four new courts will shortly be erected at Centennial Secondary School, two of them to be paid for by the school board. Another two double courts will be constructed in the city's east end, at a location still to be selected.

Tennis courts at Zwicky's Island are seeing full-time use from morning until late at night. It was noted that of the island courts, six are unrestricted and tennis enthusiasts from outside Belleville are taking advantage of them.

Garden Club Views Film

A film on the garden and parks of Vienna, illustrating the beauty and functional uses of parkland in the Austrian city, was featured at the monthly meeting of the Belleville Garden Club Tuesday evening.

There was a large turnout of members for the annual plant sale and distribution of seedlings which took place at the close of the meeting.

Chairman Bill Easterbrooke thanked members who assisted in staging the spring flower display at the Quinte Mall. Larry Johnson identified many seasonal flowers displayed at the meeting and answered questions from the floor pertaining to gardening.

Members were reminded that advance tickets to the annual rose and African violet festival on June 30 and July 1 are now available.

Police Parley

All four police fources represented in the Quinte area are on view this weekend at the Quinte Mall celebrating Canadian Police Week .Answering questions and manning displays are, from left, Cpl. Sam Pittman of the RCMP, Constable Brian Skinner of the Ontario Provincial Police, Constable Darryl Wragg of the Belleville Police Department and Cpl. Doug Abbott of CFB Trenton Military Police.

Police May Increase Building Site Patrols

Construction sites may receive extra police protection following complaints from builders that they are losing thousands of dollars in equipment and materials to thieves.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning he plans to confer with Mike DeMark, president of the Quinte Homebuilders Association, who outlined the builders' allegations Wednesday night.

One construction firm official said he has lost $5,000 because of recent thefts and another labeled that figure "conservative".

Chief Crosbie said a solution to the problem may be to increase patrols of construction sites. If the need warrants, plainclothesmen could also be stationed nearby, he added.

"It's extremely difficult," he commented. "In addition to wilful damage by kids, there's the temptation to steal building materials, especially because of their high cost."

The chief said there have been several instances of stealing from the highrise currently going up on Palmer Road.

He agreed with a suggestion made at the association meeting that builders post signs offering $100 rewards for information leading to the arrest and conviction of thieves, a tactic that has proven effective in Hamilton.

WHA Delegates Reach for Stars

TORONTO (CP)—Delegates who reached for the stars, NHL variety, in the World Hockey Association's first annual pro draft Thursday night may find themselves earthbound today.

They arrived deeply in National Hockey League rosters for 55 players and one team stunned its rivals by foraging into Canadian age-group ranks to choose two sons of former NHL star Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Each team was permitted to protect 30 players and draft 30 for a complement of 90. The 8 that all wallowed in fantasy by random selection of established NHL stars, such as Tony Esposito, Stan Mikita, Bobby Orr, Darryl Sittler, Henri Richard, Pete Mahovlich, Marc Tardiff and Mickey Redmond, plus numerous lesser lights.

But Houston Aeros sent shock-waves rippling through the convention room when they selected Mark Howe as their ninth-round choice and his brother Marty as their 14th pick.

Mark, 17-year-old rightwinger with the Memorial Cup champion Toronto Marlboros, and Marty, 16-year-old defenceman with the same team, were expected to be named in the WHA's junior draft that starts today.

Mark was instrumental in leading the Marlboros to the championship of Canada's premier junior hockey league in 71 they defeated Medicine Hat Tigers of the Western Canada Hockey League and Quebec Remparts of the Quebec League in a round - robin series last week in Montreal.

Houston's action drew immediate objection from several teams, most vociferous of which were Alberta Oilers and Winnipeg Jets.

Surprisingly, WHA president Gary Davison supported Houston.

Bobby Hull, Jets coach, and Bill Hunter, Oilers president, contended that the names of the Howe boys should be submitted to the list of players eligible for today's draft of juniors.

Davidson, however, said that because the Howes are American citizens they are not subject to age restrictions that apply in Canada, and because they are being paid to play for Marlboros they qualify as professionals.

Houston president Jim Smith, defending his action, said: "We feel under the definition of what is an amateur and who is a professional a different situation than normal prevails here.

"Neither player is eligible for college hockey in the United States and we feel it is appropriate to draft them at this time."

Smith said the Aeros had contacted the boys' parents prior to the draft meeting to inform them of the club's intention.

"The reaction was not entirely negative," Smith said. "We believe we'll get into their house."

Hunter was indignant, but didn't appear worried.

"This is a professional draft," he insisted. "I am sure this situation will be rectified by the league's board of trustees when they meet Friday morning."

Hull was annoyed, too, but shrugged off Houston's move after the draft session ended.

"I think when their names go into the hat tomorrow (Friday) the teams that draft them will eventually get them," he said. "We'd all like to have them."

Ben Hatskin, president of the Jets, was philosophical.

"They sure pulled a surprise and I am speechless at the moment. Maybe the Aeros are right. Maybe they are smarter than I am."

Davidson said he could be overruled by the board of governors or even by civil courts, but he didn't seem impressed with the importance of the pro draft.

The draft is merely for bargaining rights, he said, and so a team can pick any player it chooses.

"I've seen drafts where teams have taken girl pole-vaulters.

There may not have been any pole-vaulters among last night's draftees, but you couldn't prove it by some of the names that appeared on the board.

Even WHA officials, including the president, were puzzled and draftmaster Vern Buffey, former NHL referee and now WHA referee-in-chief, admitted he didn't recognize many of the names submitted.

Earlier in the day the WHA announced it had broken off relations with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association because, said Davidson, "they are not able to control their own players."

"We feel the association is ineffective and it could not honor the terms of an agreement if we enter an agreement."

CAHA president Joe Krycyka didn't seem distressed by this turn of events.

"That's their problem," he said from his home in Calgary.

"If we don't have an agreement with the WHA I'm sure our boys will steer their players into the NHL."

Krycyka also hinted that the CAHA may produce a type of contract next season that will keep graduating juniors to an alliance with the NHL.

"I have a draft of a contract in my pocket that I will take to Charlottetown for our annual meeting next week. It will not only be for major junior A players, but for Tier Two Juniors as well," he said.

Sixth Norris Trophy for Orr

MONTREAL (CP)—Bobby Orr, Boston Bruins brilliant and versatile defenceman, has won the James Norris Memorial Trophy for a record sixth straight time, the National Hockey League announced today.

The trophy is awarded annually to the "defence player who demonstrates throughout the season the greatest all-round ability in that position."

Orr, a 23-year-old native of Parry Sound, Ont., collected 224 of a possible 340 points in the voting conducted among members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association. Points were awarded on the basis of five for a first-place vote, three for a second, and one for a third.

Guy Lapointe of the current Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens was runner-up to Orr in the balloting. Lapointe had 58 points, 23 more than third-place Bill White of Chicago Black Hawks and Brad Park of New York Rangers.

Orr will receive $1,500 for his selection, while Lapointe gets $750 as runner-up.

With his name inscribed on the Norris Trophy for the sixth straight year, Orr thus becomes the first player in NHL history to win the same individual award six consecutive times.

Prior to Orr's appearance in the NHL as an 18-year-old season, only goalie Jacques Plante had won an award five times in a row. Plante won the Vezina trophy as top goaltender from 1956 through 1960 with Montreal.

Orr, who has won at least one individual award in each of his seven NHL seasons now has earned $8,750 in award money for only the Norris in the last six seasons.

In addition, he won the Calder Trophy as leading rookie in 1966-67; the Art Ross Trophy as leading scorer in 1970—the only defenceman ever to win this award; and the Hart Trophy as the most valuable player in 1970, 1971 and 1972.

When Harry Howell won the Norris while a member of New York Rangers in 1967, he accurately predicted Orr's great future during an acceptance speech.

"I am glad I won it this year," Howell said then. "For the next few years, at least, they'll have to rename it the 'Bobby Orr' award because that young man in Boston will own it.

Although hampered by a slow-healing knee injury that required surgery last summer and which kept him out of 15 games this season, Orr lived up to Howell's prediction again. He finished third in the individual scoring race with 101 points, 29 fewer than team-mate and leading centre Phil Esposito and three behind runner-up Bobby Clarke of Philadelphia Flyers.

Orr's point total included 37 goals and 72 assists, the latter statistic the second-highest in the league. Esposito led in assists with 76.

In his seven regular NHL seasons Orr has compiled an impressive 613 points in 481 games, an average of 1.31 points-per-game, the highest averaged in league history among players with 500 or more points.

Lapointe scored 19 goals this season, the most ever by a Montreal defenceman. He had seven assists and was an important part of the Canadiens march to the East Division title.

It was the Chicago defencemen in scoring with nine goals and Orr the ace Norris last year.

Complete vote: Orr, Boston 224; Lapointe, Montreal 58; White, Chicago 36; Park, Rangers 36; Jacques Laperriere, Montreal 25; Serge Savard, Montreal 22; Rod Seiling, Rangers 11; Dave Burrows, Pittsburgh Penguins 6; Tim Horton, Buffalo Sabres 4; Terry Harper, Los Angeles Kings 4; Gary Bergman, Detroit Red Wings 2; Larry Hillman, Buffalo 2; Pat Stapleton, Chicago 1; Barclay Plager, St. Louis Blues 1.

Rangers Complete Deals Made Earlier

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers of the National Hockey League have sent right-winger Steve Andrascik to Pittsburgh Penguins and left-winger Dave Brechkow and centre Gary Coalter to California Golden Seals, completing deals made earlier this year, it was announced Thursday.

Andrascik, who had eight goals and nine assists in 39 game for Providence Reds of the American Hockey League during the last season, was primary mend for defenceman Jakobos Kanegiesser, obtained by the Rangers from Pittsburgh last March.

Brechkow, with 15 goals and 24 assists in 76 games for Rochester of the AHL, and Coalter, with 18 goals and 13 assists in 45 games for Providence, completed the deal that brought defenceman Bert Marshall from California to New York, also in March.

Andrascik played junior hockey for Flin Flon Bombers of the Western Canada Hockey League. Coalter was a former member of Hamilton Red Wings in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

North Stars And Bruins Negotiating

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota North Stars and Boston Bruins confirmed Thursday they are negotiating a possible National Hockey League trade involving 26-year-old Minnesota goalie Gilles Gilbert.

Gilbert has played parts of three seasons with the North Stars, as a reserve to veterans Cesare Maniago and Gump Worsley. Worsley, 44, retired last January but changed his mind last week to play one more season.

"It's possible that a deal will be made," said Wren Blair, North Star general manager. "But at this point, Gilbert has not been traded to Boston. We asked the Bruins for a particular player and they are thinking over that portion of the trade."

Harry Sinden, Boston general manager, declined to indicate what player the North Stars sought.

Limitations On Senior A

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Hockey Association announced Thursday there will be some age limitations on senior A teams starting next season.

Each club must carry at least five players who are 23 years old or younger and may have only 12 who are 24 or older.

Until now there have been no age limits on senior A hockey.

A league spokesman said the OHA will ask the World Hockey Association and the National Hockey League to use the league as a development ground for young pro prospects.

Six teams, Orillia, Barrie, Galt, Brantford, Belleville and Owen Sound will play in the league next season. Kingston quit at the end of last season.

Secretariat Aiming For Two in A Row

BALTIMORE (AP) — Secretariat, the Triple Crown contender seemingly back in the form that earned him the "super horse" tag, takes on a slim field of five opponents in Saturday's 98th running of the $156,000 Preakness Stakes.

And even a rival trainer is impressed with his credentials.

A record turnout is expected at Pimlico, drawn by the spectacle of the Meadow Stable colt and given an added boost by an jolted farewell for former Baltimore Colts' quarterback Johnny Unitas.

Most of the fans, however, will be out to see whether Secretariat, who won the Kentucky Derby in record time after being upset in the Wood Memorial, can take another step toward becoming the first Triple Crown winner since Citation in 1948.

"He now will best Secretariat if he runs his race," said Buddy Delp, trainer of Eonie Eisage.

"I backed off on Secretariat after the Wood," Delp added, "but since the Derby have to think he's great.

"He won the final quarter in 23 1-5. Horses just don't do that after watching him for 10 days, I have no reason to think otherwise."

But despite the presence of Secretariat, and Derby runner-up Sham who also broke the wire first, favored wilds finishing lengths behind the winner's in the Derby, the added mystique of a mile and a half makes Delp hoping for a miracle.

"They'll have to catch me," Delp said, "and if Secretariat and Sham worry about me, they'll be out to see whether Secretariat, who won the Kentucky Derby in record time after being upset in the Wood Memorial, can take another step toward becoming the first Triple Crown winner since Citation in 1948.

Turner Checks In For Goal Markers

By AL ZARAS
Staff Sportswriter
(Electrical of Series)

Having scored three goals in the Bobcats' exhibition games, defenceman Neil Turner said to himself that he was really going to move" come the regular season.

The season started. In the second game against Markham, Turner scored his first of the regular Metro Jr. B schedule. And then came the drought. Precisely 35 games and 13 assists later, the Trenton Lions midget grad still had one goal to his credit. "I bombed out," said the 17-year-old BCI student.

The playoffs started. In the Oshawa series, Robbie Foster fired the puck at the net and it went off Turner's leg to score.

"But there was no way that one would get away from me," said the defenceman. "I had not scored in so long that I wasn't going to let it get away. I skated over after the ref and told him I'd put the puck in."

Turner chuckled over that one, but that chuckle lost some of its merriment when he remembered the East-West All-star game he played in Toronto.

To add insult upon the injury of being named to the All-3 East victory prediction, Turner, as well as Tim Yohn, were on the low end of the totem on five of the West's goals in their 8-3 loss.

"I was proud to be selected for the East, but after the game I wished I hadn't played. But you can't win them all," said the defenceman philosophically.

Reviewing his own playing

NEIL TURNER

mates during the season, Turner said he "really felt good playing with Yohn," but come the playoffs, he was "happy playing with Dave Taylor. He seemed to back me up when I made a break.

"I felt lost playing with Dave Fleech though. I guess we didn't get our signals together when we started playing together. You have to talk to each other while you're on the ice. We didn't.

Turner said he again hopes to try out with the Toronto Marlboro Jr. A club.

"I have to go out there and give it my best," Turner said. a "gaffer" when he went down last year, Turner felt that the bad juvenile hockey wouldn't help him when he came back to Belleville.

"I figured that if I could make Jr. B, and especially the Metro league, it would be a big step to where I wanted to go — to the Jr. A club."

Turner will finish the Bay of Quinte high school field lacrosse season as well as the United Rigging Jubeile baseball season. Soccer he says he'll get another chance at the Marlies.

3 League Teams Get Second Wins

Quinte Mall Lenders, CNR and CTC each picked up its second win of the Industrial Softball League season Thursday night. Lenders, on the strength of a seven-run seventh inning, walloped The Intelligencer 10-3 (CNR) edged Brooke Bond 11-5 and CTC came from behind a 3-0 deficit to defeat Independents 5-3.

In the other league game played Thursday, Constellation outlasted Stewart Warner 19-17. Each team picked up a win and a loss in two outings.

Terry Murphy pitched effective ball to get the win for Lenders, Ron Gatcam and Joey Edwards shared the mound chores for The Intelligencer with Colleen going well until running into problems in the final frame. They allowed 11 hits.

Fraackerley's three singles paced Lenders' while Tetluck, Van Daalen and Graber had two hits each. Maurice Switzer led the losers with a pair of broken bat singles; Colleen homered with singles for Brian Amaron, Randy Derry and Marlene Smith.

CNR broke up a close ball game with four runs in the final inning in its win over Brooke Bond. Winning pitcher was Perry Soule and the loser Paul Sharpe.

Leading the CNR hitters were Zane Plumbe and Barry Tomlin. Zane belted a homer and two singles while Barry was good for two doubles and a triple. No Brooke Bond player had more than one base hit and the only extra base blow came off the bat of Lou Rivers who slapped a double.

John French made it two wins in as many starts for CTC as he held Independents to six hits. Dave Fox and Bruce Clarke each had two hits for the winners. B. Crait was tops for Independents with a brace of safeties.

The Constellation squad was out-hit 20-14 in its 19-17 win over Stewart Warner but made the most of 13 walks. Jim Thompson went all the way to get the win. Dave Marvin started for the losers with Dennis Ray taking over to get the final out in the seventh inning.

Gatcam and Mitchell each had three hits for Constellation. Tops for Stewart Warner were Marvin, D. Ray, L. Hagadorn and B. Young with three apiece.

Belleville's Ron Hayes who owns the Canadian teenage weightlifting championship in the 132 lb. class will be one of several local lifters taking part in the Ontario senior championships at Moira Secondary School here Saturday. Canadian champ, Gary Wait, title holder in the 242 lb. class is another of the Belleville lifters competing. The championships are being held in two sessions. The first begins at 2 p.m and the second at 7 p.m

Krekk Leads Charge As Chargers Upset BCI

Gabe Krekk did little pussy footing on the BCI field last night as he led the Centennial Chargers to an upset 8-6 victory over the BCI Collegians in Bay of Quinte field lacrosse action.

The Collegians were sting for four goals by Krekk in their first loss in seven games. Chris Rutledge added two goals while Dick Howe and Pollard came up with single tallies.

It wasn't a simple case of Centennial having the better club, though coach Ted Perlberg gave credit to the Chargers for some solid play.

"The same type situation as happened last year happened this year," said Perlberg. "Everyone figured that they were so good that everyone would be down dead for them."

According to the BCI coach, the team's six straight wins "went to their heads" with the result that players weren't coming out to practices and weren't giving out a whole effort.

BCI took the Bay of Quinte title last year with only one regular season. The defending Bay of Quinte champions will come up against Moira Trojans in the final game of the season and the winner going to Perlberg, likely take on Nicholson in the battle for their second title.

Chris Lachman provided two goals for BCI Thursday while single tallies came from Ted McBride, Brent Walmsley, Steve Maracle and Rick Bell.

New CAHA President

Harmony Devine's Aim

CJBQ sports director Jack Devine, a newly acclaimed president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, leaves for the annual meeting in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island today, looking forward to the responsibilities he has accepted.

If Devine has a prime objective, it is to promote harmony between all the hockey leagues and associations the CAHA is involved in. And after Thursday's announcement by World Hockey Association president Gary Davidson who said his group has broken off negotiations with the CAHA, Devine and his associates won't see anything harmonious in that direction.

It would appear the new CAHA president already has his work cut out for him. He is on record as saying he views his upcoming two year term to be experience that will prove "interesting". That could be an understatement.

Since 1969 when Jack was appointed vice — president in charge of junior hockey for the CAHA, he has maintained a strong interest in that level of the game. He was a prime mover in the establishment of the tier system for the juniors and it is a setup which is proving quite popular and enjoying success.

He moved up to first vice-president in 1971 and was returned to that office in 1972. Now Jack is at the top and his interest in juniors remains at a high level.

Commenting on Canada and International hockey, he says "Our future lies in junior teams. That is the only realistic approach and some of the European hockey people are leaning that way, too.

"I hope to see co-operation among all the hockey groups but each of them must realize that it is a two-way street."

Bantams Off To Good Start

The Belleville bantam all-stars may have the handle on a triple scoring threat for play in the South Central Lacrosse Association as Jeff Runciman scored five goals and Wally Inwood and Jamie Kennedy three each against Cobourg Thursday.

The trio led Belleville to a 14-1 decision in an exhibition game in preparation for the SCLA league and home opener May 30 against East York.

Dave Hamilton, Bob Hutsch, Eric Howe and Jeff Gow completed Belleville's scoring as the bantams held Cobourg to a total of five shots during the game. Cobourg's Jeff Pascoe scored their lone goal.

Game Called With United Leading 4-1

After Don Lapoint had managed the unusual feat of scoring a hat trick for Belleville United, the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association game against Batawa Braves was called by the referees with 11 minutes left to play in the second half.

The BQSA executive will now be forced to decide whether or not the game will stand whether it will have to be replayed. Disciplinary action on the executive's part may be necessary once the referee files his report of the reason for the shortened game.

Steve Hicks scored the first goal for the Belleville soccer club while Mat Graber provided the Braves with their single goal. .

The result of the Quinte game played in Trenton yesterday was not received.

Duncan Spoils Bid By Oriole's Palmer

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baltimore pitcher Jim Palmer's search for his third consecutive shutout ended 450 feet from home plate.

But when the ninth-inning home run hit by Cleveland catcher Dave Duncan stopped rolling, Palmer still had his third American League victory in a row and the memory of 26 3-1/3 scoreless innings.

"It's a good way to ruin a shutout, a quick way," Palmer said of his "450-foot mistake" after he had kept the Indians to three hits for a 4-1 Orioles victory.

"It was a fastball that I didn't throw in the right spot. I tried to keep it away from him but it sank over the middle. At least it wasn't a cheap home run."

In the other American League games, New York Yankees rallied to beat Milwaukee Brewers 4-3; Detroit Tigers blanked Boston Red Sox 1-0; Kansas City Royals topped Texas Rangers 8-1; Chicago White Sox edged Minnesota Twins 5-4 and Oakland Athletics shut out California Angels 4-0.

Kansas City broke back into the victory column after four straight losses, including Nolan

JIM PALMER
20th Scoreless Innings

Ryan's no-hitter, on John Mayberry's soft swinging and the combination of Wayne Simpson's and Gene Garber's bags throwing.

Mayberry's 10th homer of the season, off Charlie Hudson, carried deep into the rightfield seats. "Hudson threw me the same pitch twice," Mayberry said. "On the first one I looked like a clown and missed. The ball broke down. The next one didn't go down and I just waited. It wasn't a very hard swing."

At Bloomington, knuckleballer Wilbur Wood won his ninth game of the season as Dick Allen's two-run homer and Rich Reichardt's three runs batted in accounted for all the Chicago scoring.

But after the game, everyone wanted to talk about a run that didn't score because Ken Henderson pulled a disappearing ball trick.

With the Twins trailing 5-3, Minnesota's Steve Braun hit a towering fly to right center which Henderson appeared to catch after a diving effort. He didn't. But Braun hesitated rounding second. Hon Jeter retrieved the ball and held Braun on third where he was stranded. One run did score on the play.

"I thought he caught it," Braun said Braun. "And I slowed up until the umpire gave the safe sign that the ball was in."

"I thought he caught it," echoed Sox Manager Chuck Tanner. "It shocked me to see Jeter run after it. It still saved us a run."

Detroit scored only one run on Tony Taylor's home run but that was all they needed as Jim Perry shut out the Red Sox on six hits.

At Yankee Stadium in New York things looked desperate for the home team as Milwaukee's Jim Colborn had a four-hit shutout going with two outs in the bottom of the ninth. But Ron Blomberg singled and Bobby Murcer homered. Ron Blomberg singled and Bobby Murcer homered. Ron Blomberg singled to lead off and Murcer followed with a game-tying homer.

Two innings later Neitle's two-run homer gave New York the victory.

In Anaheim, Dick Green hit a three-run homer and Jim (Catfish) Hunter pitched a five-hit shutout against the Angels, who lost more than the game.

They lost the services of outfielder Bobby Valentine who smashed into the center field fence while pursuing Green's home run and suffered a broken right leg. He is expected to be sidelined for at least three months.

The shutout was the 23rd of Hunter's career, 10th best among active major league pitchers.

Evans Sparks PCOs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sparked by Paul Evans' five-goal performance, Peterborough PCOs trounced the Beamsles Excelsiors 25-13 in an Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A game Thursday.

In other league action, Dave Pirog and Wally Gerrard each fired in four goals as Etobicoke PCOs whipped Oshawa Green Gaels 14-9.

At Peterborough, Guy Legault added three goals and two assists while Jim Johnston and Steve Plunkett scored three spices. Two-goal performances were turned in by Jan Magee and Mickey Gilmour, while singles were scored by Randy Bryan, Ken Byers, Stan Smallhorn, Gord Duncan, Bob Wasson and Glen Ferguson.

Gomer Conner scored four for Bramalea, while Ian Robinson managed three and Bob Wilson two. Single goals were tallied by Wayne Sierrett, Brian Devery, Terry Mastin and Bob Bowman.

At Toronto, Pirog and Cizza were aided by single markers from Doug McLean, Mike Fisher, Brian Howe, Keith Cameron, Randy Tarnak and Morris Masters.

For Oshawa, Dave Fichtner scored three goals. Stan Cockerton two. Singles were added by Bill Greentree, Ken Bateman, Marty Reynen and Curis Bone.

Windsor Manager Honored

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernie Soullierre, 35, a junior baseball manager from Windsor, Ont., has been voted Canada's baseball Man of the Year by the Montreal Athletic Press Baseball Writers Association of America.

Soullierre, who managed Windsor Mic Macs to the title in the Canadian Junior baseball championships last year, outpolled pitcher John Hiller of Detroit Tigers of the American League in the voting conducted this week.

The award is given annually to the man judged to have done the most to promote baseball in Canada.

Last season, Ferguson Jenkins, of Chatham, ace righthander of Chicago Cubs, won the award.

Sikes Shrugs Off His Leading Score

MEMPHIS (AP) — Dan Sikes almost seemed to shrug off the five-under-par 67 that gave him the lead after Thursday's first round of the $175,000 Danny Thoms-Memphis golf classic.

"It was just a nice easy round, the kind you like to play. Very pleasant.

"I was lucky enough to have the ball close to the hole a lot. I didn't have too many long putts and I made all the short ones."

Putting has been a problem this season with the husky, slope-shouldered lawyer. Just three weeks ago he missed the cut in the Greater New Orleans playoff at Dallas, and a month before that he'd missed from two feet to lose a distance a playoff at Bal Harbour to Jack Nicklaus in the Greater Jacksonville Open.

But Sikes, 42, who scored the last of his six tour triumphs in 1968, let none of the little ones get away as he moved one stroke in front of Ron Cerrudo and Dave Hill, tied at 68.

Mike Hill, Dave's brother, headed a quartet another two strokes back at 70. Also at that figure were Doug Sanders, Dale Douglass and Allen Miller.

Defending champion Lee Trevino wasn't overly disappointed with his 71.

"This is the kind of course you've got to hide your time on," Trevino said. "Try to rush it and it'll eat you alive."

The only Canadians in the tournament are Bruce Crampton, Kern and George Knudson, shot 70 and 80 respectively.

Sikes dropped out of an exempt status last year for the first time in a decade when he failed to make the list of the top 60 money winners. But he has rebounded strongly this year with two runner-up finishes and more than $20,000 in winnings.

He says his putting is improving, and that is "very important" to pro golfers, who are "operating on a margin of one stroke a round."

"Last year I had a scoring average of about 71.5. If I could get that improved it just a half stroke a round, I'd have made all kinds of money."

Charlie Henderson led Northstars with five goals. Fred Kaulk had four. Joe McCrea, Rick Bisson, Peter Lebel and Danny Russell had two each. Mike Sloyka, Brian Caley, Arden Fisher, Al Blair and Norm Oldfield each had one.

Cec Denny, Jim Hillhouse and Dale Patterson scored three for Fergus. Ron Weatherhead, Ramsey Fraser and Bill Little scored one each.

Dodgers Rally Late To Clip Cincinnati

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those words, backed up with all the authority of a 61-year-old baseball manager, were enough to snap Dodger pitcher Don Sutton out of a dangerous situation Thursday.

Cincinnati Reds had loaded the bases off Sutton in the first inning on a double by Pete Rose, a walk, a wild pitch and another walk.

Then Los Angeles manager Walter Alston marched to the mound and said simply: "How many innings do you want to go today?"

"I got the message," said Sutton.

He pitched his way out of the jam, by getting Richie Scheinblum on a fly ball, then settled down to hurl a five-hitter, retiring 16 consecutive batters in one stretch before leaving the game for a pinch hitter in the ninth. In that inning the Dodgers rallied with three runs for a 3-1 National League victory.

Elsewhere in the league, St. Louis Cardinals topped Chicago Cubs 6-4 in another day game; Pittsburgh Pirates beat Philadelphia Phillies 5-2 and Houston Astros edged Atlanta Braves 2-1 in night action. New York Mets' game at Montreal was postponed because of rain and cold weather.

It took the second straight game in which the Dodgers rallied late in the game to beat Cincinnati. They topped the Reds 8-6 in 11 innings Wednesday night.

The Reds had broken a scoreless pitching duel between Sutton and Cincinnati hurlers Clay Carroll and Tom Hall in the eighth inning on a two-out, run-scoring, surprise bunt single by Johnny Bench.

But the Dodgers came back in the ninth against reliever Pedro Borbon, 0-3. Joe Ferguson and Willie Crawford singled, Ron Cey sacrificed and Bill Russell was intentionally walked to load the bases.

Pinch-hitter Steve Garvey, batting for Sutton, tied the game with a grounder, then rookie Dave Lopes hit a broken-bat, two-run single to untie it.

Run-scoring singles by pinch hitter Ed Kirkpatrick and Hall knotted the game at 3-3 in the ninth inning lifted the Cards over the Cubs.

"Finally we were able to put some hitting and pitching together," said St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst. "It's a good feeling."

The Cards' Joe Torre left the game in the second inning with a bruised thigh, but Schoendienst'll be ready to face Montreal Friday. "We're winning now, and I want to stay in there."

Dean Believes Nixon Should Have Said More

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ousted White House counsel John W. Dean III says President Nixon could have said on what disclosures the president knew he did in his televised Watergate speech, and would have looked better if he had.

But Dean would not elaborate. Dent could have made in his April 30 speech, saying: "I would rather not get into that now because there were unsaid."

Dean commented on a CBS interview with Walter Cronkite, taped Thursday as the Senate Watergate investigating committee began its public hearings.

Dean said he had no knowledge that Nixon knew in advance of the Watergate break-in, and expressed disappointment that Nixon didn't go further in his speech.

"Now in fact that he gave me what others have called an icy sendoff didn't surprise me," Dean said. "I was fully expecting that . . . it'ngas that he could have said so much more than he did say."

Cronkite asked: "Would the things he could have said made him look better?"

"I think they would have, yes," Dean replied.

Dean reiterated that he never prepared a report for the president about White House involvement in Watergate, despite Nixon's statement Aug. 29, 1972, that Dean's investigation had cleared White House aides. The lawyer said, however, that he looked into the burglary of Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building, but "I wouldn't call it an investigation per se."

Earlier Thursday, the Senate Watergate committee opened televised hearings with testimony from Robert C. Odle, director of administration for the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon was not watching the televised hearings, but receiving reports on them from staff-produced summaries.

While the Watergate committee was meeting, the Senate armed services committee, chaired by Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.-Mo.), held another closed-door hearing on attempts to involve the Central Intelligence Agency in a scheme to halt an FBI investigation into Watergate.

This committee is investigating reports that former White House aides H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman asked CIA Deputy Director Lt.-Gen. Vernon Walters to help quash the FBI's investigation into the channelling of Republican campaign funds through Mexico. The money later was discovered in the possession of convicted Watergate conspirator Bernard L. Barker.

Testimony Thursday was taken from Walters, former CIA director Richard Helms and former deputy director Gen. Robert E. Cushman. Afterwards Symington told reporters:

"All the witnesses stated they did not know whether the president knew about it. It's hard for me to visualize the president knew nothing about it."

Meanwhile, Attorney-General-designate Elliot L. Richardson promised Senate judiciary committee members that the special Watergate prosecutor he will name will have full authority.

There were Watergate developments away from Capitol Hill.

Former staff members of the National Security Council said Henry Kissinger, Nixon's foreign-affairs adviser, was the prime source of leaks to reporters in 1969 and 1970, at a time when wiretaps were employed to trace the leaks.

Council sources said Kissinger ordered the taps on some of his own aides and reporters, and provided the names of the men he wanted checked. The sources said the aides and reporters whose telephones were tapped had direct and frequent access to Kissinger.

Taps were reported on telephones of CBS correspondent Marvin Kalb, London Observer correspondent Henry Brandon, Security Council staff members Winston Lord and Morton Halperin, and Kissinger aide Helmut Sonnenfeldt. Only the tap on Halperin's telephone has been confirmed by the Nixon administration.

Watergate Burglar McCord Talks Before Cameras Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — James W. McCord Jr., the burglar who blew the lid off the Watergate case, goes before United States Senate investigators and national television cameras today to tell his inside story of political intrigue.

Members of the Senate's select Watergate committee, in the second day of public hearings, predicted McCord would have some surprises.

"Anyone who can tell what Jim McCord will say from one day to the next is a better man than I," said Senator Lowell P. Weicker Jr., (Rep.-Conn.), junior member of the committee.

Senator Howard H. Baker Jr. (Rep.-Tenn.) the committee's ranking minority member, said that based on the committee's secret talks with McCord, he anticipated "some significant (testimony" not yet published.

McCord, a retired 19-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency, broke the wall of silence that protected high levels of government from being drawn into the scandal.

He had held his tongue with the others after being caught in the act of bugging and bugging Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building last June 17. But, as McCord stood before the bench in March to be sentenced for his crimes, Judge John J. Sirica read a letter from the convicted man with three terse paragraphs of allegations.

McCord said political pressure was applied to the defendants to plead guilty and remain silent; perjury was committed at their trial, and others involved in the spy mission had not been identified when they could have been during the trial.

In testimony offered later to various investigators, McCord linked former attorney-general John Mitchell, fired presidential counsel John W. Dean III and former White House aide Jeb Stuart Magruder to the scandal.

McCord's name cropped up frequently during the first day of hearings Thursday as the Senate committee sought to lay the groundwork for more serious local days to come.

Robert C. Odle, former director of administration, at the Committee for the Re-election of the President, said he hired McCord to bugle office security. John J. Caulfield, who had been security director in Nixon's 1968 campaign, recommended McCord for the post in 1972, Odle said.

The clean-cut young administrator touched off an outburst of laughter in the huge Caucus Room packed wall to wall with reporters and spectators as he described how he first heard of the Watergate break-in.

Alberta Horses

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta agriculture department's statistics branch estimates that there were 85,000 horses in the province at the end of 1972, most of them in the Calgary and Red Deer areas. Alberta has about one-quarter of Canada's horse population.

Potter Tells MLAs Cure Centre Success

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Dr. Richard Potter told the legislature Thursday that the Queen's Health Care Centre in Belleville has been a successful project.

The project, which started more than a year ago, puts some hospital patients in a converted motel and buses them daily to the hospital. It was started as a less costly system for certain types of hospital patients who, by using the motel, wouldn't tie up hospital beds.

In response to questions in the legislature, Dr. Potter said he would like to see similar projects started elsewhere.

At first, he said, doctors were reluctant to change their methods of practise and patients also preferred the older method.

"Gradually this has improved and a result where we had 78 beds available, we were running around 40 to 45 bed capacity. Now it is up to 55, 56 or 57."

Ottawa Plans No Increase In Health Aid

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has no plans to increase its health cost-sharing offer to the provincial government officials said Thursday.

The plan, criticized by the provinces when federal-provincial ministers of health and finance met here recently, will surface again at next week's conference of provincial premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The plan, criticized by the provinces when federal-provincial ministers of health and finance met here recently, will surface again at next week's conference of provincial premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The proposal, to give the provinces more flexibility to run their own health schemes, would result in the federal government transferring an additional $1.1 billion to the provinces over the next five years.

"And to the best of my knowledge," a senior official said Thursday, "this is the final offer."

Prisoner Remains On Loose

OTTAWA (CP) — Lazie Eper, 34-year-old escaped prisoner from Collins Bay penitentiary, remained on the loose and on the move Thursday.

Eper, serving a double life sentence for the 1967 shooting of an Ontario provincial police sergeant in Hamilton, escaped Wednesday from the penitentiary near Kingston, Ont.

Thursday Eper hitched a ride with Rene Thibault of Russell, Ont. a construction worker on the site where Eper spent the night.

After Thibault drove him a short distance, Eper indicated he was holding a gun on the man and asked for his brown 1972 Chevrolet.

"He told me he didn't want to hurt me," Mr. Thibault said, "but wanted my car to get away because he had just robbed a bank."

When last seen the car was headed south on Highway 16.

McKeough, Brunelle, Auld Used Planes Extensively

TORONTO (CP) — Three cabinet ministers made extensive use of provincial government planes for flights to their ridings in fiscal 1971-72, flight records produced Thursday for th elegislature's public accounts committee showed.

The ministers were Darcy McKeough, special parliamentary assistant to Premier William Davis who was treasurer at the time; Rene Brunelle, community and social services; and James Auld, environment.

The logs, released to the committee by Natural Resources Minister Leo Bernier, responsible for the province's 43-plane fleet, gave details on trips by 19 ministers but no reasons for any of the flights.

Mr. Bernier said reasons for the flights would have to be obtained from each individual minister. Mr. Bernier said his responsibility is to provide the aircraft, not make a judgment on their use.

"I did not and will not question any of my colleagues about these flights," he told the committee. "They are responsible men."

The logs showed that Mr. McKeough, who resigned as treasurer last year over a conflict of interest involving a subdivision project in his hometown of Chatham, made 26 flights during the period under review by the committee, April 1, 1971 to March 31, 1972.

Of these, 24 either ended or began at Chatham, in his riding, and there were six other flights in the general area of his riding, three to London and three to Windsor.

Mr. McKeough declined comment later, saying he had not seen the records.

The committee is investigating the possible abuse of government planes by ministers and their families. It decided the records of flights made in 1972-73, which Mr. Bernier said he would supply.

Mr. Bernier said his staff also is preparing a list for the committee of ministerial travel in leased planes that should be available in two weeks.

However, he declined to release the logs on flights taken by Premier William Davis in his chartered jet for security reasons. Mr. Bernier told the committee earlier this week that Mr. Davis's life had been threatened nine times in the last three weeks. He said logs show a flight pattern that could be advantageous to anyone seeking to harm the premier.

Mr. Brunelle was listed as having taken 71 trips during this period when he was minister of the federal lands and forest department. Of these, 53 were to or from Kapuskasing in Northern Ontario, 12 miles west of Moosbeam, where Mr. Brunelle resides.

In an interview, Mr. Brunelle said he wanted to reserve his defence of the flights for the committee if asked to appear.

"I think the committee is the proper place for me to comment on this," he said.

However, he emphasized after some prodding that his riding is remote, large and in an unorganized area that makes it difficult for him to "get around quickly."

He said it takes 14 hours for him to travel home by train from Toronto. "By flying, I can leave in the morning from Toronto and be back in the evening. Otherwise, it's a two-day trip."

One of the flights listed on the log was to Fairbanks and Anchorage in Alaska July 21, 1971. Mr. Brunelle explained he went there at the invitation of the United States department of the interior for a seminar on resources management.

Mr. Brunelle's flights got a quick reaction from committee to scan the lists before commencing.

Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) commented that Mr. Brunelle averaged one flight a week to and from his riding.

"I find it a bit difficult to believe there was enough government business to merit Mr. Brunelle to fly back and forth in this way."

Outside the committee, Mr. Cassidy said it is the very least, Mr. Brunelle showed an undue preference for one particular riding."

In response to Mr. Cassidy's prodding in the committee, Mr. Bernier said a flight to Kapuskasing costs $1,000 and takes about 1½ hours at a cost of $100 an hour.

Mr. Cassidy said that came to "about $10,000 for 50 trips or more."

Mr. Auld held two portfolios during the flight period, tourism and environment, when he made 39 trips, 23 to Brockville in his riding and six to Cornwall, N.Y., across the St. Lawrence River from Brockville.

Mr. Auld said in an interview he frequently landed at Ogdensburg when the Brockville airport was inoperative.

He said he was prepared "to take my lumps" before the committee for the flights, which he considered a legitimate expense of his ministerial duties.

Sylvannus Apps, minister of correctional services, made two flights during the period, both to Kingston in his riding. Of six flights taken by Health Minister Richard Potter, two were to Trenton near his hometown of Belleville.

Two of eight trips Treasurer John White flew in the period were to his hometown London. He explained earlier to the committee one of these involved an Ottawa conference which took two members of his family because there were PARIS (AP) — A gynecologist, Dr. Robert Giraud, sued Bernardo Bertolucci, director of Last Tango in Paris, for 300,000 francs (about $66,000) Wednesday for showing in the film the building where he owns an apartment.

The doctor asked the court to order cuts from the film in which the windows of his apartment appeared.

The judges, who heard the defence say Dr. Giraud's private life was not interfered with in anyway, said the y would not see the movie before issuing a verdict.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Seiji Ozawa, received thunderous applause Wednesday night at the Palais des Beaux-Arts in Brussels.

The audience's enthusiasm erupted immediately after the orchestra ended Johann Christian Bach's Fourth Symphony in D.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SATURDAY, MAY 13

Aries (March 21-April 19): Check the security of your home. Advice is available—get second opinions. There's much to do in a short time.

Taurus (April 20-May 2): Strive for the minimum outlay of energy, indulging a lazy streak gives intuition a chance to function.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Leave the old hands alone—your information has no bearing on their conclusions. Find quiet afternoon.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Impulse leads you into unexpected company. Make use of this opportunity to establish new contacts.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Others are stubborn today. Hold your temper. Leave the work to those who want it.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Home life is the best environment today. Little is gained by far-ranging adventures. There's much news—be alert.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get down to fundamentals. Fix your home. Correcting any hazards. Go it alone, avoiding group efforts.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Self-interest leads to progress. Be indefinite early. A mid-day day blends into an entertaining evening.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An easy touch is best today. Indulge no one's nostalgia. Your best results lie in the future. Family affairs improve.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Comes now a lively, good-humored day. Cater to loved ones. Make an effort to please.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Letting developments take their own course is a rare art. Any intervention in others' affairs encumbers you with extra responsibility.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Being sure of what you say helps, as does being sure of what you really want. Accomplish all you can while the way is clear.

British Payola Arrests Are Made

LONDON (AP) — A record-plugging scandal with wide-spread overtones of bribery and sex has hit the BBC.

Singer Dorothy Squires, model Janie Jones, former BBC producer John Dabbs and six others were arrested by Scotland Yard detectives in dawn raids Thursday. Six others are being sought.

Miss Squires was charged with paying Dabbs's vacation expenses to Malta and Gibraltar in co-operation with Edward Kassner, head of President Record Co. Kassner, believed to be in the United States, was among those sought.

Miss Squires was freed on bail and said: "I'm innocent. I passed out three times while the police questioned me." She accused Scotland Yard of "a waste of public money and public time."

Dabbs also was freed on bail. Miss Jones remained in custody accused of 12 offences, including procuring prostitutes for BBC officials and threatening a potential prosecution witness. Her former husband, U.S. pop singer and composer John Christian-Dee, was remained in custody, charged with threatening a witness "to pervert the course of justice."

Others charged in the indictments were mostly record salesmen. The amounts listed in the bribery accusations were about $125.

The BBC gave prominence in its radio and television news bulletins to the arrests.

The tabloid Sun swept Watergate and almost everything else off its front page with headlines screaming: "Payola Swoop After Plugging Probe."

Charges of skullduggery at the BBC were made two years ago by The News Of the World, a Sunday tabloid. It said that BBC disc jockeys and producers of pop programs were bribed with call girls and paid vacations to push records that might attract youthful buyers. The newspaper sent its findings to Scotland Yard.

Britain's director of public prosecutions promised an investigation, and the matter lay there until Thursday's raids. Yard officials said their files have been built into a 300-page dossier.

Rhodesia Tightens Controls

VICTORIA FALLS, Rhodesia (Reuter) — Rhodesian police scoured the banks of the Zambezi River today for the body of a Canadian girl who dropped into the river after being shot, allegedly by Zambian troops.

Marjan Ibuna Dribjer, 19, of Rockwood, Ont., and a companion, Christine Louise Sinclair, 19, of Guelph Ont., both died Tuesday when caught in gunfire from the Zambian side of the Zambezi as they explored a rocky gorge just below Victoria Falls.

Police recovered the body of Miss Sinclair from the bottom of the 300-foot gorge Thursday but there was no sign of Miss Dribjer. Hit by bullets, she fell into the waters of the Zambezi where they boil through a narrow passage.

As the shootings brought Zambian-Rhodesian friction to a dangerous level, the Salisbury government announced it is arming its police with new powers to combat African nationalist guerrillas operating in the country.

Amendments to the special emergency regulations provide for the evacuation of African tribesmen from certain areas effectively creating a "no-go" area in the northeast of the country where guerrilla attacks have been most serious.

The new regulations also give police powers to impose local curfews.

In London, the Zambian high commissioner said his government is "shaken" by the incident.

"My government is greatly concerned about the shooting incident reported in the press," A. I. Phiri said in a statement to the Commonwealth Sanctions committee.

The London Times says the killings will embarrass President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia.

"Either the troops opened fire on their own authority or they sought it from Lusaka and got it," The Times says in an editorial. "If they got it he needs to know who in Lusaka is making his foreign policy for him.

"If they acted without orders he needs to get worried over discipline of his army."

Girls Thought Saboteurs

Zambia Says Sentry Guarding Power Plant

LUSAKA, Zambia (Reuter) — Zambia has said that two Canadian girls killed by a Zambian sentry near the Victoria Falls last Tuesday were shot while swimming across the Zambezi River from Rhodesia towards a vital power station.

In a six-page statement on the incident, the government said Friday night that it deeply regrets the deaths of innocent persons, but added that the duty of the sentry concerned was to defend the power plant regardless of race, color or nationality.

Observers noted that the statement contradicted a description of the incident given to journalists by American tourist Carol Crothers, 25, whose husband John was wounded in the same burst of fire that killed Margot Dreijer, 18, of Rockwood, Ont., and Christine Sinclair, 19, of Guelph, Ont.

The Zambian statement, released after a series of top-level meetings, said a Zambian army officer on sentry duty noticed four persons on the Rhodesian bank of the Zambezi wearing swimming suits with what appeared to be bandoleers or waterproof gear for protecting explosives.

It referred to "their intense interest with scenery on the Zambian bank" and said three of the group began to swim towards the Zambian side of the river while one remained on the Rhodesian bank.

"As one of them remained behind, the sentry immediately felt that there could have been another group giving cover to the four and therefore had to take the necessary precautions.

"From their actions it became evident to him that they were on a mission to attack the power station which is one of the most vital installations in Zambia and the only one in the area."

The statement said the sentry fired at the swimmers who by then were in Zambian waters. One immediately disappeared under the current while the other two struggled back to the Rhodesian bank.

The sentry did not fire at the fourth member of the party who remained on Rhodesian territory, it said.

The statement said Rhodesia is responsible for the deaths. Rhodesia should have warned them about areas which were not safe to visit, it said.

The lengthy statement appeared officially to exonerate Zambian troops involved in the incident from any blame, while at the same time contradicting Mrs. Crothers's contention that the tourists came under fire as they walked beside the Zambezi opposite the Zambian power station, and that sporadic shooting continued for more than two hours after the initial fusillade.

The government-owned Zambia Daily Mail says Rhodesia "stage-managed" the deaths of the two Canadian girls.

Meanwhile, the body of Miss Sinclair was being prepared for transportation home.

Statement Discounted

VICTORIA FALLS, Rhodesia (Reuter) — A senior Rhodesian police officer discounted today a Zambian statement that two Canadian girls killed near here Tuesday were swimming on the Zambian side of the Zamberi River.

Superintendent Don Russell, in charge of operations to recover the victims' bodies in the shooting incident, said not even Olympic gold medal swimmer Mark Spitz could survive in the Zambezi at the point in the area of the falls where the two girls died.

Brezhnev, Brandt Plan Barter Deals

BONN (AP) — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt signed a 10-year accord today on economic, industrial and technical co-operation that may launch a new era in East-West relations.

The signing ceremony in the Bonn foreign ministry took place as thousands of demonstrators gathered in the capital and in the industrial Ruhr to register support or opposition to Brezhnev's five-day visit.

The economic pact is the most significant of three set for signing today. The two other pacts, which will be signed by the responsible ministers of both countries, deal with cultural exchanges and permitting West Germany's Lufthansa airline to fly to Japan over Soviet territory, stopping en route at West Berlin and Moscow.

The trade treaty leaves it up to West German private enterprise to breathe life into the accord. Already pending are deals for a barter exchange of West German pipe for Soviet-delivered natural gas and a West German steel mill for Soviet raw materials.

Credit Card Coming For All Medicare

TORONTO (CP) — Health Minister Richard Potter said Friday his ministry probably will give Ontario residents a plastic card which can be used for health payments.

He told the Ontario Medical Association's closing session that the card likely will contain a permanent identification number which will help the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP) with accounting procedures and also help OHIP to inform patients about billings for services.

"This identification system would have major benefits," said Dr. Potter. "Certainly it would result in easy preparation of patient profiles."

The patient profiles would show the amounts of billings for individual health services and would allow OHIP to find out which families were using health services extensively—possibly even over-using them.

Dr. Potter also said the card would serve as a check on doctors' billings to OHIP and whether the services actually were provided for the patient.

Dr. Potter said he has no intention of putting all doctors on the province's payroll and has no plans to put ceilings on doctors' incomes.

Harvard Professor Watergate Prosecutor

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Archibald G. Cox, the Harvard University law professor selected as special prosecutor for the Watergate case, says the guidelines under which he'll work are not entirely what he would have wished but "will provide me with sufficient independence."

Cox told a television interviewer Friday night that he discussed the guidelines by telephone with Attorney-General-designate Elliot L. Richardson before their publication.

"I am confident I shall be independent," he told the interviewer. "As to the rest, I can only say I will do the best I can."

Richardson and Cox will appear together Monday before the Senate judiciary committee, which has regularly probed the Richardson's confirmation as attorney-general pending definition of the special prosecutor will work.

Optical Firm Alleged Controlling Licenses

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's largest optical company has the influence to control licensing of opticians in Ontario, Albert Roy (L—Ottawa East) charged in the legislature Friday.

Mr. Roy said Imperial Optical Co. Ltd., which makes 70 per cent of the eyeglass frames and lenses sold in Canada, has direct or indirect connections with members of the Ophthalmic Dispensing Board of Ontario, the regulatory body of the optical industry.

He said Fred Dolby, an Imperial executive, is secretary-treasurer of the board.

Sydney Hermant, the head of Imperial, has shares in companies headed by other board members who are opticians, the MPP said.

Marc Raymond of Kingston, immediate past president of the Ontario Association of Dispensing Opticians, said in an interview that Mr. Roy had sought the association's support this week.

"We neither oppose nor support his views," Mr. Raymond said.

The Kingston optician said there have been "all kinds of rumors" about the influence wielded by Imperial.

The Trouble with Kids!

Ten-year-old George Kneisel has two tough roles to play in the Belleville Theatre Guild's upcoming production of Teahouse of the August Moon. ## Ontario to Buy World Rights

TORONTO (CP)—Gordon Carton, minister of transportation and communication, told the legislature Friday that Ontario will pay $500,000 for the world rights to a German-developed elevated transit system.

He said the money would be paid to Krauss-Maffei AG of Munich over two years in two payments of $250,000.

Krauss-Maffei was named May 1 to construct a $16 million prototype of the elevated transit system which is to be operating next year at the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

News Briefs

B.C. Cabinet Shuffled

VICTORIA (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett shuffled his cabinet Friday, adding five new members and giving Highways Minister Robert Strachan the new portfolio of commercial transport and communication with some of the duties of his former job.

Computer Delays Raise

OTTAWA (CP) — A computer breakdown has caused a two week delay in pay increases for the post office, a spokesman for the post office said Friday. But the cheques should be in the mail next week, Roger Decarie, president of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada, issued a news release Thursday complaining that back pay of about $6 a month had been due since May 1 but members of the union had not received the money.

Probers Think They Can Tie Presidential Aide To Offers of Executive Clemency to Jas. McCord

WASHINGTON (AP) — A source close to the Senate Watergate hearing says investigators believe they can establish that former presidential counsellor John Ehrlichman authorized repeated offers of executive clemency made to James McCord.

McCord has been convicted of wiretapping, burglary and conspiracy in the case. He testified in televised hearings Friday that former White House aide John Caulfield repeatedly pressed him, and once threatened him, in an attempt to get him to go to jail without talking.

McCord quoted Caulfield as saying executive clemency would be given him after a year in jail, that the offer had come "from the highest levels of the White House," and that President Nixon had been told of the offers and would be informed of McCord's decision.

McCord said he assumed Caulfield meant the offer came from the president, Ehrlichman or White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman.

Caulfield will be called as the next witness before the Senate hearings. He is scheduled to testify after McCord finishes at the next session, scheduled for Tuesday.

Caulfield issued a statement Friday saying that McCord's testimony "does not fully reflect my best recollection of the events ..." but that he "met with McCord "on three occasions in January and conveyed to him certain messages from a high White House official."

Staff investigators already have questioned Caulfield, on leave from his job at the treasury department. Sources say Caulfield has declined to say whether anyone higher up authorized him to make the clemency offers to McCord. They say originally Caulfield said that he merely pretended to McCord that his offers came from higher-ups, and that he was just "pulling" to impress McCord of the importance of his silence.

However, the sources said "Caulfield was Ehrlichman's man," and indicated they can prove orders regarding clemency came from Ehrlichman.

The sources said investigators have no evidence President Nixon himself is involved in clemency offer. The White House repeated Friday an earlier denial, saying Nixon "at no time authorized anyone to represent him in offering executive clemency." Executive clemency can be granted only by the president.

Caulfield, 44, a former New York City police officer, was a staff assistant to fired presidential counsel John Dean until March, 1973, when he joined the treasury department. McCord told dreporters after the hearing Friday that he had heard a "rumble" that Caulfield privately had implicated Dean in the clemency offer.

Except for the clemency matter, McCord added little to his earlier testimony made public in a civil lawsuit.

He said, under questioning, that he believes former attorney-general John Mitchell had cleared the wiretapping of Democratic officers directly with President Nixon.

He said he based this supposition, not on first-hand knowledge, but what fellow conspirator Gordon Liddy told him.

Youth Takes Over Theatre

Two Belleville Theatre Guild records will be broken May 30 when the latest production, Treahorne of the August Moon has its opening night in the Pinnacle Playhouse. Not only is the cast of 23 people the largest ever to play in one production. It is also, by far, the youngest.

More than half the players are under 21, despite the fact that most of the characters in the comedy are adult, many being middle-aged and old-aged. For instance, 17-year-old Paul Kirby, a Centennial Secondary School student plays the role of Ancient Man.

Paul has acted in two previous Guild productions, Mother Courage and She Stoops to Conquer. Many of the other youngsters, however, are newcomers to the Pinnacle stage, a fact that has been welcomed by director Ted Bairstow of Loyalist College.

"The Guild executive, producer Verna Patterson and I planned it this way," he said. "We wanted new faces, both up front and backstage. We've been lucky to find many with experience elsewhere. They'll be an asset to the Guild for years to come."

On the subject of the young people playing older roles, Ted had a couple of interesting points to make: "They demonstrate age by reactions, responses and movements and by how the other players treat them — rather than by facial make-up.

"Also, it is relatively easier to portray an older Japanese person than a Westerner. The place allocated to older people in an Eastern society is much more well defined.

"In the East, they are respected, sought after for advice. In the West they tend to be pushed to one side, hidden away, buried before their deaths."

About half the cast of Treahorne are from Belleville. The remainder are from Wellington, Marmora, Trenton, Carrolton, Shannonville, Frankford and Stirling.

The play runs from May 30 to June 2 and June 6-9. Tickets are $2.25 for adults, $1.25 for students. They may be reserved by phoning 967-1442.

By the way, the cast selection wasn't all one way . . . 25-year-old Sharon Poitras is playing the part of a child!

Few Moorings Left As Bay Water Rises

DESERONTO — The holiday weekend should reveal if high water has dampened enthusiasm for pleasure boating.

The Victoria Day holiday is the time most people come sailing for boats stored since winter, says Jack Scott, owner of the Bay Dawson Boating Centre here.

High water has left docks awash, boat houses unusable along the Lake Ontario shoreline.

With private and commercial docking facilities covered, boat owners have faced the possibility of using their pieces in come ashore if they ventured out.

Around 10 craft of all sizes — commercial cruiser ships to outboard runabouts — are stored for the winter at the Scott boatyard. With its own marine railway and repair docks, it's one of the biggest such operations in Ontario.

So far, private owners have been lucky in taking their boats out for the new season, says Mr. Scott.

With few craft cruising the high water, traffic around the marina has been slow to date.

Like other commercial operators, Mr. Scott has his problems.

His extensive network of docks have been created by the flood, which also has swamped work areas.

Work goes on as unusual — only it's more often, says Mr. Scott, who must dash his men to the job in rubber boats.

Similar problems face commercial operators along the lake and St. Lawrence River, he says.

Boat traffic is "way down" on the waterway, he says.

"Nobody's been in a hurry to get their boat out," says Mr. Scott. "Up to this they haven't known what to do with them in many cases."

North York Joins Strikers

TORONTO (CP) — More than 300 employees of Canadian Electric Co. Ltd. plant in suburban North York joined more than 6,000 workers on strike against the company across Ontario.

Another 600 installers are scheduled to strike today in centres from eastern Ontario to British Columbia.

Negotiations between the Communications Workers of Canada and the firm broke down Thursday when the union refused to accept the company's latest offer.

The union said in a statement that it wants a 12-per-cent increase in wages in the first year of a three-year contract and 10 per cent in the other years. The union refused the last company offer of 28 cents an hour in the first year and 13 cents in each of the other two years.

Installers earn $4.72 under the contract that expired last October and the plant workers earn $3.59 an hour. Office workers average $146.

Members of Local 513, United Electrical Workers Union, went on strike in Bramalea last Sunday. The walkout by those 2,000 workers followed one last week by 600 clerical and engineering workers, members of United Auto Workers Local 1535.

About 2,850 UAW members at plants in Kingston, Belleville and London went out on strike earlier this month.

Marmora Copes With Problems

MARMORA (Special) — At the May 15 meeting of Marmora and Lake Township Council, L. G. Wood, RR3, Marmora, asked that consideration be given to provision of 80 feet of culvert behind his property to relieve a flooding problem.

IN MEMORIAM

HASKINS — In loving memory of a dear father, Frederick Haskins, who passed away 2 years ago, May 19, 1971.

Years may pass, and years may go,
But memories of you live on,
Loving, giving, the whole of the time,
So dearest one the world could find.
Always treasured, fond and kind,
Proud as who thought the world of you,
Ever remembered by Daisy and Jim.

HASKINS — In loving memory of our dear father, Frederick Haskins, who passed away May 19, 1971.

Those we love don't go away,
They walk beside us every day,
Unseen, unheard, but always near,
And loved and missed every year.
A little bird sings a lovely song,
Each year from our home but not from our hearts.
Always remembered by daughter-in-law Ruth.

HUES — In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Ronald Hues, who passed away May 20, 1970.

His smile was on his little heart,
His love was in his eyes,
His hand was ever ready
To help the weak and wise;
His life was filled with kindness,
His heart was filled with love,
That seemed to say, forget me not,
But meet me up above.
Sadly missed by mother, brother and family.

HOYLE — In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Ernest Hoyle, who passed away May 20, 1971.

Sweet memories are all we have,
Memories we treasure,
Memories we share,
Memories we will keep forever.
He was closed his weary eyelids,
He folded his hands to rest,
He bowed his head so meekly,
And God knew what was best.
Sadly missed by wife Ruth, daughter Ruth and family.

We do not think of you,
Because we never forget you,

It treasures through life true.

Twenty From Telecare At International Meet

Twenty members of Telecare from the Belleville district attended the third International Line Convention in Hamilton in April.

Telecare Canada was host for the convention, sponsored by Life Line International for the 25 affiliated centres around the world.

In Canada, the telephone counselling service and crisis intervention centre is called Telecare. In the United States it is called Contact. Elsewhere in the world it is known as Life Line.

Dr. Alan Walker of Sydney, Australia, founder of the Life Line organization, told delegates that Life Line international must never relinquish its position as part of the service. Though the services of professional social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists are effective, he added that these are not substitutes for Christian faith and practice.

Allan Hardie of Cape Town, South Africa, said 85 per cent of the calls received by the crisis intervention centre there comes from whites. The statistic shows that few blacks have access to telephones.

Newly elected director of Telecare Canada is Rev. William Lamb, former minister of Bridge Street United Church in Belleville He now lives in Toronto.

Tickets, on sale at drug stores, are $1. Prizes total $25,000.

Camp Huronda is a medically supervised camp for diabetic children, where they can enjoy all the usual activities of summer camping and learn to control their diet and insulin requirements away from home.

Is Policeman Getting Justice?

By IAN ROBERTSON

Carm Schwager's ordeal is not over yet. Even when it is, whether he wins or loses his battle for a pension, the bad taste of the affair will always be with him.

He will always wonder, how a town he served for 18 years in the tough jobs of patrol policeman could treat him as it had. Luckily, he can balance this memory with those of the support and indignation of citizens, fellow policemen and the Ontario Police Association who are ready to take his case to the Ontario Supreme Court if need be.

Mr. Schwager suffers poor health. Calcium deficiency has caused him trouble for years, even before he became a policeman. The force knew it. He didn't try to hide it.

Over the years, this leg ailment worsened. He spent time in hospital, especially after a bad fall he claims to have suffered while on duty in 1965.

Carm Schwager's one real regret is that he didn't report that injury. But, as he explained last month, no compensation reports were provided on the Trenton force at that time and "we were never advised to report such accidents."

He holds out one main hope.

Two policemen will on the force remember the incident and are willing to testify as special Ontario Police Commission to be held in Trenton in the near future.

The whole picture still hasn't been presented clearly and probably won't emerge until the hearing. Perhaps criticism of the Trenton board of police commissioners for their handling of the matter is unfair, but it would seem that the members simply wanted to wash their hands of the whole matter.

According to Dennis Lattin, administrator of the Ontario Police Association (OPA) who is acting on this case, the former constable was given a directive by the board on Dec. 1, 1973, requesting his resignation, due to health reasons.

A further directive, on Jan. 29, 1974, was issued by Chief David Saunders, advising him of his dismissal. The Ontario police association requested and was granted a hearing at the end of February.

During this meeting, the 46-year-old Schwager was offered a civilian job operating the night police communications network. But the offer of an annual $6,000 salary (he was receiving $11,239 as a first - class constable) isn't exactly a generous one.

Picton Judge Muriel Lane, who recently claimed Mr. Schwager received a fair hearing, has come under fire from the OPA: "He was not given a hearing until 60 days after he was dismissed this does not qualify as a hearing as is alluded to," the OPA charges.

Since 1970, Mr. Schwager has been Trenton's police court officer and, according to members of the force and the board itself, is doing an adequate job. The whole problem would seem to lie with police act regulations.

As Mr. Lattin pointed out in a telephone conversation from Toronto this week, it is these regulations the OPA is fighting desperately.

Cases in point include:

—Mr. Schwager, 46, out of work, no pension. He's taking orders and selling tailor-made suits for a Montreal firm.

—Napanee Constable Robert Murdock, severely wounded while on duty. His police committee offered him a $97-per - week janitor's position that he refused to take. He is remaining on the force while the police association battles the case.

—Trenton Constable Mark Houlden, who suffered a fatal brain attack while answering a domestic complaint in 1970. The town paid his family compensation.

—Constables Gerry Bull and Jack O'Donnell are two very lucky cops. A marksman got their Belleville cruiser last month but not them.

Police across the continent are concerned that they are not adequately cared for in case of injury or illness suffered while on duty. As has been pointed out, who is to say that a kick in the stomach that appears so clear up today might not end up as a major problem weeks later and be difficult to prove?

Mr. Lattin expects an arbitrator for the Schwager case will be appointed next week. He's convinced the hearing will be relatively short. We have a case," he said.

Student Hiring Starts Slowly

By MIKE PATERSON

Those lazy, hazy crazy days of summer are almost here. Classes will soon be over and the beaches will be filling up with flocks of students swimming, throwing frisbees and generally enjoying themselves.

For a growing majority of students however, summer is the one chance they have to earn the dollars they need to see them through next winter's tuition fees and textbook costs. They'll pick tobacco at Tillsonburg, wash cars, serve food and belt railway ties. Others will use their undergraduate training to find jobs they may return to permanently after graduation.

Less than three weeks from opening on May 1, the Canada Manpower Student Summer Employment office at 1821 Wallbridge Crescent already has about 1,000 registrations from students seeking summer employment. The extent of their desire for work ranges from the critical to a casual "maybe," but for most the need is real enough.

Scholarships, bursaries and grants are available to them for the school year, but few will cover all a student's needs and they are heavily competed for. Not every student gets one.

Student loans are available at little or no interest. But after, three, four or five years of study, they place a heavy burden of repayment on the new graduate.

Although the student job centre has only been open three weeks, graduate officer Marilyn Williams has been preparing the ground for the past several months. "There are fewer high-paying jobs this year," she said. "We're mainly just getting the two and three-week service jobs and there, but virtually nothing from industry.

"Orders are coming in steadily but, there's nothing really for university students. I just don't know how they're going to make it, unless they get a job for three months," she said. "Some employers have placed orders then changed their minds. It's only a very few but still very frustrating."

The student job market represents a type of job peculiar to student employment," he said. "They're not in competition with the full - time work force. The young fellows are at their peak in strength and energy and will take on jobs that adults may have difficulty in filling.

"Girls are having much more difficulty finding work. They are almost directly in competition with those married women trying to get into the job market," said Mr. Martin. "Girls make up nearly half of the student employment office registrations to date.)

"But there's no evidence students are robbing jobs from breadwinners."

The situation, then, is not as bright as it could be, especially for the girls. It is not a crisis situation but one that could use a little help.

The students are willing and ready to work and, if a job is available that is ill-suited to a breadwinner, why should it not be offered to a student?

The Canada Manpower Student Summer Employment office can be phoned directly at 962-9661. If there is a vacant job that is particularly suited to students, Marilyn and her staff want to hear about it.

The ultimate solution to the annual shortage of students onto the job market can only be provided by the education system itself. It is not industry's responsibility.

In several areas a trimester system releasing students three times during the year, has been working well. We are yet to see it here.

Relative Value

How much is money worth? We know that with inflation the dollar's value is undergoing continual erosion. Its current value is down to something like 89 cents in terms of what it was a decade ago.

As yet there is no sign of a monetary crisis. Costs keep rising of course but there is no sign of a crash in the style of the late twenties and early thirties. There have been warnings that such a situation could well come about, given present trends, but just when and under what circumstances no one, not even in the sphere of economics, seems prepared to say.

Meanwhile credit is easy enough to obtain and deficit financing is the accepted practice by governments. This being so the hue and cry over the financing of the next Olympics in Montreal is difficult in some respects to understand.

Ideally the Games should pay their way, but there are grave doubts on this score — especially in view of the Expo 67 experience. In a letter on this page recently — a copy of one sent earlier to Prime Minister Trudeau — a Belleville woman spoke of Expo as having been a "fiasco" from a financial standpoint.

True, Expo had its financial difficulties, but this brings us back to our original question ,how much is money worth and what is its worth in relation to what it buys? If we get what we pay for then Expo 67 was one of the grandest human experiences in Canada's history and certainly one of the greatest in the world's history. The development of the island sites, the construction of pavilions, the presentation therein of the achievements of different nations and the bringing together of people of many nations. . . . these things were beyond price.

Financially it will be to everyone's advantage if the Olympics do better than Expo, but, realistically, no one should be disappointed if the event does not pay its way. Revenue will be generated in any event, and in countless ways; there will be visitors to Canada who would not come otherwise, jobs will be provided in preparing for the games and so on.

Our money may be declining in value all the time but deficit financing is a way of life, but if we stopped to worry about this there would be no Expos and no Olympics and the world would be a much duller and sadder place.

Nostalgic Occasion

Nostalgia is reading about the likes of a still-going-strong Fred Astaire, although of course he has long since given up the light fantastic to play the role of one of Hollywood's elder statesmen.

He was honored recently in New York, at what society columnist Suzy Knickerbocker described as "one of those brilliant nights you hope and pray for — and never seem to get — at Philharmonic Hall when the Film Society of Lincoln Centre presented him both in person, 'sleek as a skinny seal,' sitting in Jock Whitney's loge, and on the screen in 29 dance sequences from his movies with, in Fred's words, 'some of the most beautiful, gorgeous women in the world.' "

Said columnist Knickerbocker, with another graceful turn of phrase, "It was a dazzling evening of the most elegant nostalgia . . ."

Astaire's sister Adele (his first dancing partner who, by an earlier marriage into the British aristocracy, once rejoiced in the title of Lady Charles Cavendish) was there.

So too — and it would have been no occasion without her — was Ginger Rodgers, in black and white chiffon, and the audience gave her a standing ovation.

It is good to hear the name Fred Astaire still making the rounds. He has come a long way from Omaha, Nebraska, where he was born Frederick Austerlitz in 1899.

Threat of Atmospheric Pollution

France Prepares for A-Tests Amid Further Protests

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The French determination to go ahead with a new series of atmospheric nuclear explosions has to be the most unpopular foreign policy move of any major European nation in recent years.

While West Germany's Bundestag or Parliament approves recognition of two Germanies, thus managing our fears of a restaurant armed German state, and while conservative opponents around Spain's still unpopular General Franco prepare Spain for a post-Franco era, the French have taken up the torch from Madrid and Bonn in keeping anti-European feelings alive in the world.

Ranged against her now are all the major Pacific Rim nations, joined with strong new voices from the newly-elected socialist governments in New Zealand and Australia.

The New Zealanders say they will despatch a frigate to try and stop the French nuclear bomb tests near Tahiti. Both New Zealand and Australia have asked the International Court at The Hague to outlaw the tests as a violation of international law.

The French reaction, or more specifically that of Gaullist President Pompidou, has been to thumb noses at just about everyone opposing the tests. The French mania for "la Gloire" (Glory) vindicated by the late General Charles de Gaulle, rekindled by his heir and successor Pompidou is expected in the 1970s in French determination to keep active her "force de frappe," an independent, nuclear-equipped military establishment.

Since 1966, France has carried out no less than 30 tests on Polynesian atolls which make up the last lingering fringe of French colonial empire in the South Pacific. The French appear to be perfecting two types of atomic weapons, the small tactical kind which could be used in conjunction with land air forces and the big hydrogen warhead for which she already has the required launching vehicles.

Already at sea are two French nuclear-powered submarines of the Redoutable class with a third and fourth under construction. And in the air, a French tactical fighter-bomber air group made up mainly of Dassault advanced Mirage jets has atomic bomb capabilities.

It's interesting that in Europe the British cannot make moves against Paris because of British's similar commitment to nuclear power, at sea for example like the French, with her "Dreadnought" class of three nuclear submarines armed with the American Polaris sea-to-air, nuclear missile.

The world's major nuclear powers, Britain, the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. are still committed not treaty to stop nuclear bomb tests in the atmosphere, though both the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. maintain these in the ground they say for peaceful purposes.

But in the Pacific Rim region, the French are not budging one inch to mixed pressures. During the last test series, the French vicars broke off diplomatic relations with France's move which meant the loss of a major contract for French jet fighters to the Peruvian Air Force.

Peru's military socialist colonels' government was fearful that nuclear fall-out would destroy the Pacific Ocean pattern of anchovy breeding and movement, a fish used for fish meal manufacture which represents this country's major export.

Japan, always aware it has been the only country to experience an atomic bomb attack, is bitterly opposed to any kind of nuclear testing. And her concern is really premier Tanaka, under fire for his domestic policies since he became Premier, is being pressured to strongly resist Paris.

The stubbornness of the French against reasonable odds is not news. In the South Pacific this summer, it could be disastrous.

"I thought he was going a bit deep for planting tulip bulbs."

Praise and Support for Citizen's Bureau

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I say a few words regarding an article entitled "UCB backs Citizens Bureau" which appeared in The Intelligencer.

Although I am not a citizen of Belleville, nor have I had the need of the bureau's services, I know somewhat of the operation and the staff connected with it. It is a public service which has come to be highly worthy of the praise and the support of the community.

Belleville is indeed fortunate in having the people who staff this operation. Both Bill Hockley and Bert Gerling I am acquainted with and I know their capabilities . The other members of the staff, I do not know yet, but I have heard expressions on their efforts by highly qualified sources.

The staff is dedicated to its work and I don't say this lightly. They have an enviable record thus far in solving problems for individuals who find these problems a bit too tough to solve on their own. I have heard several cases being conducted. I see one of the terms of reference to the job as that of complainant is right, then by right answer must be found. The staff's approach is handled in a very courteous and business-like fashion and continues so if both sides choose. They have the courage however to raise hell when necessary, no matter with whom they are in communication. This courage is admirable, because, often times when dealing with some highly-placed authority, this can "be tantamount to "sticking out the neck."

The staff does not recognize the normal working day in pursuit of its efforts. The number of extra and evening hours required and accepted makes them, in effect, poorly paid for their work.

A reader might put this question. Of what interest is this to me not being a member of the community. The answer is a simple one. I have the interest of the ordinary citizen that public services should be just that — public services. This one, believe me, fills that requirement.

Knowing that this service benefits that section of the people which require aid, should excite every public-minded citizen to heartily support its continuance.

Late Premier Had Many Qualities

By DON O'HEARN
Speed's Park Bargain
From The Intelligencer's

There were many, many sides to Leslie Miscampbell Frost, as you undoubtedly will have noticed in reading about him in recent days.

He was the smooth politician, the "genial" man, the great conspirer, Old Man Ontario dazed in to the back-from great-ness of his day.

Of all his qualities, however, I believe he was most significant was his supreme determination.

This showed in 1949 after he won the Premiership.

Although he had been a member of the Legislature since 1937 and a key member of the government since 1943 he was relatively unknown to the people in the province.

He set about to correct this.

For a year and a half he travelled. He visited every corner of the province. In every corner he visited it was possible to location where there would be a group of people: pulp mills, hospitals, industrial plants, golf clubs.

His approach never varied. He would move through, sometimes for hours, shake every hand available with the one introduction: "My name is Frost. I work for the government."

He met many open mouths. The majority didn't know Frost who worked for the government. But when he left they did, and remembered.

Remembered so well, of course, that in 1951 he marched up the biggest election victory in Ontario's history, taking 79 out of 90 seats.

Then to the public this premier was known as a kindly, sympathetic, most understanding, benevolent leader.

But not to his supporters, his troopers in the house.

They knew him as a zealous disciplinarian.

Before or since there never has been an attendance of government supporters such as the legislature saw during the reign of Leslie Frost.

There was a very good reason for this.

Leslie Frost, the kindly leader, kept his eye on attendance record.

He had a little black book which he carried in his pocket and any member who wasn't present for a session was marked off.

Enough marks fed it didn't need many, he was called into the sanctum and told about it.

Apparently told very fiercely, according to men who had been called in. They were dressed down to the extent that few ever left themselves open to a repetition of the experience.

Where the determination appeared most of all however was in pride of the Conservative Party — the Ontario PC party.

Leslie and Gertrude Frost in their renowned marriage had no children.

On Mr. Frost's part he appeared to substitute the devotion, protection and affection of a fond parent for his children to this political party.

He would let nothing harm it.

On the hustings the premier of the fifties would give powerful speeches, but speeches that were mainly attuned to this image of a man of good will. However when the party entered into them he could become a man of heat.

Four of his cabinet ministers — George Doucett, Philip Kelly, Clare Mapledoram and William Griesinger — got involved in problems which put a blemish on the party escutcheon.

They were sacrificed.

As the history books come out millions of words will be written about Leslie Frost. They will talk of a great politician and a man of achievement. But those that catch him most properly will talk of a determined man with an iron hand in a velvet glove.

Fine Performance By Yardmen Drum Corps

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Like many Belleville citizens, I bought a ticket to support the Belleville Yardmen Drum Corps although I did not intend to attend. However, at the last minute I changed my mind and decided to accompany my family to this presentation at the arena on Saturday.

The show was a big success and we were entertained by five drum corps from Kingston, Peterborough, Toronto, Burlington and Belleville. In addition a corps from Fulton, New York took part in the program.

The tone of the evening was set when the Belleville Yardmen Drum Corps received a standing ovation for their performance of its first number. The quality of the performance and the precision of the drum formations during the routines were outstanding for a group founded only six months ago and whose membership consists mainly of juniors. Congratulations to the Yardmen Drum Corps and to their executive for a job well done.

The master of ceremonies expressed my feelings precisely when he said, "I wish another 15,000 people could have been here tonight." Yes, it was a proud night for Belleville.

DAVID PAPE.

Citizen's Bureau Funds

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I was confused with the contents of your paper when reading on the same date that the much-needed Citizens Bureau of Belleville is in imminent danger of closing down due to lack of funds.

In the same issue I read that a sum of $176,000 is sitting idle (unavailable to anyone, $0.000 of this total belonging to the City of Belleville.

While not too well versed in these matters, it appears to me that in far too many cases in our society much needed monies are too often directed to unnecessary causes.

France Shrugs Off Protests Over Nuclear Bomb Tests

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Although Australia and New Zealand have put France in the dock at the World Court in The Hague, they have little hope that France will obey a court order against planned nuclear tests in the Pacific even if they win their case.

There are precedents for countries defying world court orders and France in 1966 expressly stated it would not recognize the court's power to deal with French defence issues.

Indirectly, the government is supported by the French people through their singularly unsatisfactory attitude toward the whole issue despite protest activities in London and other European capitals.

Although Australia and New Zealand are pessimistic about the outcome, if nothing else the court proceedings which start this week will serve to spotlight world opinion on the tests. They want the French atmospheric tests stopped and in the meantime they want the series scheduled for mid-summer at least suspended while the court hears the case.

Australia attracted new attention to its case when trade unions decided to boycott French products and the new labor government of Prime Minister Gough Whitlam said it does not rule out the possibility of severing diplomatic relations with France as a last resort.

New Zealand unions are considering similar action against French imports but the government is unlikely to resort to breaking diplomatic ties.

Observers say neither their court action is similar to that taken by Britain and West Germany for an Icelandic ordering Iceland not to expand its fishery limits to 50 miles while the court was hearing the dispute. Iceland ignored the injunctions and the court was dismissed. most observers is that France would do the same.

Although the Australians, in particular, are genuinely angry over the French tests, a real protest group set out from London during the first week in March to Paris, the French public and press have been indifferent. There was only a few isolated anti-nuclear demonstrations but what French opposition there is centres mainly on the drain of the nuclear program on France's economy.

Nuclear disarmament as a cause has never caught on in France as it did in Britain prior to the 1963 test ban against atmospheric tests, or in Canada and the United States prior to the underground U.S. test two years ago in the Aleutian island of Amchitka.

French trade with Australia is small and although the dispute raises the possibility of France withdrawing from a multi-million-dollar uranium enrichment project, the present Australian government seems confident on this point. This threat may have deterred the previous Australian Liberal government from being too outspoken against the French, but many observers feel the French atomic commission is far more eager for the Australian uranium than the Australians are.

The Whitlam government has in fact suggested that Australia will not need nuclear power this century while the French need soon an independent source of supply.

France's need for Australia's uranium thus might turn out to be the ace in Whitlam's hand eventually. But, still, there is no sign that underground testing, which Australia and New Zealand demand, has gone beyond the early planning stage in France.

Anne Boleyn, the second wife of Henry VIII of England, was beheaded 437 years ago today in 1536. She gave birth to Elizabeth I, but no male heir and the three years of marriage were not happy. Anne's original unpopularity while she was Henry's mistress had led to his seeking papal annulment of his marriage with Catherine of Aragon, and no doubt helped to incite the establishment of the Church of England. The day after Anne's death Henry married Jane Seymour.

Start by Being Loyal To Loyalty Principle

By REV. GORDON C. SMITH

Smyrna was one of the largest and busiest centres of the ancient region of Asia Minor. It was a beautiful city. It had a public library, it had a splendid stadium in which famous international games were held every two years.

The stadium has been renowned in history ever since February 23, A.D. 155. On that date Polycarp, Bishop of Smyrna, was martyred. His whereabouts was betrayed by a little slave girl who collapsed under torture.

However, not even the police captain wanted to see this beloved Christian leader die. Implied with him, "What harm is it to say, 'Caesar is Lord' and to offer sacrifice and to be saved? But the bishop was determined to die for his only Saviour Christ was Lord.

When he entered the stadium, Polycrocanti, Stadium Quadratus, offered him the choice of cursing the name of Christ and making ritual sacrifice to the Roman Emperor or a death. Eighty-six years have served Him," said Polycarp, "and He has done me no wrong. How can I blaspheme my King who saved me?" He was burned at the stake.

Loyalty is a great virtue. By it we are enabled to meet difficulties, temptations and decisions without fainting. A person should begin in youth to develop his capacity for this virtue.

Start by being loyal to the principle of loyalty. Once the habit is formed, you will find it easier to distribute loyalties wisely.

Young married couples realize the tug between the 'old home' and the new. It is a happy situation where loyalties collide. When the situation is otherwise, a couple should remember their wedding vows. Each swore to the other a primary loyalty.

Sometimes a conflict emerges between occupations and the immediate family circle. A husband may become so busy that he loses the affection of his wife and becomes a stranger to his children. A wife may suddenly find herself in a similar lonely boat, having innocently started to work to assist in the budget. Recall those beautiful vows. Know where your treasure lies.

We are seeing something tragic in the United States. I mean the aftermath of what happens when blind loyalty to a political party is put ahead of the interests of the country. I refer of course to the Watergate scandal. President Richard Nixon lost touch with reality.

Well, Canadians have no reason for arrogance or complacency. The Liberal Party of Canada is still bleeding from the effects of the last election. The Ontario Conservative Party has been a long time in office that it creates the impression of having a divine right to govern. We have not seen for quite some time an MPP tells his constituents that we have been entrusted with the Premier to thank him for "listening to the people" regardless of that seven per cent. lazy energy sources. To whom else should a President listen!

In a clash of loyalties the lower must give way to the higher. Security never comes to anybody who offers to parents the devotion that belongs to his wife. Security never comes to a husband in marriage who puts making money ahead of the family. Security never comes to the citizen who renders to the political party what he owes to God and country, or offers to Caesar what belongs to God.

Yes, they killed Bishop Polycarp in the stadium of Smyrna. But shortly afterwards the local church wrote an account of what had happened, in a distinctively Christian way. They called the martyrdom of Polycarp as follows, "Status Quadratus being processed, he died Christ being King forever". Update the name of Caesar to modern governor. Fill in whatever name you have in mind. Still it is true that Stadium Quadratus processed, Jesus Christ King forever!

Small Charges Called Denominational Cages

KINGSTON — "Denominational cages," is what Ray of Quinte Conference Archivist Bruce McLeod of the United Church of Canada calls some of the small rural charges retained purely on the principle of sentiment.

While acknowledging that care must be taken in closing small charges, some of which could become the core of urban expansion, he explained the keeping open of small student fields which are no longer viable.

"Surely we can find better ways of supporting our students than putting them into dying institutions." he said.

In responding to questions in a heavily attended conferences of the church, reported that although more than half the United Church membership and mission and service contributions from Ontario, only 41 percent of the ministerial candidates see from this province.

The Anglican-United Church Hymn Book can be expected in the near future, Dr. Arnup reported, due to copyright problems now heavy on it. Moderator McLeod said a strong case can be made for the music editor, with music now being taught in many schools.

Two Women Among New Ministers

KINGSTON — Three Belleville and district men were ordained in Sydenham Street United Church, Kingston, Wednesday in the Bay of Quinte Conference's annual service. They were, Gerald Robert Danford of Springbrook, Russell Lankdowne Dean and W. George B. Phillips of Belleville, although Mr. Phillips is a candidate from Lindsay Presbytery. Mr. Dean's home church is Holloway Street and Mr. Phillips Bridge Street.

Speaking to the conference in Mackenzie Hall prior to the ordination service, Mr. Dean said his ministry in the 70s would try to imitate Christ's three-fold approach, centring on healing, teaching and reconciliation.

"We must look back to tradition, doctrines and history," he said, "but must always balance this out with the present."

Mr. Danford sees his ordination as a "pearl of great price" with the gospel proclamation his central concern.

Mr. Phillips advocated the church's being aware that it must serve God by serving man, and not be merely a club which serves itself.

Two women were among the other ordinands, Miss Wendy Margaret Bulloch of Portland, north of Kingston, and Mrs. Marian Ruth Stewart of Napanee. Two westerners were among the new ministers Donald Carlyle Inner of Edmonton and Thomas Hamilton Lowry, who hails from Penticton between Moose Jaw and Ottawa.

Also ordained was Donald H. Nicholson of Peterborough a graduate of Emmanuel Theological College in Toronto. All other ordinands were graduates of Queen's Theological College.

Miss Bulloch, speaking to conference, saw no problem in ordination as a woman. "I am being ordained not as male or female, but as a person," she said, "and as such, I hope to share some of the joy of the Christian family, and of Jesus Christ as the head of that family." Mrs. Stewart, a part-time instructor in Hebrew in Queen's Theological College, said she hoped her entry into this capacity could help ministers "to think better Biblically".

A new depth of faith in youth is seen by Mr. Nicholson, who said Christ is no longer seen as someone who lived a couple thousand years ago, but as a living, vital power.

Mr. Inner called for a balance between openness for change, but caution lest it be merely for change's sake.

Mr. Lowry told conference he felt the 70s to be an exciting time for the ministry, with much increased interest in religion. He said that 1,100 Queen's students had enrolled in religion courses in the cur-

Stewardship In Question

KINGSTON: "While money is certainly not the key factor in church union, our present stewardship is certainly in question. Can we any longer afford the luxury of local headquarteries establishments?"

These thoughts were raised from the laity standpoint by Mrs. Margaret Falls of Petersburg, speaking to the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, meeting in Kingston this week.

"Unfortunately, it seems to be the negative reports which make the press, as failure seems to make better reading than success," she added. Mrs. Falls, a member of the General Commission on Church Union, said she is much aware of the deep commitment of many people in the meetings. "I have seen the Holy Spirit at work in these meetings", she said, "and there has been a deep-rooted conviction in what has been done. I believe church union is God's will for us."

Mrs. Falls praised the contribution of the small Christian Education (Disciples), involved in church union discussions the the Anglican and United Churches.

Moira Gypsies Camp Out

This weekend, 90 per cent of Joan Welch's cooking for her family of four will take place outdoors on a naptha stove.

Joan and Howard Welch, members of the Moira Gypsies camping group are going on their first weekend camping trip this season along with 37 other families.

Included on her menu for the May 21st weekend at KOA Campgrounds, Cherry Valley, are potatoes (to bake over hot coals); bacon and eggs, hamburgs, hot dogs, steak and a pot luck supper of weiners and beans.

"Our appetites increase when we're outdoors all weekend."

Joan will cook 10 meals out-doors.

"The food tastes better when you're out in the fresh air."

Popcorn is a popular appetite-rouser on the list. Children make their own popcorn and add the butter in a large plastic bag and shake.

Pre-packaged frozen foods are stored in the refrigerator in the 15-foot trailer.

For the first camping trip of the season, the Welch's are stocking their trailer with sleeping bags, mittens, rubber boots and winter hats. These articles will stay in the trailer all summer.

As for campground KP, Mrs. Welch says an assembly line is formed. Each takes a turn washing and drying the plastic dishes. They are then handed to Mr. Welch who puts them away in the trailer.

"Rain doesn't stop us," said Mrs. Welch. The adults have euchre games and visit other campers at their campsites, while the children have card games in their tents.

Just in case, though, Joan Welch suggests bringing along books, crayons and coloring books in case smaller children tire.

Not only is Mrs. Welch preparing for her own family, but her husband and her self. Caravan Scouts for the Moira Gypsies, are planning the weekend program.

The camping grounds have been checked by this couple previous to the group camping trip. Registration of the campers and campsites are also made.

Howard has planned a frog-jumping contest for the 37 expected families "rain or not." Each camper brings his own frogs.

Beginning late Friday, evening campers are met, registered and served coffee and cookies. During the evening, a get-together is planned.

Saturday, the frog-jumping contest takes place and adults take part.

Saturday night, Mr. Welch has planned a hay ride for the children around the camp grounds with wagons and tractors. A campfire follows where "pie irons" are used — two cast iron plates on handles with bread slices, jam and butter placed between — and in the fire for cooking.

"Tastes like pie," said Howard Welch.

A sing song follows.

Church service is held Sunday which is also "sport day". Men and women have opportunity to test their dart and horseshow skills. Children's games are played too.

The program directors have planned dinner and beans Sunday evening for everyone. Prizes will be awarded at the campfire.

Monday is free day with no set schedule.

"If you don't like the camping weekend, then you wouldn't be a good member," said Howard Welch.

"Our members get along very well."

The teenagers have a Young People's Club formed within the Moira Gypsies. There are 13 families in the Moira Gypsies

Each member camper is charged $10 when they join. Before joining, a family may attend two camping sessions with the group.

From the membership fee $4 goes toward the National Campers and Hikers Association, and a book on that topic is given: $1 is paid toward the Ontario Provincial Association Bulletins and $1 is send for insurance.

The rest of the money pays for the entertainment prizes.

Disposable diapers are included on Eva Breadner's packing list. Eva and her husband, Dick, have a 16-month-old and three-year-old going with them on the Moira Gypsies camping trip this weekend.

"The only difficult part about camping for us is when it rains. The kids stay indoors and it gets crowded," she said.

Owners of their own personality - designed truck camper, Mr. and Mrs. Breadner use a propane stove and cooler for their cooking.

"We either fry or barbecue the food. It's nothing fancy. And we've noticed our appetites are bigger when we camp."

Eva says if they had an oven, then she would have to cook more lavish meals.

"As for now, we keep it simple. It takes about ½-hour at the most for me to prepare our meals."

Plastic dishes are another time-saver for Mrs. Breadner. Coffee mugs are used.

One food this family enjoys more outdoors is toasted marshmallows.

Canned fruit, pancakes, bacon and eggs are included on the shopping list.

In the packing process for their first weekend camping of the season, Mrs. Breadner said this packing will take the longest. Curtains for Curtains have to be washed and sleeping bags cleaned. But after this camping trip, less time will be required to spend on packing.

Working together is the camping rule.

Boys help with the dishes when we camp and a lot of other husbands assist their wives."

FIRECRACKERS BANNED

As Victoria Day approaches, Consumers' Association of Canada reminds parents that in September 1972, the federal government banned firecrackers in an effort to counter the annual toll of injuries and fatalities. Sales will be made only to those holding a permit of competency and license to stage firework displays. CAC national headquarters is located at 100 Gloucester Street, Ottawa.

Don't Forget the Beans

Joan and Howard Welch prepare for their weekend camping trip. Packing beans with them for their Sunday dinner of wieners and beans for 37 families is their daughter Joanne and "Joe", the family dog.

Engagement Notice

Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. McLeod, Cambridge (Galt), announce the engagement of their only daughter, Janet Isanell Ann, to Franklin James McKenna of Cambridge (Galt), eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. McKenna, Belleville. The wedding will take place on Saturday, June 30, 1973 at 4 p.m. in St. Giles Presbyterian Church, Cambridge (Galt).

Jewish Women Provide Focus

HAMILTON (CP) — Members of the National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW) are telling their executive what they want the organization to do, rather than the other way round, says council president Thelma Rollingher.

Mrs. Rolingher, of Edmonton, said in an interview Wednesday that the group's annual meeting now being held has been organized so that delegates will be setting up guidelines for the work of the next two years.

"What the delegate body is doing now is projecting to the leadership the focus and future of the organization."

"In workshops and general sessions they have stated what they want as members, as women in this world, as community volunteers.

"If membership is blocked from a direct voice, then you begin building up frustrations. Members want to be part of decisions."

The 70 delegates representing the council's 5,200 members, have been deliberating in workshop sessions since the four-day meeting opened Tuesday.

Suit Price Hike Expected

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian men will soon be paying higher prices for suits, jackets and trousers made of wool fabric, says Henry Breger.

Mr. Breger, president and general manager of Yorkshire Importing Co. Ltd., said in an interview the higher prices are the result of a world shortage of raw wool.

"Japan, faced with the diminishing value of its stocks of United States currency, decided to put its assets into raw materials such as wool and iron ore, whose value is increasing," he said.

This resulted in Japan buying up 75 per cent of the Australian wool market where 85 per cent of the world's wool supply originates.

Mr. Breger said the consumer has not felt the bite yet as deliveries on fabric orders take seven or eight months and the material must then be sold and made into garments.

The increase will be felt by the fall, probably by the spring "and by next fall you won't be able to buy an off-the-rack suit for under $200."

Mr. Breger, whose firm imports wool fabrics for men's garments, said orders are made 10 months before the season for which they are destined.

"Right now, we are working on the fall of 1974."

He said he feels the pulse of the public to see what fibers "although we, in a sense, create the style."

New patterns, are then sent to the cloth mills where a "blanket" or sample cloth showing all the pattern's possible color combinations is made up.

From these he picks what he wants, makes an order and "once they start weaving it, there's no going back."

There is a definite cycle to style and what was "in" 40 years ago is "new" today but must be adapted to today's brighter colors, he said.

Canadian tastes differ from area to area.

"You've got to know what group you are selling to. French-Canadians tend to be more flamboyant in style and color than English-Canadians. Westerners prefer heavier, suiting fabrics while Easterners want lightweight fabrics all year round."

"What goes over big in Quebec may not sell at all in Ontario."

Mr. Breger said Canadian men need to work harder at co-ordinating their clothes.

"In the past the suit was a covering. Today it is part of an outfit. Socks, shoes, ties and shirts must match it."

He said not enough men work hard enough at this and many can depend on their wives to do it for them.

Dear Ann Landers: I have read the comments about rude phone operators, etc. I wonder if the complainers realize how they come across to others?

I've encountered many surly salespeople and an equal number who are friendly and considerate. The same goes for bank tellers, parking lot attendants and cashiers. I've discovered that most people react to the way I treat them.

If I've had a bad day I have a tendency to be abrupt and impatient. People react to my impatience and I get treated the same way. So I concentrate on being pleasant, no matter what kind of day I've had. Before long I notice that my attitude is contagious.

When I encounter rudeness I say to myself, "maybe he is having a hard time." I've never met a person whose life is 100 per cent trouble-free. Have you? —Foreman In Flint

Dear Foreman: Your letter embodies a simple philosophy. It seems unworkable. But it does work, and it is the never-failing key to contagious cheer.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a professional man in his late 40s. Throughout our marriage he always has been exceptionally kind, considerate, and highly moral. Several months ago he suffered a severe heart attack. Today he is a different person. I refrain him and my children refrain him. He demands our devotion, yet he rebuffs us, goes off by himself, is silent and moody, and worst of all, he has now insisted that we join a couple swapping group.

His doctor treats the "change" casually and says, "Don't get excited. It's nothing about the latest demand). I love my husband dearly but I can't cope with his new personality. In his present state of mind I'm afraid to suggest counseling. Yet our whole marriage is disintegrating. What can I do?—Mrs. Desperate

Dear Mrs.: Go back to your husband's doctor and give him ALL the facts. Your husband has undergone a serious personality change. A neurological examination would do no harm and it might cast a new light on the situation.

Dear Ann Landers: I have children ranging from four years of age. When we go visiting they know they must not touch anything unless they have permission to do so. I wish other mothers would do as much for me.

I'm tired of moving plants and knick-knacks each visiting time. I'm exhausted from wiping, brooming cookie crumbs out of the sofa cushions. I'm weary from keeping an eye on my good ashtrays and figurines and saying, "No, no. Mustn't touch."

Don't these mothers realize they are being unfair to their children when they fail to teach them respect for the property of others? Imagine growing up thinking that everything within reach is all right to play with!

The little ones are not to blame. They only know what they are taught. But they are the ones who suffer from the lack of discipline—not their mothers. They are thought of as ill-mannered nuisances, and people hate to see them coming. You've dealt with this problem before but it could bear repeating. Please?—Where's The Rabbi for Census?

Dear R.C: I agree. It's worth saying again—and again. I've also said that discipline is a special kind of love. A mother who cares about her children will take the time and expend the energy.

Successful Living

Journalist Inspired to Write Again

By DORIS CLARK

She is a great girl, our Bee-Forbes. A veteran newspaper woman, recently retired from the position of women's editor for the Victoria Times, but still doing her own weekly column. Readers of The Times Just couldn't do without her.

I saw her on my trip to the west coast a few weeks ago. Four months before that she had suffered a badly crushed left foot in a car accident. Several small bones broken, feet bleeding, she was rushed to the Nanaimo hospital. At first there was little hope that she would ever walk again.

After a lengthy operation she lay on her bed of pain in shock as deep a depression as Bess could ever get. At this point a young doctor from India came to examine the foot. He said, "I hear you are a writer." Bess wanted to ignore him, to ignore everything. Her response was, "No, I am not a writer. I'm just a newspaper woman." Finally the doctor completed his examination of the leg.

Then he said, "Have you got a typewriter?" She said she had one, back in Victoria, and he told her to get it up there. Meanwhile, he would see if he could borrow one for her.

Bess was not impressed. What was the use of living if she could never walk again? What was the use of anything?

Her general attitude was, "Shit." But next day there was a neat little typewriter sitting on a bedside table; and the young doctor (bless him!) saying to her, "Now, write!" She still ignored him and it.

Until somehow the familiar piece of equipment got under her skin and within three or four days she found herself believing to peck away at it. Then she saw stories in that hospital, several of them, human stories she could not resist sharing with her readers. A few days later her own typewriter arrived and Bess began to feel she was in business again.

X-rays showed there was still more to be done with the crushed foot and Bess requested transfer to her own bone doctor and to her own Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria. It was done.

At the Jubilee, Bess reported, rehabilitation resources got after her and would tolerate no negative thinking. Of course she would walk again! First (and following the second operation), she took a tentative step or two in a walker. Next it was two canes, then one cane. Her bright spirit had bounced back with the loving ministrations of the physiotherapists and all the team of helpers in the hospital.

In Victoria, Bess picked me up in her newly acquired small car with automatic shift. She could handle it with her one good foot and two good hands. The left foot will be in a brush for six months.

She told me this story in the first few minutes we were together over dinner. Then she said, "But that's enough about me. How are things going with you?" And she smiled her old bright, cheery smile.

Bess continues to be an inspiration, to everybody who knows her or reads her.

Second Glance

OUR CITY ON THE BAY: 1909

"I know of no way of judging the future but by the past." — Patrick Henry, 1775.

On the Trent Road stands a house known today as the Ponton House. Newcomers to our district glance at it in passing, often wondering who lived there in the past when in its day it commanded a full view of the bay.

In the Souvenir Number of 1909 issued by the Daily Intelligencer is an article entitled Lieut-Col. William Misbet Ponton, which reads:

"Among the prominent men of Belleville there is none more highly esteemed than William Misbet Ponton. He is a life-long resident in this City, having been born in Thurlow, Belleville, in 1856, his parents being the late James Wemyss Ponton and Anna Hubbs Gordon.

"William was educated at Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto, graduating from the latter and receiving his degree of MA (Medallist Modern Languages) in 1877. He was called to the bar in 1881, and in 1908 was appointed KC.

"His practice includes some of the most prominent firms in Belleville: the Merchant's Bank, Son and Hastings Savings and Loan Co., and the Belleville Hardware Company the meeting's Chambers of being among his clients.

"Col. Ponton is president of the Hastings Law Association and of the Alumni Association and is a member of the Senate of Toronto University.

"In public affairs he has always taken an active interest. He was representative of the Belleville Board of Trade at Commerce of the Empire held in Montreal in 1903 and in London, England, in 1906.

"He served for five years as an Alderman and is a member of the High School Board.

"He is Lieut.-Col. R. O. Brigade Major of the 6th Infantry Brigade, and for seven years commanded the 'O' Regiment, Argyle Light Infantry.

"He is also active in fraternal circles, being a Past DDGM of the Masonic Order, and a member of the Sons of Scotland.

"His home is on the Trent Road, Belleville, on the shores of the beautiful Bay of Quinte, being the homestead built in 1831 by his grandfather, William Hutton, the first Warden of the Court of Hastings."

Some 'Frills' Are Essential

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Education has gone full circle and the emphasis is back on the basics — reading, writing and 'rithmetic. Or, to update the jargon, language arts and computation.

The frills, skimpy though they were, are being ripped from the curriculum by gunmen in the interests of practicality and economy. In Ontario the future of the province is never permitted too much guessing up of the pedagogical pants.

Frills, of course, are those unnecessary luxuries we slipped into the course of study when the pragmatists weren't looking — art, music, drama.

But the ex-student, looking back from the vantage point of time, sees the frills as the real fabric of education. Basics come through as the sparse skeleton that props up the blood and sinew. And Ontario education has limped along for 100 years as a state of indecent exposure bordering on the obscene.

In 1973, it's right up to date with the new morality — parading around stark naked.

Because this spring three county music festivals, the thrilling massed band and choir concert in Belleville, and massed orchestra and choir concert at Hastings Manor has established the wonderful musical talent in our schools at its best. these remarks will be directed specifically toward one frill — music. They apply with equal force to all other art forms.

Music is the poor step-child of the school system. It is the first to be dropped when timeget tough, and the last to be reinstated when the economy improves. Instrumental music instruction in Belleville elementary schools has gone by the board after two generations of proud tradition. Choral music has survived only with the withdrawal of consultants who bolstered up certain classroom teachers. Band music is hanging on by its fingernails in the secondary schools, where the best bands in years have been coaxed into professional polish by devoted and dedicated music teachers.

On the elementary level we have sometimes been amused by teachers as a handy theme.

"If you don't behave I'll take away your art period."

For more esthetic drill, no doubt. After put-downs like that, it's no wonder graduates complain that graduates can't discern the inventory by three per cent.

When educators get back to teaching language skills next summer, with the $60,000 set aside by the board for concentration on the basics, they might reflect that language arts take many forms.

Communication — who is to say that the practical man who speaks the language of main has anything over the artist who speaks through his sculpture, or over the singer who speaks the language of music or the dancer who communicates with his body.

Discipline — the law and order lobby has never cracked that nut. But any kid who plays an instrument or lifts his voice in chorus soon learns the fallacy of doing his own thing outside creative restrictions. It hurts — his ears.

Or as a bandmaster once bawled at his group: "If you never learn anything else here you'll find out how to stand steady on parade."

Blaming the cutbacks on the arts on government ceilings, board policy, inflation or any other convenient scapegoat, is nonsense. People get the education and the schools they demand. In Ontario we have settled for the marketable skills, and wondered why the monster of technology has plodded up all the available jobs in those categories.

The next time your children lift up their voices in joyful noise unto the Lord, listen to them. Listen carefully. They are offering a cloak to cover your spiritual nakedness.

Madoc TV Programming Is A Village Affair

By HARRY BULHALL
Staff Reporter

MADOC — Television is different things to different people.

To Gordon Pigden it's also a soapbox.

As a result local television is not only alive, but well in this crossroads community of Hastings County.

It's alive with community participation.

With its modest pilot project over Mr. Pigden's village store now has taken wings. In a couple of years Channel 4 Madoc has become an established part of community life and communication for this centre of 1,400.

Each alternate Sunday night hundreds of viewers in a ten mile area away from the big networks to hometown programming. What they see are discussions, music productions, documentaries — all totally local.

It's television programmed by the community, for the community, and its novel achievement has won it some national recognition.

It became possible seven years ago when Mr. Pigden — owner of a radio-television store here since 1946 — decided on a new venture.

Since Madoc could only receive one television station — Kingston — he formed partnership with another villager, Glen Nickle to launch a cable television enterprise, Hastings Cable Vision Ltd.

The first year the company harvested about 100 subscribers — along a mile of cable. It took three years before the whole village could be offered the service.

But business wasn't the sole preoccupation of the company.

"A community needs a soapbox — something where people can discuss things and show off their talents," says Mr. Pigden.

The partners produced the soapbox.

Sparsely equipped with one camera, one videotape machine — "One of everything a just about the basics." Mr. Pigden recalls — they set out to channel local topics over their cable system.

In July 1970, Channel 4 began local programming and initial reaction was encouraging, in fact "tremendous".

So were the reasons — at least with an attitude like Mr. Pigden's.

Where there are people, there are always talents, things to talk about.

They decided a problem lay in "the fact programming might be reflected only through own individual attitudes and biases" — a limited local community approach.

They began airing requests for issues — and let the target get.

"People would rather shyly come up to us and suggest a program. They call Pigden, Nickle and they say: Hey Pigden.

"We've never looked back."

From such scattered beginnings today's pattern of programming emerged. Now it's do-it-yourself. Anyone with an idea can participate at Madoc. Among technical team is 14-year-old Mark Saunders.

Now there are about 50 local people at work. It is a broad community cross-section. A clergyman, housewife, a school teacher, student or businessman can be involved in getting Channel 4's productions on the air.

The studio from which it's beamed may be a bit bigger than a sandwich, although the 25-feet-by-18-feet room over Mr. Pigden's store puts a premium on space.

Nonetheless, he says, when the studio goes on the air Sunday evenings "there are very few sets not tuned to us."

The expansion brought more equipment. In feta, sys Mr. Pigden, all cash from the cable company — now with 600 subscribers — goes into what has become the village's television station.

"It doesn't taken a cent out of the cable company. It goes back into equipment. Someday we may get a trip to Florida or something out of it," he chuckles.

But that's exactly as it should be indicates. The community should benefit.

"We have the hardware and we oversee it. But Channel 4 isn't Glen Nickle or me. It's the community's thoughts and the community's ideas with the community participating in their presentation."

Yet, he's been self-effacing. For Mr. Pigden himself works many hours filming and editing other villagers.

"He puts in hours and hours of work that people don't know about," says Ray Burris, who runs a sports store in the village.

Since the advent of Channel 4, there is "more of a community feeling" here, abouts says Mr. Burris.

By making television as a medium of contact "people have been brought closer together," says Mr. Burris.

Penny Harrop, a housewife who's been here only a year and now is on Channel 4's technical staff, agrees.

"There's more interest in community affairs. People are more aware of what's going on, what people are doing."

Not all programming is confined to Sunday night shows. Specific events produce special broadcasts.

Elections get special coverage. When a medical centre was being discussed for the village, Channel 4 aired the topic so the community could talk it over. Easter Week brought religious programs. When there's a fire in the area, the news is flashed on the screen.

To date, the programming pattern has been so successful it won an award last year from the Canada Cable Television Association.

Someday, Mr. Pigden would like to see the system connected to neighboring Tweed and Marmora villages. He feels this could best be done by microwave links.

And future programming could lean even more to community involvement, he says. Time — he shows, when local residents could air opinions and conversation could be a significant feature.

"This is what a community needs," he says. "A place or medium where people can get together and talk. In a big city where you may not know your next door neighbor it's a shame. You maybe find a lot in common to enjoy — if you can get together."

Program Preparations

Housewife Penny Harrop is among villagers who make television a big part of their lives.

Madoc Helping edit videotape into another community production is Gerwin Pigden, whose cable television company made one quiz programming possible.

Warehouses and Service Firms Needed for City

City needs for suitable, serviced, short-term industrial space and smaller service industries were issues that emerged from a meeting last night between the chairman of and board of the Belleville Industrial Commission and leaders of local industry.

About 15 industries were represented at last night's meeting at the Four Seasons Motor Hotel. "We received a lot of input, and the industries concerned felt much was achieved," said industrial commission public relations committee chairman, Dick Lumbers.

"It's the first time such a meeting has been held as far as we know," he said, adding that a shortage of suitable warehouse space had been one of the major concerns brought up.

"Some of the available warehouses lack proper loading and unloading facilities," he said.

"Industry also said it would like to see more small service industries established here where feasible," said Mr. Lumbers. "There were also many good ideas of how the Industrial Commission could assist in other services — ones we'd hardly thought of."

By way of example, he said to catalyze industry was having water pressure problems for fire protection and, as a result, had investigated the issue. "The chairman, Bruce Nickson, will see Mayor Jeffery about it," said Mr. Lumbers.

Arts, Crafts To Be Sold

Artists and craftsmen from the North Addington area will hold a display and sale of their works in North Addington Education Centre, Clarke, May 25 from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. and May 26 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Craftsmen from Slate Falls to Kaladar will be presenting hundreds of handmade items at Showcase 73. Showcase offers a rare opportunity to buy quilts, hooked rugs, wood carvings, paintings, pottery and other original craftwork by local artisans.

Showcase 73 is presented with the co-operation of the Lennox and Addington board of education and Loyalist College.

Cloyne is located on High way 41, 12 miles north of Kaladar.

Church Bee On Weekend

TWEED (Special) — The Canadian Cancer Fund Campaign for 1973 has resulted in donations for the Tweed branch amounting to $2,063.66, an increase of $354.66 over 1972.

Meeting Called

MILFORD — A special ratepayers' meeting will be held at Milford Township Hall on Wednesday, May 23, to discuss fire protection.

Township fire chief Arthur Ford who called the meeting will explain how residents can assist in protecting their own property from fire disasters.

The Industrial Commission also suggested it would again mail out a regular newsletter to industry, he said, something that has not been done for the past several years. The newsletter would advise management of available services and resources.

Because of the success claimed for last night's meeting, Mr. Lumbers said it was hoped to hold another with industrial management, "probably in the fall".

Substation, Is Planned

Plans were approved by Belleville's Public Utilities Commission Thursday for the development of a park and substation grounds on Church Street.

Plans include an enclosed substation for visual appeal and the development of the remainder of the property as parkland to be used by the city.

The park, once completed, would be 60 feet wide, running from Church Street to Turnbull Street in the vicinity of the senior citizen home. More than 90 percent of the land would be park with the substation facing Church Strcet.

The entire cost of the project, including costs for electrical equipment, landscaping and buildine is slightly more than $100,000.

Neil Britton, manager the PUC, said he hoped the building at least would be completed by next November.

Marmora Hydro Wants to Upgrade

MARMORA (Special) — The village Hydro Commission has asked village council to raise $40,000 by sale of debentures to upgrade the electrical system.

The work has been recommended by the Hydro Commission in preparation for the carrying of nuclear-generated power, expected within five years. Approval for sale of the debentures must be obtained from the Ontario Hydro Commission and the Ontario Municipal Board.

Engineer-in-charge Grant Airhart, chairman of the roads and finance committee, reported at the last council meeting that sweeping of village streets cost $500 for one month. He recommended purchase of a combined sweeper-tricter, snow blower and lawn mower at a cost of $2,500. It will be included in the 1973 budget estimates for council consideration.

Where, O Where Is Dogcatcher ?

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

PICTON — Hounded to a decision to hire an animal control officer last year, Picton town councillors are still receiving complaints of canine delinquency.

The latest came from town building inspector Morley Brooks who demanded to know the whereabouts of the dogcatcher at a council meeting this month.

Mayor Harvey J. McFarland replied that he would make arrangements to speak to Donald Tucker, the Stirling pound-keeper, for his next visit to Picton.

Mr. Tucker, who receives a salary of $2,000 a year to apprehend and impound delinquent dogs, periodically visits Picton but is unavailable for immediate action on complaints.

If a stray dog or cat is picked up police it must be impounded at the Picton Animal Hospital until it is claimed or can be reached.

The charges received by council from the animal hospital must be added to Mr. Tucker's $2,000 salary means the cost of an animal control officer, is calculated by the ratepayer.

Because Mgr Tucker resides in Stirling, if complaints are not taken there to the great inconvenience of their owners. Efforts are made to notify these owners before the pets are taken from Picton, but unless the animals are wearing tags, this can be difficult or impossible.

Several disgruntled Pictonians have been forced to make the 30-odd-miles drive to Stirling to claim their family pet.

When the town recognized the need for a dogcatcher, there were many complaints of animals rifling garbage and menacing school playgrounds, as well as being setting camera in focus in many shore village store where programs originate.

One of Mr. Tucker's first "arrests" was an elderly dachshund owned by the proprietor of the Royal Hotel. The dog was discovered at large on Main Street but, in his advancing years, seemed hopelessly puppyish capers or annoying ratepayers. He was far too old to be arrested and represented a safe catch for even the neediest of animal control officers.

Interestingly enough, more action and sometimes vicious dogs seem more immune to complaints.

It's time council hired a dogcatcher who can respond immediately to complaints. It is not the ratepayers' duty to attempt to tell a town police whose dog is annoying them or to provide dog numbers in the case of alien animals.

The taxpayer should not be forced to pay extra for Mr. Tucker's services then for the Picton Animal Hospital.

Also the taxpayer seldom complains about the slow, friendly dachshund who waddles contentedly along Main Street every morning. He wants attention. The leaders find the strays that run to packs in school yards and other public places.

Since Mr. Tucker has a limited list of customers because he is resident elsewhere, he should be advised that inspection of his kennels can be ne'er - do - wells.

He should also provide a regular monthly report to council as to what action he has taken about number of dogs at large.

Perhaps, in his conversation with the dogcatcher Mayor McFarland can learn why the lack of proper dogcatching is still a sore spot with Picton taxpayers.

Savard Has Several Choices

TORONTO (CP) — "Money is the big thing," says Andre Savard, but he and many other National Hockey League grafters have other things to consider since being picked Friday by a second big-time league.

The World Hockey Association's first annual draft of over-age juniors left several in the enviable position of being sought by two clubs, with Savard and four others on top of the heap as first-round picks in both drafts.

And while the biggest advantage is the certainty of a fatter contract, the junior stars now have the luxury of other choices as well.

Savard, chosen by Quebec Nordiques Friday and by Boston Bruins Tuesday in the NHL draft at Montreal, says money is the prime consideration but there are at least two others:

CAHA vs WHA

Amateur Draft Bone of Contention

CALGARY (CP) — Overseas tours, rule changes and the World Hockey Association will be at the top of the agenda when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association opens its annual meeting Sunday in Charlottetown.

The two hockey groups have been unable to reach an agreement on the drafting of amateur players into professional ranks.

A CAHA proposal on the draft has been rejected by the WHA. League President Gary Davidson says he doubts the CAHA could honor the terms of the proposal because it has inadequate control over its players.

Details of the rejected agreement were not released but indications are that it would be similar to the National Hockey League pact under which it prepays the CAHA "development money."

CAHA President Joe Krzyzka said if an agreement is reached with the WHA, there would be no falling out between the NHL and the CAHA.

"They would like us to stabilize our arrangements with both organizations then they would know where they are going as well."

The amateur hockey representatives, from the 11 CAHA member branches across Canada, will also be discussing invitations for Canadian amateur teams to play overseas.

Krzyzka said three teams would likely be involved but offers for games have been received from Japan, China, Sweden, Poland, West Germany and Russia.

Russian representatives brought up the subject last week while in Montreal for the Stanley Cup playoffs.

"They want us to send a junior team to one of their tournaments in Leningrad in December.

Foyt Hot But Cool

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A. J. Foyt says he's "playing it cool," but he was in a real hot spot going into the third day of qualifying for the May 28 Indianapolis 500.

The three-time Indy winner and five - time national driving champion found himself in the most precarious position of his 16 years of competition at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

The hard-driving Texan was the 33rd position on the 33-car starting grid and in danger of being bumped from the lineup here for the first time.

He went home to Houston for a couple of days this week and came back with some remedies for his sick engine. He also went out to his backup Coyote-Foyt and hammered a lap of 194.679 miles an hour Friday.

Hill Up On Top But Trevino Near

MEMPHIS (AP) — Dave Hill says he's playing "horribly."

Lee Trevino and Hill should be down the road. Missed the cut. I could have shot a quick-running 66.

But Hill has a solid lead and Trevino still is very much in contention going into today's third round of the $175,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

Hill had to do some scrambling but saved his round with a new putter and a new putting grip as he shot a three-under-par 68 in Friday's second round for a 137 total, seven under par on the wind-swept, 7,185-yard Colonial Country Club course.

The controversial Hill, whose unmatched history of success in this event includes three titles in one four-year stretch, held a two-stroke lead over his nearest challenger, non-winning Jerry McGee. McGee was alone in second with a 68 for 139.

Cincinnati Scores Knock Down

When Cincinnati Reds scheduled a Teen-age Night, they expected a crowd in the seats, but they didn't expect the youthful fans to make a difference on the field.

But they did.

With one out in the fifth inning and Pete Rose on first, the Reds' Joe Morgan lofted a routine fly ball to right centre which attracted a crowd of two-right fielder Clarence Gaston and centre fielder John Grubb.

The 28,109 spectators shouted a lot louder than the two San Diego Padres players, who couldn't hear one another and ended up reaching the same spot at the same time.

After the collision, Gaston and Grubb remained on the ground while Morgan circled the bases. Grubb, who had the wind knocked out of him, finally retrieved the ball but Morgan was already in the dugout with an inside-the-park home run.

Cincinnati went on to score a 5-4 victory.

Elsewhere in the National League, Los Angeles Dodgers overcame Atlanta Braves 3-2, New York Mets edged Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3, Houston Astros defeated San Francisco Giants 3-1 and Chicago Cubs beat Philadelphia Pirates 8-3. The game between St. Louis Cardinals and Montreal Expos was postponed due to rain and cold at Montreal.

Gaston left the game under his own power but was taken to Christ Hospital with a possible head injury.

Grubb, who remained in the game, suffered a bruised knee.

Jack Billingham had to survive a three-run San Diego rally in the eighth before registering his seventh victory of the season, tops in the National League.

Chicago's Glenn Beckert had a close call on a close call in Mets Philadelphia but extended his hitting streak to 26 games as Ferguson Jenkins set back the Phils on six hits.

In the first inning, the Chicago second baseman hit a high chopper to shortstop Larry Bowa who made a good throw.

Beckert was sure he was safe, umpire Augie Donatelli wasn't as certain. The first base umpire started to raise his hand to signal out, then changed his mind.

Beckert went hitless the rest of the night.

The modern National League record is Tommy Holmes' 37 games, 19 games short of Joe DiMaggio's major league mark.

Tom Seaver kept the hard-hitting Pirates from inflicting much damage to record his ninth win of the season and Wayne Garrett hit a homer and drove in three runs for the Mets.

Tigers Beat Red Sox for 7th

Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees gagged on a taste of their own medicine Friday night while Detroit Tigers continued to thrive on a new-fangled remedy known as Boston Red Sox.

The White Sox, whose pitchers have spun six shutouts this season, were dealt a six-hit 3-0 dose by Jim Hunter of Minnesota Twins.

The Yankees, who scored twice with two out in the ninth Thursday night and went on to beat Milwaukee in extra innings, saw the Brewers tag relief ace Sparky Lyle for three runs, with two out in the ninth, for a 6-5 victory.

But the Tigers had the right prescription once more as they beat the Red Sox for the seventh time in as many 1973 games, this time by a 5-4 count.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland Athletics edged Kansas City Royals 2-1, Baltimore Orioles downed Cleveland Indians 6-2 and California Angels trounced Texas Rangers 7-1.

Minnesota's Kaat ran his lifetime record against the White Sox to a signing 29-10 by limiting the hard-hitting Chicagoans to six singles.

The Twins raked Rich Gossage for their three runs in the third inning on a single by George Mitterwald, Jim Holt's home run and singles by Larry Hisle and Tony Oliva with a stolen base in between.

It was the fifth loss in the last seven games for the White Sox, but manager Chuck Tanner isn't panicking.

"I wouldn't say we're in any kind of slump," he insisted. "Remember, we were 2-4 at the start of the season and now we are 18-7 for our last 25 games. I'll take that kind of percentage all season long."

Hot-hitting Dave May's fourth single of the game, a two-run shot up the middle, cappe Milwaukee's ninth-inning rally against New York. It also gave him 8 hits in his last 19 at bats, raising his batting average to .293 from .255, and was his sixth game-winning hit of the season.

Reliever Mike Marshall picked up the win with relief help from Dick Woodson and Ray Corbin. Lyle suffered the loss.

Reggie Jackson's solo home runs from Mickey Stanley in the sixth inning and Jim Northrup in the seventh to take a 5-3 lead and hold off a Boston rally in the ninth that fell one run short. Carlton Fisk homered for the Red Sox in the second.

Loyalist Takes On Three New Sports

One sport's loss is another sport's gain. Except in this case in which the exclusion of cross country running from the level of college varsity sports in Ontario has allowed Loyalist College to include archery as well as skiing in their individual sports' programs.

Since there will be no cross country in the Ontario College Athletic Association in the 1973-74 school year, the money that Loyalist College had budgeted for the sport will be used towards the two new sports.

"Neither sport was previously offered at Loyalist," athletic supervisor Rob Stinson said. "Now we will be able to fill a need that we weren't able to fill before.

"We'll be competing on a shoestring budget, but we already have the archery equipment and the skiing gear is which ski enthusiasts already have. The only costs for the college will be transportation and tournament entry fees."

The decision to drop cross country running was not an easy one to make at the 27 college OCAA annual sporting conference in North Bay recently. No one seemed interested in the sport at the annual get-together, according to, Stinson.

"Last fall when Loyalist was slated to play host to the OCAA cross country championships, the response was so dismal that we were forced to cancel it. No one at the conference showed any interest in the sport, so I didn't press the issue as I had last year."

Cross country racing will not be the only sport which will not appear on the Loyalist rolls this coming year however, as the college has also dropped women's volleyball from among the 13 varsity level sports.

In its place, women's basketball will occupy the Loyalist gymnasium. "Since volleyball has only been played here one year, it's not as if we were dropping a traditional sport," said Stinson.

"The future of women's basketball seems brighter in eastern Ontario at the college level than it does for volleyball. Along with the distances we would have had to travel, and together with the fact that only two girls are returning from this year's team, we decided to go with basketball at Loyalist next year."

Along with the Lancers hockey club, the Loyalist men's basketball team will be back at OCAA level competition.

"I know that we will still have a much stronger team next year," said Stinson who also coaches the Lancers basketball club. "I've been doing recruiting and contacting.

Although Stinson would not reveal where he would get the players to improve upon the Lancers 3-13-0 won-loss-tie record of last year, he did say that "there is some good talent coming from all over the province next year."

"Don't chide! Our beaudoy bills were horrific last year."

Armstrong Wants Minor Sports To Self-generate New Revenues

With city hall keeping a closer eye on budgets, Floyd Armstrong feels the Belleville Minor Sports Association could be in for financial cutbacks in the near future.

"I am of the opinion that if we ask for more and more money from city hall the door will eventually close on us to a degree," said the BMSA president.

With the hope of forestalling such action on the part of city council, the BMSA is in a present discussing ways to increase its sports revenue and thereby cut down on the necessity of grant received through the Recreation-Arts Committee.

"We're going to have to offset a little of the costs of our operations and stop asking for increased amounts of money from city hall," said Armstrong. "At Thursday's executive council meeting we discussed several fund raising ideas."

Those exists the possibility that registration fees for some minor sports will be increased in the near future, although a single fee governing all minor sports was considered to be unfair.

It was felt that associations which required a higher outlay of money either for equipment or facilities, such as hockey's need to rent ice time should charge its participants a correspondingly higher registration fee.

"The main feeling was that you have to go by what it costs to play the sport," said Armstrong. "It seems a little ridiculous that it costs $2 to join archery for eight weeks while the same $2 for weightlifting is for a year."

Another source of increased revenue — sponsorship fees — was discussed. However, difficulties could arise with the number of sponsors willing to donate larger sums to minor sports. As matters now stand, several BSMA member associations are having difficulties lining up sponsors for their teams. An impasse could dominate, if not kill, their desire to provide for operating expenses.

More than thirty new improvements.

This year, the '73 Plymouths are more beautiful than ever. But many of our important engineering improvements don't even show. And we count them as most important. They make the '73 Plymouths safer, quieter, smoother-riding and longer lasting than ever before. Extra care in engineering...it makes the difference.

The '73 Plymouths

NEW Quieter Cars for 1973
The '73 Plymouths are the quietest cars we have ever made, inside and out. Passenger compartments have been surrounded with sound insulating materials packed into critical areas of the cars body, Plymouth's Unibody helps too. The one-piece welded body and frame stays tight and quiet for years.

The major cause of noise in a car today is roadshock travelling up through the suspension and into the body of the car. To cut most of this noise we isolate the front and rear suspensions with rubber. Chrysler and Fury have had this quiet feature for some time. And we have now added this system to our Satellite line. Ask your Plymouth dealer to explain all the Chrysler Quiet features.

Electronic Ignition—Now Standard
Last year Chrysler introduced the Electronic Ignition system on some Plymouth models. Now it's standard on all 1973 Plymouth engines built in North America. The Electronic Ignition System eliminates breaker points and condenser. This means your engine will stay in tune longer and go further between tuneups. And it also means that your exhaust emissions will stay cleaner too.

NEW Emission Control Features
We're all working toward cleaner air. That's why all '73 Plymouth engines are equipped with an exhaust gas recirculation system and automatic vacuum spark advance control system, for controlling oxides of nitrogen. Also, we've added an electric assist choke to help reduce emissions during starting and warm-up.

NEW Higher Impact Bumpers
If you take a little bump, we want you to get off without a scratch. That's why we've added full length reinforcement members front and rear. And straightened the existing front members. For even more protection, we've added rubber guards front and rear. They'll take quite a bunch, without anything getting hurt.

Disc Brakes Standard on Most Cars
Disc brakes have greater fade resistance than conventional brakes. They perform more smoothly, stop your car in a straighter line, and are more effective at fast freeway speeds. Front disc brakes are now standard equipment on all Plymouth cars (except six-cylinder Valiants).

NEW Higher Speed Starter Motor
Quick starting is important, so we've developed a new, higher speed starter motor for our 1973 360, 400 and 440 cu. in. V8's. That, together with our Electronic Ignition, should give you one good start after another.

NEW Mechanical Plating Process
To help the exposed, critical safety parts on your new Plymouth stand up to the gruling effects of rust and corrosion, we've devised a new plating process that applies powdered particles of cadmium, tin or zinc to protect them. Every 1973 Plymouth has it.

NEW Electronic Engine Function Tester
Chrysler is dedicated to building cars and trucks to the highest quality control standards. To further raise the standard of Quality Control, we have introduced the Electronic Engine Function Tester. We call her "Miss EFT". Miss EFT tells us all about an engine when it's running. She tells us many things we couldn't find with conventional equipment. Engines that pass Miss EFT's test get a Quality Control Tag. She really helps us build better cars.

Here are just a few of the many engineering improvements made to the 1973 Plymouth models. Your Plymouth dealer will be happy to explain them all.

NEW YORK (AP) — Sharon Rote has won an unconditional divorce from sportscaster Kyle Rote, former running back for New York Giants football team.

Married twice—in Juarez, Mexico, on Aug. 1, 1955, and in New York City on their fifth anniversary—the couple had been separated since Nov. 15, 1971. The divorce was granted Thursday in Manhattan" Supreme Court.

Mrs. Rote is the former Sharon Ritchie, a beauty contest winner from Greenwich, Conn.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Paul Robeson, the actor and singer who gained political notoriety when he refused to sign a statement saying he was not a Communist, was awarded an honorary degree by his alma mater, Rutgers University, Thursday.

His son, Paul Jr., 51, of Brooklyn, N.Y., accepted the doctor of humane letters degree. Robeson, 75, remained at his home in Philadelphia, where he is confined by illness.

Robeson was an all-America football player, lawyer and scholar who also won renown as an actor and singer. He has remained out of the public eye for several decades.

He was denied a passport by the U.S. state department for eight years after he refused to sign the statement saying he was not a communist. The requirement for such a statement was later reversed by a Su-

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

SUNDAY, MAY 19

Aries (March 21-April 19): After the community's Sunday convocation, mingle with your neighbors and friends. Attend to a local problem that affects all. Theme: (2nd) 29-May 19): Strong demands on your energy are likely. People from the past may reappear, not fit into the present. Communication is favored.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Important changes turn out well. Social adventures include romance. Set aside a few moments to plan the week ahead.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Among this Sunday's endless conversations much can be learned. Give others the same time you'd like for yourself.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Busy Sunday, unexpected invitations and extra duty to perform. Avoid excesses. Respect others' sentiments.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creativity fills your Sunday if you'll let it. Young people dominate the scene. Relax and enjoy yourself.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Make the most of what you are and what you have. Today's progress is permanent, thus worthy of your enthusiasm. Make it a steady-paced Sunday.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Nothing goes quite as planned. The changes are favorable, but demand extra time. Be receptive, flexible!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get out early. Catch up with the news of your neighbors. Evening is a time for reflection.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Putting your feelings on the line is only part of the theme of today. Back your convictions with contributions and personal involvement.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Social activities tend to get beyond original ideas. Bring on interested friends who may be willing and able to help.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Life speeds on before you in a broad panorama of potential. Be alert to take in all that happens. Protect time.

MONDAY, MAY 21

Aries (March 21-April 19): Up and on the go early! You'll need tact to get around some temporary obstacle. Avoid excess.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Friends are diversions, are unlikely to pay heed to work deadlines, collaboration. Do not rush to catch up lost time.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Pay careful attention to serious ideas offered by family and associates. Adapt them to your purposes, devise your own short-cuts.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Your organizing skills are tested for ways of getting out of things as well as putting projects together. Meet rivals head-on.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Mark time for the moment. You are overdue for a lengthy period of dealing with uncertain facts, doubtful figures.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A coherent schedule is worthy of your efforts. Money trickles out for little return. Younger people claim attention.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's time to get down to fundamentals, do and say what you really believe and get a fresh start.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Find the dramatic undertones in even the dullest routines this week—there's plenty to observe.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Potentially a successful day in financial terms. Formalities must be attended to, with care cumbering all appointments.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Work in the appropriate time and place—forget your job when you're on your own time. New contacts deserve follow-up.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Begin your week with a physical check-up. Take inventory of your ready resources, plan for their sensible use.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your discretion is a prime factor in your own interests and in the success of your family.

Tuesday, May 22

Aries (March 21-April 19): Friendly help is available and abundant. Stay on the job, set last details. Novel ideas may include one that works well.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Matters of status, recognition come to crisis. All depends on how you pursue them and what you have been preparing.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Being a good neighbor is part of success—make sure you seek to meet more people of common interest.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): This promises to be a busy day of balanced progress. Small surprises lead to lasting benefits.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Your present efforts provide basis for future achievement. Don't rush—building reliable co-operation comes first.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be sure to do enough of what you've been assigned. Affairs of the heart take unexpected energy directions.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct 22): The work of your mind blends smoothly into your physical expression, goes readily into permanent form.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keener communication. Make sure you've got letters to answer, connections to make. People may misunderstand if you offer no word.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec 21): Business promises to be a pleasure. Good humor pervades daily living. Brief travels are profitable, pay off indirectly.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow your intuition. Responsible issues can be hastened to satisfactory conclusions.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Most of those around you are concerned for your interests as well as theirs. Make common sense support their goals.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Resist the urge to make your opinions known to all. Being a good listener brings special benefits.

Paper Reports Change

Davis Abandons His Policy Of Free Holiday Flights

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Premier William Davis has changed the previous free-ride policy that applied on holiday trips he takes outside the country on government aircraft.

The newspaper, in a copyright story, says the premier has decided to pay back to the provincial treasury the equivalent of the commercial fares for any such holiday trips taken since last fall.

The newspaper says the premier estimates he makes about six such trips each year, most to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where he and his wife purchased a furnished condominium for about $53,000 Dec. 14.

The newspaper says Premier Davis told it that the new policy calls for him to pay the equivalent of first-class fares for himself and his wife, Kathleen, and economy fares for any of their five children or guests who accompany them.

The two-bedroom suite in Florida overlooks the ocean from a plush section of the resort city.

The newspaper says that since last autumn, all members of the Davis family have paid their way.

It says the premier has not actually paid the province anything to date. There is a licensing system governing government planes, said the premier, which technically forbids any passenger to pay for journeys.

The newspaper says Mr. Davis has asked government legal experts to find a way that will allow him to reimburse the province for his family's fares.

The premier told the newspaper a record of flights and passengers has been kept since he changed the policy.

First-class commercial air fare to Fort Lauderdale from Toronto is $240. An economy seat costs $187. Travelling in a family plan, the seven-member Davis family could make the flight on a commercial airline for $875.

The newspaper says that when he travels to Florida by government plane, he uses an executive jet leased for $600 an hour flying time.

Opposition parties have been critical lately of ministers using government aircraft. Lists of flights taken by ministers are being released to the public accounts committee.

PC Party in Quebec Is Being Rebuilt

MONTREAL (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party of Quebec is being rebuilt from the grassroots, says Claude Dupras, newly-elected president of the party's provincial association.

"My personal opinion is that the Quebec Progressive Conservative party now does not constitute a party as such," says Mr. Dupras, who became president a month ago at the head of a hand-picked executive.

A "realistic evaluation" of all 74 Quebec federal ridings is under way and recommendations for reorganization will be placed before a June 2 meeting of the party's provincial council. Mr. Dupras, a 40-year-old consulting engineer, said in an interview.

No New Pledges Made to Veterans

OTTAWA (CP) — Veterans Affairs Minister Daniel Mac-Donald listened attentively Friday but made no new promises when pressed in the Commons for improved war veterans' benefits.

In fact, he indicated the government will end one program for veterans next year as planned despite opposition demands it be continued.

Mr. MacDonald, a veteran who lost an arm and a leg in the Second World War, said requests to continue the Veterans Land Act beyond its scheduled expiry date next March 31 are based on a misunderstanding.

The legislation was passed after the Second World War to give veterans financial aid to buy farms, set up commercial fishing businesses or build or improve homes on their return to civilian life.

Realizing not all veterans would want this assistance, Mr. MacDonald said, the government also offered so-called re-establishment credits and help for university education.

Each veteran could qualify for only one of the options.

Most took advantage of the assistance offers, he said. The Land Act was not intended as an urban housing program nor a means to help veterans at retirement.

He reiterated his hope to bring in legislation before the end of the month to raise disability allowances for veterans. An increase was announced in the throne speech Jan. 4.

Mr. MacDonald spoke as the House debated a Conservative motion urging the government to "remedy present injustices" by removing inequities in various benefits and pension plans for veterans.

The motion, debated on one of several days set aside for opposition business, served only as a vehicle for debate and did not come to a vote.

Rochdale Receiver Favors Evicting Trouble-makers

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the firm which is the receiver of Rochdale college said Friday it is better to work for the eviction of trouble-makers at the college than have a serious confrontation.

John Biddell, president of Clarkson Co. Ltd., told a press conference:

"We know that some the residents of Rochdale are armed and that any attempt to evict all or a substantial number of the tenants en masse would lead to a riot in which a number of people would be killed or injured, possibly among them some of the younger children."

He said a security force hired by his company has gained complete control of the residence under a verbal agreement with Rochdale's council that calls for the ouster of known drug traffickers.

Ottawa Threatening to Sue Quebec Over Cable Control

QUEBEC (CP) — Ottawa's threat Friday to take Quebec to court over the province's intrusion into regulation of cable television companies rings hollow here.

Jean-Paul L'Allier, Quebec communications minister, challenged the federal minister, Gerard Pelletier, to do just that several months ago.

The occasion was the Quebec minister's reply to a sharp telegram from Mr. Pelletier telling Mr. L'Allier that he was exceeding Quebec's authority in circulating a questionnaire to Quebec cable companies asking details of their operations.

In his reply, Mr. L'Allier said it was not up to the federal minister to say whether cable was a federal or a provincial field of jurisdiction.

The Quebec minister said the constitutional question was up to the courts to decide.

In Ottawa Friday, Mr. Pelletier said the federal government will turn to the courts, if necessary, to stop Quebec from taking over cable wholesale.

Since the last exchange between the two levels of government, the Quebec public service board has issued operating permits to cable companies.

This led to Mr. Pelletier's charge Friday that Quebec might "sabotage" proposed federal-provincial talks on the whole communications industry.

The talks will probably take place next fall, after the provinces thrash out the cable question May 31-June 1 at a Calgary conference of provincial ministers responsible for communications.

Policemen's Solitude Psychological Problem

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Today's policeman suffers from "psychological incarceration", Edward Hale, chairman of an Ontario government study group assessing policing in the province, said Friday.

He said in an interview that a study by one metropolitan area in Ontario found that the patrolman spends 97 per cent of his time alone during his eight-hour shift.

"Think of the psychological impact of that. He may have to plunge into a highly emotional situation such as a holdup or a rape."

Because the officer spends so much time in "his glass and steel bubble"—the patrol car—"how can you expect this man to react with the calm and skill that you need?"

Mr. Hale, a Kitchener, Ont., businessman, was speaking during a recess at one of a series of public hearings the study team is holding across the province.

Although the group's terms of reference include police administration, costs and services, Mr. Hale said he has found a policeman's relationship with the public to be the prime concern.

Dr. W. J. Walsh, associate professor of medicine at McMaster University, Hamilton, told the Ontario Medical Association the basis.

Two Men Caught
2 Warkworth Men at Large

By IAN ROBERTSON, Staff Reporter

WARKWORTH — A provincial police tracking dog late this morning flushed out two of four prisoners who escaped from the federal medium security institute here last night.

Within minutes, John Gladu, 20, of Hamilton, serving five years, two months and 22 days for robbery, breaking, entering and theft, and possession of forgery tools, and Max Thomas Willis, a 21-year-old Toronto man, serving two years, nine months for robbery and possession of stolen goods, were recaptured by police in a swamp near the institution.

Four prisoners overpowered two guards and made good their escape by scaling a 14-foot chain link fence.

A fifth and unidentified man apparently was deterred by several warning shotgun blasts fired by a guard in a tower 150 yards away. He stopped running, put his hands above his head and was recaptured.

Director William Whittake this morning reported that, at 11 p.m., four prisoners overpowered the two unarmed guards in the cell block area and locked them in a nearby room. The guards were unhurt, Mr. Westlake said.

Using keys taken from the guards, the prisoners opened a fire exit door leading to the prison yard. It was as they and a fifth prisoner were running toward the perimeter fence that a guard spotted them and opened fire.

Mr. Westlake said it was unlikely any of the shots could have reached the escapers, adding "there was no visible evidence of anyone being hit."

Guards and provincial police immediately began combing the area, setting up roadblocks and checking farmhouses.

As of this morning, 50 prison guards are patrolling Highway 30 and surrounding country roads, with more than 25 provincial police officers from Brighton, Campbellford and Cobourg detachments handling patrols on the major highways.

Cars were also being tasked for search on Highway 401.Estimated more than 15 make up part of the institution. The Belleville provincial police search dog, Sabre, is also involved in the hunt.

Mr. Westlake said neither of the two guards was injured by the escaping four.Some, he said there are 167 individual living units, or cells, on 17 landings. At certain times of the day, inmates can roam freely through the area that includes three television viewing rooms.

The guards are posted at a control centre and make periodic patrols.

The guards are posted at strategic areas.

— Gary Reginald Barnes, 20, of Toronto, serving four years, six months for breaking, entering and theft, conspiracy and parole violation. He stands 5 feet, 9½ inches, weighing 180 lbs., has a fair complexion and brown hair.

— Andrew Switzer, 22, of Toronto, serving eight years for breaking, entering and theft, intent to commit burglary, and robbery. He stands 5 feet, 10½ inches, weighing 155 lbs. with medium complexion and dark brown hair.

The last escape from the institution occurred in late March. The three fugitives were recaptured. Three also escaped in October, 1972, and were also recaptured.

Canada's National White Water team was named at Minden this weekend following slalom races on the Gull River, shown above. The 14-man team will leave for Switzerland May 30 for a month-long training session in preparation for World Championships June 24, 25 and 26. Team member Reg DeBurlatie of Toronto won the Ontario title for white water over the 29-gate course. For story see Page 13.

Kissinger and Tho Believed 'Interpreting' Ceasefire Pact

PARIS (AP) — Henry Kissinger and Le Duc Tho met for the fifth time today after Kissinger reported "some progress" in their earlier talks to revitalize the Vietnam ceasefire agreement.

President Nixon's national security adviser and the North Vietnamese politburo member conferred for a total of 18 hours in their first four meetings that began last Thursday. Their deputies held a marathon 12-hour meeting Sunday and conferred again Monday until nearly midnight.

This intense activity suggested that Kissinger and Tho are drafting an "interpretation" of the ceasefire agreement they negotiated last winter.

Kissinger's two-word report of progress to reporters Monday night was the only break in the news blackout surrounding the talks. But the atmosphere seems friendly.

The also has not made public mention in recent days of the Viet Cong's allegations that U.S. planes are bombing in South Vietnam. Last week he threatened to walk out of the talks should any more such bombings occur. The United States has denied the charges.

McCord Told CIA Prepared To Aid Cover-up

WASHINGTON (CP) — Watergate conspirator James McCord testified today he was told that James Schlesinger, director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), would go along with an attempt to blame the agency for the Watergate bugging.

McCord, testifying at the resumption of the Senate select committee hearings, said his lawyer told him that if he was willing to claim the CIA was involved in the Watergate break-in, his retirement papers would be doctored to show he had resigned the agency after having previously retired.

McCord said his lawyer, Gerald Alch, told him that Schlesinger "would go along with it."

Viet Cong Rejects Saigon Peace Plan

SAIGON (Reuter) — The South Vietnamese government proposed a new plan today aimed at ending the fighting that has marred the four-month-long ceasefire. But the Viet Cong immediately rejected the proposal.

Representatives of the Saigon government presented the seven-point plan at a meeting of the Joint Military Commission (JMC) of South Vietnamese and Viet Cong officials charged with administering the ceasefire.

A Saigon spokesman said the Viet Cong rejected the plan outright.

Viet Cong officials were not available for comment.

Under the South Vietnamese plan, the United States, North Vietnam, the Viet Cong and South Vietnam would sign a joint appeal to stop the fighting, which has already caused 36,000 casualties since the ceasefire.

Under its terms, the forces of all countries would cease hostile actions within 48 hours and remain in their positions.

Viet Cong and South Vietnamese officials would then hold talks to delineate the areas held by both sides from platoon size of 60 men upwards.

Discussions also would be held on positions occupied by the Viet Cong and South Vietnamese before the ceasefire was signed.

The South Vietnamese spokesman said the United States and North Vietnam have been informed of the plan and would have only been told officially if the Viet Cong had agreed.

Researchers Find Way To Predict Drug Use

BONN (AP) — Leonid Brezhnev, saying that the world is closer to durable peace than ever before, flew home to Moscow today to begin preparing for his visit to President Nixon next month.

"Auf wiedersehen," the Soviet Communist party chief told West German Chancellor Willy Brandt as he boarded his Aeroflot jet at Bonn-Cologne airport.

The departure of the Soviet Communist party chief on the first anniversary of Nixon's trip to Moscow ended the first visit to West Germany by a top Soviet leader. During his five days in Bonn, he and Brandt laid the basis for expansion of trade, technical and scientific co-operation and cultural exchanges between their two countries.

Brezhnev said in a television address Monday night that improved U.S.-Soviet relations and other steps have brought peace closer. Vowing to bring the Soviet Union out of the cold war and into ever-closer co-operation with the West, the 66-year-old party chief said:

"The prospects for humanity are becoming increasingly more hopeful. The war in Vietnam is over. Soviet-American relations continue to develop favorably.

"By and large, one can say that our planet today has come closer than ever before to durable peace."

The highlight of Brezhnev's visit was his signing Saturday with Brandt of a 10-year economic co-operation pact providing a framework for West German investment to help boost the lagging Soviet economy.

In a joint declaration Monday, Brezhnev and Brandt gave their blessing to proposed talks — including German help in building a Soviet steel mill, expanding Soviet production of chemicals, machine tools, motors and raw materials, and other exchanges of West German technology for Soviet raw materials.

Durable Peace Closer

BOSTON (AP) — Researchers say they have developed a method to predict which teenagers are likely to use marijuana, which ones will go on to hard drugs and which ones will remain non-users.

In a report from the department of psychiatry at Massachusetts General Hospital, the researchers said today they analysed data from 2,222 junior-high and high-school students in the Boston area.

In that computer analysis, drug use in 1971 was predicted from five non-drug-related factors-including academic performance and cigarette smoking—measured in 1969.

The researchers said the analysis was 88-per-cent accurate in predicting the non-drug users who went on to marijuana alone and 77-per-cent accurate in showing which non-users went on both marijuana and hard drugs such as heroin, stimulants, depressants and hallucinogens.

The data were also 72-per-cent accurate in predicting which non-users eventually used any type of drug and 67-per-cent accurate in predicting which new marijuana users went to hard drugs.

The researchers said that in comparing data from non-users and those already using drugs at the beginning of the study in 1969, the computer was able to sort out the two groups with 81 per cent accuracy using only non-drug-related information.

The five elements assessed in 1969 were rebelliousness against rules and authorities as measured by a questionnaire, ratings of obedience, grade average, cigarette smoking and unfavorable attitudes toward cigarette teamoking.

Skylab Temperatures Cover 96-degree Range

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — With both hot and cold temperatures causing concern, preparations for the Skylab salvage mission centred on Cape Kennedy today as the three astronauts fly here to begin the countdown for a hoped-for launch Friday.

Before travelling here, the astronauts were to practise repair jobs in a huge Alabama water tank. Flight controllers, meanwhile, were walking what once called "a thermal tightrope" in efforts to keep temperatures within reasonable limits.

There was fear that food and film might spoil in one end of the orbiting station where there are readings near 130 degrees, and that water might freeze and burst pipes at the other end where recordings plummet to 34 degrees.

Officials hoped to develop maneuvres today to bring temperatures into better balances and hold them steady until the astronauts can rocket up to the docking laboratory on man's first space salvage mission.

The timetable remained tight for a planned launching of astronauts Charles Conrad, Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz at 9 a.m. EDT Friday. A decision on whether to proceed is expected Thursday from Skylab program director William Schneider.

Launch crews plan to start the countdown on the Saturn 1B rocket at 10:30 p.m. tonight, a few hours after Conrad, Kerwin, and Weitz fly here from the Marshall Space Flight Centre at Huntsville, Ala.

During the day, the astronauts planned to practise Skylab repairs in a giant tank which contains 1.4 million gallons of water and full-scale models of the orbiting lab and the Apollo ship. Workers in swimsuits complete simulations of space weightlessness.

Mission commander Conrad and Kerwin were to rehearse erecting a 400-square-foot sunshade during a space walk, a backup method for shielding the laboratory from the rays of the sun.

The primary approach will be to have the astronauts link up with the station, enter the sweltering workshop and push an umbrella-like device through an airlock and expand it.

If the astronauts cannot deploy a solar shield, they will have to abandon the $296-million station in space.

The sun has sent temperatures soaring inside the Skylab workshop, the main section of the laboratory where vulnerable food, medicine and film are stored.

Australia Argues French Tests Endanger Health of Its People

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Radioactive debris from France's Pacific nuclear bomb tests invades the bones, lungs and critical body organs of every Australian, the court was told Monday.

Attorney General Lionel Murphy of Australia, speaking to the International Court of Justice, was presenting his country's case against French nuclear tests in the South Pacific.

Australia and New Zealand, which will present its case later this week, are seeking an order from the court to stop French tests until a final judgment of the dispute by the international body.

In a lengthy statement to the 16 international judges, Murphy said one of his country's main legal propositions is that the deposit of radioactive fallout from nuclear tests infringes the inviolability of Australian territorial sovereignty.

"This radioactive debris which French atmospheric nuclear explosions inevitably deposit on our soil invades our people's bones and lungs and critical body organs."

France refused to divulge the date, type and yield of future explosions. Murphy complained. "These may be of a size and yield hitherto unequalled. France has refused to give any assurance that a major explosion will not be conducted this year."

Belleville Man Faces Charges

A Belleville man was arraigned on charges of assault and kidnapping today in Kingston.

Ronald Franklin Woodcock, 36, of 45 Centre Street, was arrested following a high speed chase which ended at 1:30 a.m. Sunday. He was unarmed and gave himself up voluntarily 10 miles east of Kingston.

Witness claimed he entered a Kingston woman's home, struck her and upon fleeing of the house, carried off the woman's five-year-old daughter. The girl was returned home unharmed after one hour with her captor.

cording of each firework as it was taken from storage and matching the record against a count of the flashes to ensure there were no misfires that could leave dangerous explosives in the grounds of the Belleville Fairgrounds. The Belleville Kinsmen Club spent more than $1,000 on the annual show which proved a popular as ever. Members of the club also devoted their time and energies to the hour-long spectacle assisted by firefighters of the Belleville Fire Department. ## Car Rolls, Injuries Light

A family of four escaped serious injury when their 1960 Toyota rolled on Highway 401 between Belleville and Trenton a half mile west of Adams Road at 2:45 p.m. Monday.

Rita Hostetter, 20p was driving at the time of the accident. In spinning over to the curb she lost control of the car which, according to a witness, rolled twice, coming to rest on its wheels facing east. It had been westbound.

Sandor Hostetter, 40, and his sons Steven, 10, were both taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital, but treated and released. A daughter, Marika, 8, and Mrs. Hostetter both escaped injury.

Damage to the vehicle was estimated at $700. There was no other property damage involved. The Hostetters live at 23 Northcliffe Boulevard, Toronto.

TWEED (Special)—Thieves made off with $2,800 in equipment from Cove's Marine on Victoria Street in Tweed over the weekend.

The culprits gained entry about 4 a.m. Sunday by removing a rear window. They backed a vehicle up to the building, removed three power lawn mowers, a 20-horsepower outboard motor and two 8.9 horsepower motors, six 5-gallon gas cans and three portable gas water pumps. The street and the property around the store were reported to be well-lighted.

Bob Coveney, owner of the store, was not covered with theft insurance. Chief Don Thompson and Constable Barry Wallace of the Tweed Police are continuing their investigation.

Apple Blossom Festival Gets Off to Sunny Start

AMELIASBURGH — The weatherman co-operated with the organizers of the Apple Blossom Festival as the annual week-long event got off to a good start under ideal conditions for outdoor square dancing and wagon rides through the flowering orchards.

The site for the sendoff this year was the Harold Bonter farm below Ostercdonk's Hill east of Carrying Place.

The festival church service took place at Albury Church on the morning with the Rev. Maurice McLeod conducting the service.

A colorful scene among the blooms in the orchard was the Apple Queen Janet Weberaid with her princesses in costume receiving the guests as they arrived.

A favorite meeting place on the grounds was the booth where members of the Albury Church choir dispensed home cooked apple pie with cheese produced in Prince Edward County. The refreshment served was cold apple cider.

As the festival continues the activity moves to Pinecrest School at Bloomfield this Wednesday night with the presentation of a variety show and the selection of the semi-finalists for the Apple Queen title. The Apple Queen will be chosen and crowned as a highlight of Festival Ball to be held at Keele public school this Friday night.

Ring Around the Apples

The Tree Valley Square Dancers celebrate the start of this year's Apple Blossom Festival with some high-stepping in Harold Bonter's orchard on Ridgeville Road over the weekend. Visitors were treated to a tour of the grounds and some locally-produced treats, including apple pie with Prince Edward County cheese and cider. The week-long festival concludes with the crowning of an Apple Blossom Queen.

First Loyalist Landing Re-enacted on Reserve

First of the Loyalists, the Mohawks of Tyendinaga Sunday celebrated their May 22, 1784 return to the Sacred Hill of the Thunderbird with their traditional re-enactment of the landing.

The 189th anniversary was the largest in recent years. As the nice canoes beached, a crowd of about 600 pressed forward to the shore.

David Maracle, Mohawk language teacher at the Tyendinaga Reserve, carried a British flag to lead a procession from the landing to the cairn. Chief Earl Hill and councillors Carl Braut, Dr. Clare Brant, Willard Hill and Bennett Brant standing in for councillor William Brant, carrying a birch bark canoe, were escorted by RCMP officers Corporal Sam Pittman and Constable Thomas Roos.

The famous Queen Anne communion silver was also borne to the cairn to rest on the outdoor altar of the canoe while a simple service commemorated the occasion.

After Chief Earl Hill's welcome, David Maracle read the Loyalist Prayer in Mohawk. An opening prayer by Rev. Cyril Betts, Chaplain to the Mohawks, a hymn and reading of the Mohawk history by Arnold Brant was followed by the laying of a wreath at the cairn by Chief Earl Hill.

The address was by the primate of the Anglican Church of Canada, the Most Reverend E. W. Scott of Toronto.

The historic ceremony over, communion was held at the Anglican Church using the Queen Anne communion silver.

At the council house, large pots of corn soup were bubbling as women prepared knock. Close to 600 people were served ham sandwiches, cheese and corn soup. Displays of Indian crafts from across Ontario ranged the walls of the council house.

Hastings Member of Parliament Jack Ellis and MPP Clarke Rollins both pledged their assistance to the Mohawk people in extending their culture in the speeches that followed lunch.

Archbishop Scott brought greetings from the Mohawk people of British Columbia and displayed a blanket they had presented him with in making him an honorary chief of their tribe. Onto the blanket were stitched designs representing the tribe's four clans: the killer whale, the wolf, the eagle and the raven.

Children, ranging from 3 to 10 years old from the Tyendinaga Indian Day School then entertained with a program of traditional dance. Chief Earl Hill said there were times when Indian children were punished for speaking their own language in school. Today Mohawk culture and language is taught for half an hour each day at the reserve schools.

"We hope within the next, three years to take in three days of celebrations — this year it was just Saturday and Sunday," said Chief Hill. On Saturday a senior citizens' banzaar and tea was held on the

Loyalist Course Will Be Expanded

Loyalist College's mental retardation counsellors' program will enlarge its scope this fall. It will now train counsellors for institutions in Kingston as well as Picton.

September will mark the third year of the counselor training course at Loyalist. Theoretical part of the training is given at Loyalist and on-the-job training is taken at Prince Edward Heights. Upon graduation from the two-year course, students may be employed at any of the provincially operated facilities for the retarded as residential counsellors. They are also eligible for employment in other facilities for the retarded.

Loyalist was among the first community colleges to be chosen to offer the course. Now, the student intake has been increased and the college will train counsellors for Kingston Psychiatric Hospital. Grade 12 graduates and mature students are eligible to apply for the course through the registrar of the college.

Development Funds Cut Off

U.S. Retaliates Against Nationalization of Plants

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canada's delegation to the annual meetings of the Inter-American Development Bank just concluded in Kingston, Jamaica, was' understandably silent in a simmering crisis which broke out during the meetings.

The issue was over the justification of the United States in forbidding loans to those member countries whose governments nationalise and expropriate U.S. corporations without compensation.

The spokesman for the United States, by far the largest contributor to this bank of aid and technical assistance to developing Latin American republics, was none other than George P. Schultz, U.S. Secretary of the Treasury.

He is one of the very tough-minded and ideologically-alert money managers of the Nixon administration. And both of President Nixon's two Ambassadorships since 1969 have inflicted an almost total indifference to Latin American problems.

In any case the suspected breach from Washington came with short and brief warnings in Jamaica from Treasury Secretary Schultz that there would be no U.S funds for loans to member-states taking over U.S companies in their economies.

The response from Jose Luis Brunet, the alternate delegate to the bank from Peru was just as hot and heavy. Mr. Brunet re-affirmed what he called "the thesis of the bank" that "the right to expropriation cannot be limited by anyone" and that no people should be asked by any other country to relinquish their national program for development even when the local interest of foreign companies be involved.

This came within days of the Peruvian Government's nationalization of that country's all-important fisheries industries, in which several U.S food-processing and fish-packing companies mainly in California, had substantial interests.

It should be remembered that Peru since October, 1968 and the takeover of that country by socialist-oriented military colonels, has engaged in a steady program of nationalizing Peruvian and foreign-owned private enterprises. This began within days of their 1968 coup de etat by nationalizing the once-dominant International Petroleum Corporation, a subsidiary of the former Standard Oil of New Jersey.

In neighboring Chile, big U.S-owned corporations especially in copper mining, were seized by the Allende Marxist government without any compensation. And since then, I. T and T, the world's largest conglomerate, has admitted at hearings in Washington that it attempted to prevent the 1970 election of a Marxist regime in that country.

The Inter-American and Peruvian outbursts at the 1973 meetings in Jamaica have taken place at a time when a curious conflicting differences between Washington and these leftward-moving Latin states, could seriously affect that bank's stable beneficent operations as a modernizing force.

Canada which joined the bank as a full member in May, 1971, but had been contributing to it since 1964, remains in a curious position in the middle of this growing and anticipated crisis. We are not only one of the major donor members along with the U.S.A., Brazil and Mexico, but Canada is also the seat of many U.S multi-national companies having a very tough time these days in Latin America.

So far, no major Canadian-owned multi-national operating in Latin America has been pe-Canadianed, which means we can still afford a sanguine view about the day when a Canadian Finance Minister might have to threaten the same action in the IDB as Secretary Schultz.

Multi-lateralism even in an international bank, clearly could have its hazards for us.

Role of the Press

During a recent discussion in Picton on the issue of whether the Press should be permitted to attend committee meetings, Mayor McFarland seemed to be straddling both sides of the fence.

The issue arose over the fact that Picton Gazette news editor Jack Evans, who also happens to be a town councillor, had been receiving information in advance of other reporters. Suggesting that by attending meetings representatives of the other newspapers might also obtain background information, Mr. McFarland said: "I want the Press in and we are not shying away from it in any way, shape or form."

Council however, evidently felt differently, which prompted deputy reeve Ross Cronkwright to withdraw his motion to admit newsmen. When Mr. Evans moved it a second time — he was the sole supporter of the motion — Mayor McFarland came up with the old chestnut about newspapers printing only unfavorable news and criticisms. "They're always right," he suggested, "don't hit the Press." As an example of "good things" the Mayor referred to several matters such as substantial tax contributions by a local firm.

Granted information of that nature has its place, although it really belongs more properly in a journal specializing in finance. But if the public hears only about the bad things and the aberrations of society it is because they are no less attuned to it than is the Press. They read it, don't they? Yet the good news is there too, only it has less impact. Someone tried to run a "good news newspaper" in California a couple of years ago. It folded after a year or so.

As for committee meetings, the Press recognizes that they are normally held in private, while full Council meetings, which receive committee recommendations, are open to press and public. We have no quarrel with this. On the other hand if one or other newspaper becomes privy to information, for the reasons outlined earlier, that is another matter. Hence the recent debate over the issue in Picton.

Speaking of good news, or potential good news, perhaps Mayor McFarland could report on progress, if any, on his scheme for linking the Ontario and U.S. mainlands and the islands in between by causeway. We have commented on this a couple of times at least, but as of now it sounds like just another pipe dream.

Still A Myth

We see where another academic has taken to discussing the so-called age of leisure. He is Professor John Farina of the University of Toronto's faculty of social work. He told a Community Services seminar here that one of the "great failures" of modern times has been lack of education for self-fulfillment through leisure. Such education, he says, is crucial as work demands a diminishing amount of the individual's time.

Well it is true that a lot of people are onto the three and four-day week and that thousands, including masses of young people, are unemployed. But what about the rest of us? Does the farmer have any leisure to speak of? Or the executive? Or the housewife with small children? Maybe there is a trend toward increased leisure — or should we call it boredom when we see sizeable groups of young people hanging around Front Street? Where is the motivation there — for motivation man is what you must have, as we heard one young executive tell another in a restaurant recently. But among the working population generally we fail to detect any genuine signs of an age of leisure.

If it were otherwise, perhaps we would see a reduction in rush-hour traffic, peptic, coronary attacks, the frenetic brushing around that so characterizes modern life. But no, these weathervanes of the rat-race of our times remain . . . the age of leisure is still largely a myth. By all means though let us prepare for it, if it is really in the offing. Doubtless someone will still be around to do the work: man the production lines, push the pens, clean the houses, put the kids to bed and all that.

Gold Beckons as Confidence in U. S. $ Drops

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Funny thing about finance. Whenever a big round number comes up, it's news.

When the Dow-Jones average of 30 New York industrial stock prices rises above 1,000 or falls below that largely meaningless figure, it hits the front page.

This week, for the first time, the price of gold on the London bullion market rose above $100 an ounce—and it became front page news. For all it will ever see the London bullion market or buy an ounce of gold—but the age-old mystique of gold compels our attention.

The attraction of gold has been growing as confidence in money—especially the U.S. dollar—wanes. The visceral urge to own gold rather than paper money has been gripping more and more people everywhere, from the pit-rich sheiks of the Middle East to the small-time speculator or hoarder.

This has created another tremendous new wave of demand for the purest and most immediately available of precious metal. Today's hang-the-cost purchasers are not motivated simply by gold's unique physical properties or its special beauty.

They are giving a forceful demonstration of the growing lack of international confidence in the U.S. economy and its political leadership.

You may well be weary of Watergate, but it appears to be an important factor in this loss of confidence in the U.S., and thus in the U.S. dollar. That line of reasoning goes something like this:

Either President Richard M. Nixon is gullible, having allowed his staff to usurp some presidential powers and to keep him in the dark—or he is culpable, having tried to whitewash a known case of wrongdoing.

Then there's the sorry record of the Nixon Administration in managing the U.S. economy. Under Nixon, the outflow of U.S. dollars has far exceeded the inflow (the balance-of-payments deficit for the first three months of this year was more than $10 billion), unemployment has spread, and prices—especially of food and energy—have skyrocketed.

Worse, the Nixon Administration doesn't seem to care. When the dollar came under pressure in similar international monetary crises in earlier Nixon years, the president rejected the opportunity to restore world confidence in the U.S. economy through imposition of controls on incomes and prices.

Instead, Mr. Nixon chose easy, short-run remedies—such as abandoning the fixed official price of gold that had stood since 1934. If he thereby succeeded in keeping American voters reasonably content, he thoroughly antagonized all those allied governments, foreign banks and investors who had been forced to take hundreds of dollars because they believed U.S. assurances that the dollar would not be devalued and would always be backed by gold.

Today, world confidence in the U.S. Administration—and its ability to maintain price stability, employment, international trade, and just plain good government — has deteriorated sharply.

In time, President Nixon will no doubt try to achieve another of his once-for-all reforms of the international money system. But recent history has shown that such reforms don't work. There must be a willingness to accept continual reform, self-discipline and restraint.

Until then, the U.S. dollar—and inevitably ours as well—will be under pressure. That could mean good news of a sort for our gold-mining industry. But for most Canadians, it means digging down deeper to pay for that imported car, camera or whatever—and much less purchasing power on that trip abroad..

Today In History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The last invasion of England took place 727 years ago today—in 1216—when Prince Louis of France (later Louis VIII) landed at the invitation of English barons to overthrow King John. John died a few months later, being succeeded by the infant Henry III. The Pope excommunicated the rebel armies as Louis retired, after being paid a small sum for expenses, and turned his attention to the massacre of the Albigensian heretics.

1963—A NATO ministerial conference in Ottawa approved in principle the formation of a nuclear strike force under NATO direction.

1945—Maj. F. A. Tilston of Toronto was awarded the Victoria Cross.

1945—British meat and sugar rations were cut.

1906—The last British troops departed from Esquimalt, B.C.

1885—French author Victor Hugo died.

Sea cadets of the Belleville ship Quinte will have their annual inspection at the Front St. headquarters when ranking officers of the Navy League will be on hand to see the boys go through their paces. Inspecting officer will be Lt.-Commander G. J. Manson, assistant director of sea cadets. Commander K.S. McLachlan, president of the Ontario division of the Navy League of Canada, and Commander A. G. C. Whalley, of HMCS Cataraqui, Kingston, will also be on hand for the inspection.

The Belleville Camera Club's regular monday meeting at the Corby Public Library featured an exhibition of color slides. Keen interest by all members in this exhibit was evidenced by the number of entries received. Mount Rundle by H. Cameron Turner was voted first place; Sunset Markham by Dr. R. H. Stewart, second and Autumn Scene by Doug Ketcheson, third place.

According to gauge kept at the Belleville water filtration plant, in a period of approximately 24-hours, 2.35 inches of rain fell in the district. It was the heaviest rainfall recorded for many years. Farmers viewed flooded low-lying fields with uneasy realizing that at best it would be several days before spring cultivation could be resumed. Already spring seeding is approximately three weeks late and yesterday's rainfall will further delay the work.

When a delivery truck drove out of the Post Office driveway shortly after 6 p.m. Tuesday, the fender of the vehicle struck Hewlon Wilbur of Foster Ave., inflicting a knee injury as the pedestrian was knocked down. It was raining heavily at the time which made visibility poor for both the driver and Mr. Wilbur.

Delicate Power Balance Keeps Party Whips Busy

By RON ADAMS
From The Intelligencer's
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Some observers have lamented the absence of excitement in the present minority parliament, but for one small group of MP's, the minority situation has produced its share of tense moments.

The party whips, who are the official watchdogs of attendance in the House and the 23 standing committees of the Commons, report that life has changed since the January 4 opening of parliament.

Chief opposition whip Tom Bell (PC- St. John - Lancaster) is a veteran of 20 years as an MP and the only whip who held the post in the last parliament.

During the last session, he was able to visit his New Brunswick riding almost every weekend. This session, he finds, he can't leave Ottawa at all.

Mr. Bell said he spent the Easter recess toured the riding and catching up on calls he would have made on weekends in a less unsettled political situation. He said he also must spend almost all of his time in the chamber and the adjoining lobbies to keep an eye on attendance and be ready to call in more members if they are needed for a vote or to lend support to an important speaker.

Conservative MP's, like those in the other parties, are required to notify Mr. Bell when they leave the Commons for any reason. The New Democratic Party, Whip Bill Knight (Assiniboia) has taken the process a step further by asking each member to file a detailed timetable of his MP movements with his office.

The timetable shows where each MP expects to be and includes telephone numbers where they can be reached. One member has filed a complete listing of his and Mrs. Knight's trips.

Attendance during debate or in standing committee is important, but "whipping" is at its most intense when a vote is expected. All whips are alerted except no excuses expect illness or a death in the immediate family.

But both Mr. Bell and Chief government whip Tom Lefebvre (L—Pontiac) say they have had little difficulty persuading members for votes.

The ministry situation and the policies given to votes have really disciplined the members Mr. Lefebvre said.

Attendance has been generally high for votes, particularly among Liberals. In the last parliament, it was customary for 15 or 20 of the 150 government members absent at one time. Since January, there has seldom been more than three empty seats when a vote is called.

Mr. Bell said he was not surprised by the high Liberal attendance.

"After all, they have more to lose," he said.

Mr. Lefebvre agreed. And he said he has had "terrific response" from his MP's in his efforts, aimed at ensuring that the Liberals do not lose any vote that is within their reach.

"If we do, we're out," he said adding that backbenchers have realized that blunt fact and reacted accordingly.

The situation has produced its light moments as well.

Mr. Knight said he was disturbed to discover during one late-night vote that an MP who had not given notice of his absence did not show up.

"He slept right through the bells," Mr. Knight said, referring to the shrill division bells that ring throughout the buildings on Parliament Hill when a vote is called. Mr. Knight's office even telephoned the member and failed to reach him.

Since then, the NDP whip has added an extra insurance feature to his whipping system.

He makes a quick personal tour of the offices of his 31 members, just to make sure no one is doing.

Ulster's Textile Industry

Ulster Commentary

It was like the first four-minute mile when the Northern Ireland textile industry first notched up a production level which was 2½ times that of the comparative month of 1963, which statistically is the base year.

That record index figure of 254 was established in October, 1971, and has been equalled a few times since, but in November last — before all production figures for which were announced recently — there was a new record with a fantastic output index of 273.

That was 33 points higher than in November, 1971.

If the textile industry sustains the growth rate averaged over the past four years, an index of 300 could be a realistic target by the end of this year.

No other manufacturing industry comes within miles of this as a growth record. It is richly deserved. The rise in production by the electricity producers, who are leaders among the service industries.

And the reasons why the Ulster textile industry has soared are the reasons which give solid grounds for believing that this will continue.

The key factor is the emergence of man-made fibres and yarns production as not only Northern Ireland's biggest manufacturing industry, but as the catalyst which has created or encouraged the growth of enterprises using its products for conversion into spun yarns and cloth.

And although the industry is typically labour-intensive it has the labor intensive, it has played a unique part in the creation of new jobs and in raising average earnings.

One group alone, Courtaulds, challenges the shipyards as the largest individual employer in Ulster.

Producing several types of yarns and fibres, manufacturing warp and weft knitting, spinning, weaving, processing, dyeing and finishing, tellex engineering, warehousing and wholesaling — they participate almost every phase of Northern Ireland's textile life and still seem expansion minded.

The latest instance of the news that the Larne factory formerly operated by Intex is to be equipped by Courtaulds with a 14 latest draw-texturizing machinery for polyester and also nylon yarns for texturizing nylon.

The employment target is 70 by the end of 1974, which will help nudge their total payroll number in Ulster to 10,000.

The November index 10 production also confirms the improvement in the final quarter of last year of the flax spinning and linen industries.

At 72, the index was eight points higher than the comparative month in 1971, but the linen trade as a whole just maintained the 1971 output level.

The woollen industry also showed recovery of business last November, and clothing trade output was satisfactory.

Output of Polyester fibre at Courtaulds in Carrickfergus is to be increased by 60 per cent — from 10,000 tons annually to 16,000 tons.

North Front Street Has Worst Accident Record

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

Most drivers, after a few years on the road, come to acquire a peculiar sense of security. In many instances, the reasoning behind these fleeting fits of confidence can't be defined. From mile to mile, however, the normal motorist passes through alternating spells of safe indifference and subtle uneasiness.

Police, too, are aware of motoring's unpredictable nature. But, unlike the average driver who is forced to rely on instinct and experience, they have access to data that pinpoints exactly where those moments of relief and distress are likely to occur.

For the most part, trouble spots in Belleville are few and far between. Some, such as North Front Street, have become notorious. Motorists who are familiar with the city exercise caution when negotiating them.

Further away, the hazardous areas become more difficult to identify as road improvements are made and adjoining fields give way to traffic - producing development. Even the Ontario Provincial Police, ever on patrol, must be extra vigilant to keep abreast of changing patterns.

Sgt. Robert Hall, safety officer for the Belleville Police Department, says North Front Street is, without a doubt, the most accident - prone stretch of road in the city. The intersection at College Street, where already this year there have been five major accidents, has become a corner to approach with caution.

"Just about every day, there's a bang in the road for drivers coming south," Sgt. Hall observes. "As a result, you get a lot of rear-enders at 40 miles an hour. There are signs warning people to slow down but many just ignore them."

Pointing to a city map dotted with colored pins, he notes a change where Front Street — scene of numerous minor collisions — becomes North Front. The green-headed pins which line the main downtown artery give way to blue, indicating the chance of having an under - $200 accident become increasingly rare the further north you get.

In the past, proposals have been made to reduce the speed limit on North Front to 30 or 35 miles per hour. However, Sgt. Hall says it would only produce more speeding charges, not fewer accidents.

The solution — if one is possible — may lie in a plan voiced by Police Chief Douglas Crosbie. He suggests incorporating a fifth lane in the centre of the road, similar to Eglinton Ave. East in Toronto.

This would be used only for turning and would eliminate many of the traffic - halting stops motorists must make to enter side streets and driveways.

Three other danger zones are Dundas Street East, Bridge Street East and Victoria Ave. The frequency of collisions seems to subside beyond McDonald Ave. to the north, and from the Moira River east, high traffic volume and many cross streets produce a sizable number of major and minor collisions.

Sgt. Hall says patrol officers were instructed to cruise these routes more carefully in recent months.

"The idea is to scare people with more charges," he says, "because this has been proven to reduce the accident rate."

Two east-end intersections, Bridge and McDonald and Dundas and Dufferin, are especially tricky. The latter has already had three accidents this year in which persons were taken to hospital and another where a pedestrian was hurt, despite the addition of stop lights last summer.

Bolt there are bright signs, too. Cannifton Road, Station Street and the Quinte Mall parking lot, all brightly speckled on the 1972 map, are virtually bare this year.

In fact, large areas of the city appear almost accident-free. West Park Village, in particular, presents a trouble-free picture, says Sgt. Hall. This may be because the young homeowners who live there drive extra cautiously to avoid darting children.

Sgt. Hall says the condition of Belleville's roads, a constant guessing game for most drivers, has little effect on the number of accidents.

"On the bumpy roads, people duck and dive and it could cause accidents," he says. "But then again, they're going at slower speeds."

"On good roads, people are watching where the car goes, but they're also going a little faster, it all balances out."

One stretch where potholes and detours have proved beneficial is Highway 2 between Belleville and Trenton. In the first three months of 1972, the Trenton detour began to widen the road to four lanes, there were 26 accidents. Over the same period this year, the number was 13.

These figures were compiled at OPP headquarters in Toronto where a computer pours forth monthly analyses of accidents within each detachment. Cpl. Don Haskell, in Belleville, says the statistics are a valuable aid.

"We watch the figures regularly," he says. "Patrols are changed and officers check areas more closely due to the traffic accident statistics."

Broken down by highway and intersection, the data shows that Belleville's two interchanges on Highway 401 were much safer this winter than last. The total number of accidents within a five - mile radius of the exits diminished, once they changed the signing."

It all goes to show one thing: The better you know an area, the more relaxed you can be at the wheel. And that, as every motorist knows, is important when the driving blues could set in around the next curve.

Retirement After 25 Years

Garland, officer commanding the Aircraft Maintenance Development Unit, presents him with his certificate of service. Cpl. Sylvester served with various RCAF units in Quebec and Newfoundland, including the North Atlantic Squadron based at Gander. He - enlisting in the RCAF in 1953 he served at Trenton, Aylmer, Winnipeg, North Bay and No. 4 Fighter Wing, Germany. Since 1966, he has been employed in AMDU's Workshop Support Branch.

Ann Landers
First Grade Teacher Says Immature Kids Can't Pass

Dear Ann Landers: This is the time of year when parents become annoyed because they have just learned that their child will not pass to the next grade. As a first grade teacher, many youngsters come to me with no kindergarten. They are very immature. Their parents have been told this but when they hear that their youngster will be retained, they become angry and say they had no idea the child wasn't "keeping up."

I am writing not because I am irritated with the parents but because I want a better break for the children. I've had parents refuse to take a child for an eye exam when everything pointed to a vision problem. The same goes for children who are hard of hearing. (The mother says, "He's just lazy. Shake him—or punish him.")

One child cried in school every day. The poor thing had a mouth full of rotten teeth. (They'll fall out pretty soon.)

Another little girl smelled so bad that no one wanted to sit next to her. She was never taught to take a daily bath. Her clothes reeked with perspiration, but when I notified her mother, she called me a liar—accused me of not liking the child, and threatened to report me to the principal.

This is not a ghetto school. These are not welfare children. They are from middle-class families who don't care. Please, Ann, give us teachers a hand. Perhaps, if it comes from you, the parents will listen.—L.H. In Orlando

Dear L. H.: Here's "the hand." What some of these parents need is a foot—kicking them in the direction of a counsellor. Such indifference suggests incredible ignorance. They need professional guidance.

Dear Ann Landers: I agree with you that when bright and interesting people get together, it is not uncommon for each one for them to interrupt one another. This makes for lively conversation.

But what about the bores who interrupt just because they want the floor? We have such a person in our office. No matter what the topic, even when no one is talking to her, she butts in and takes over. More than once she has derailed a fascinating story to mouth some nonsense about her husband or her dog.

How does one silence such a chatterbrap? — Bugged in Boise

Dear Bugged: There is a way. The minute she opens her mouth—open yours. Say, "Please don't interrupt Bill. We're all fascinated with his story!" If you are determined, it works.

Quinte Cuisine

Somehow between gardening, macrame work and looking after her four children, Judy Schnell, a dietician, has found time to instruct gourmet cooking at Loyalist College. Her favorite recipe is Chicken A La Kieve with Smitane Sauce (Russian) for small dinner parties. Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Schnell have four children: David, 11, Michael, 9, Jennifer, 8 and Julie, 4.

Smitane Sauce

1-3 cup sour cream
¾ cup whipping cream
¾ cup condensed chicken broth
1-3 cup finely chopped onions
1 tbsp. sweet butter
2 tbsps. flour
½ tsp. salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
2 tbsps. dry white wine
Combine sour cream, whipping cream and broth, in saucepan and simmer over low heat. Do not allow to boil. Stir occasionally. Separately saute onions in butter until transparent. Blend in flour, salt and cayenne. Add, gradually, hot cream-chicken broth mixture, stirring continuously. Add wine and pour into saucebost or serve directly over chicken.

Chicken A La Kiev

2 whole chicken breasts, split and boned
Salt
Monosodium glutamate
White pepper
½ tbsp. minced shallots
¼ tbsp. chopped chives
1-3 cup firm butter
Flour seasoned with salt and pepper
2 slightly beaten eggs
¾ cup bread crumbs
1½ cup clarified sweet butter
¼ tbsp. oil

Pound chicken breasts with a mallet until thin, being careful not to split the flesh. (Dip the mallet in ice water before each pounding.) Sprinkle the inside of each ½ breast with salt, Monosodium glutamate and white pepper. Combine shallots and chives. Cut butter lengthwise into 4 sticks. Place 1 tsp. of the shallot-chive mixture and 1 stick of butter on the long edge of each ½ chicken breast. Starting at the buttered edge tightly roll each portion, sealing the butter and rolling securely. Dip each portion lightly with seasoned flour, dip into beaten eggs and coat with bread crumbs. Heat clarified butter and oil and brown chicken breast quickly on all sides. Transfer browned portions to a shallow, oblong baking dish. Bake in a 350 deg. oven for about 25-30 min. or until chicken is tender. Drain on absorbent paper. Arrange on a heated platter and keep hot.

Sauce.

MORE PILLS

Working A Privilege for Some

By DORIS CLARK

At the consola of a sophisticated, computerized national credit check system for an American department store chain is a woman afflicted with cerebral palsy, who is so spastic she could never go shopping herself in the store whose vital affairs she monitors.

Persons who are "normal" (so-called), often get bored at their jobs with tedious, repetitive work. Not so the handicapped.

Here is a group," says Hank Viscardi, friend and inspiration of many grossly handicapped workers in the United States, "for whom to work is a privilege. Boredom is no factor in their daily lives. A moderately retarded worker may even enjoy talking to the machine he routinely operates. It is his friend and companion."

Isn't it great to hear about folk who consider it a privilege to be able to work?

* * *

Dear Doris: "Lonely", who is deaf, has a similar situation to mine. I also have a nerve deafness, like "Lonely", and I am also a nurse. I am employed yet but do not know how long I can go on.

I would like to write to "Lonely" if she would care to correspond. It sometimes helps to know someone else can really understand how you feel. Our only hope is a miracle through prayer. — Nerve Deafness.

Dear Deafness: I am passing your message on to "Lonely", so you will probably be hearing from her direct.

Miracles do happen through prayer; and there are some very human and helpful agencies which can help you to live with your deafness, and to figure out the resources and capacities you can still put to use.

Dear Doris: Our Canadian Holiday Horse Exchange lists homes from Victoria to Halifax. And there may be a few listings from countries outside Canada, as there were last year. The letters we received from those who made exchanges last year inspired us to carry one.

Since this is my hobby and I love doing it we can carry on without expecting a large financial reward. We have a diverse listing of homes and are hoping that this idea will appeal to the middle income group; especially that segment who can afford transportation but could not afford hotel bills.

There are a few problem areas; that is, places that are often requested where we have few or no members. P.E.I. is such a spot and so is the Okanagan Valley and Banff. I am sure your readers would appreciate knowing about it. — Georgina.

Dear Georgina: It is a tremendous idea. It means that people in one part of the country can get to some other part of the country quite different from their own, settle there for a few weeks and enjoy new scenery, new faces, new ideas. And all this without the tremendous expense of hotel bills for a family.

You are doing a great job for your two dollar fee. Further details will go to any reader writing the in care of this newspaper and enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Shopping at the Market (Stock, That Is)

"Moira Investments' first stock purchase was Loblaw's Groceteria.

What could be more natural for a group of housewives?

Formed seven years ago, Moira Investments was Belleville's first women's investment club.

"We're all housewives and I suppose we thought we'd start with something we were familiar with," says Mary Denton, current president of the 10-member club.

With an initial investment of $25 and a monthly investment of $10, the six original members of the partnership began by subscribing to a home study course from the Investment Dealers Association of Canada.

They borrowed a charter from a local men's investment club and called in a broker to advise them.

"Don't take it too seriously" was his advice, says Mary O'Flynn, a founding member and past president of the group.

"In fact our main purpose was to learn. By and large we were not a very knowledgeable group when it came to the stock market," Mrs. O'Flynn says.

Robin Jeffrey, now Mayor then a founding member of Moira Investments, actually kicked off the club over coffee with Mrs. Denton and Mrs. O'Flynn.

Speaker Laura Sabia had recently addressed Belleville's University Women and asked how many were members of investment clubs. No one raised their hand, but Robin Jeffrey was intrigued with the idea of a woman's investment club.

The group formed and members studied several companies. They bought Loblaw's and Shell warrants. Ironically, Mary O'Flynn says, they made money on Shell and lost on Loblaws.

With each monthly $10 investment, the members are buying a share of Moira Investments. The group (first at 10 members for convenience) picks a field or industry of interest and members do comparative reports on two or three firms within the industry.

Then they invest.

"We've tried to invest in everything — blue chips, first issues, unlisted stocks, junior industrials — we want a little bit of experience with everything," says Mrs. O'Flynn.

"Overall we haven't lost — we've made money," she adds.

And Mrs. Denton stresses, "We've certainly learned a lot."

"The biggest by-product is that you become aware of world events," she says, pointing out that political events, especially in the United States, affect the stock market.

"The biggest mystery has been to look at an annual report and understand it," says Mrs. O'Flynn.

To help overcome the problem an accountant has given the group how to read the reports as well as a company prospectus. A portfolio advisor for a securities firm addressed the group. They learned the Toronto Stock Market and a local industry, all to improve their knowledge of the stock market.

Our husbands are stunned when they see us reach for the Globe and Mail financial pages first, Mrs. O'Flynn says.

So far the news has been generally good.

"We've never invested a huge amount in one stock — we sold everything and taken a flyer," Mrs. Denton says.

They get advice from their broker, but, she adds, "we do not always listen".

Mrs. O'Flynn says the group has been "too conservative to have made any really bad investments," though they've bought some "penny" or low-price speculative stock on occasion.

"When we buy penny stock we form an action committee within the group to watch the stock closely and sell if necessary," Mrs. Denton says.

"We've never bought anything that slid right off the bottom."

Most information the women use comes from financial media, newspaper articles and the like.

But, as Mrs. O'Flynn says, "Somebody has a 'hot tip' at every meeting."

As a group — members include Vera Murphy, Maud Potter, Barbara Deacon, Miriam Bishop, Lois Wisbart and Lorelia Green as well as the mayor, Mrs. Denton and Mrs. O'Flynn — Moira Investments has encouraged other clubs to get under way and advises other women to "plunge right in".

They don't worry about their stock — "we're interested not anxious," Mrs. O'Flynn says — and take their profits in knowledge and experience as well as dollars.

"It's no ta burden," Mrs. Denton says. "That's the beauty of a 10-member club — you're not in there alone."

Mary O'Flynn, left, and Mary Denton, founding members of Moira Investments, Belleville's first women's investment club, study the financial pages. Their club brings the 10 members profits in dollars and in experience, the women say. Their first investment was in a grocery chain.

Progress Made By Truce Teams

SAIGON (CP) — Moving slowly through a continuing certain of Viet Cong, Canadian and other truce observers have edged into broader areas of agreement as Indonesia called on Saigon and Hanoi to stop their bickering to avoid "the tragic fate that might befall this commission."

Some indication that national differences are being put aside for the sake of progress came with the report that the commission hopes to open an investigation Wednesday into Communist allegations of renewed U.S. bombing in South Vietnam, its territory held by the Viet Cong.

The Canadian spokesman said a letter outlining the commission's conditions for conducting the inquiry is being sent to the two-part Joint Military Commission (JMC), composed of the Viet Cong and the Saigon administration.

With the Viet Cong agreeing to a Canadian demand that a safety air corridor be widened to five miles from four, an ICCS helicopter will fly Viet Cong representatives from Loc Ninh, 75 miles north of Saigon where the Communists set up their base, and has taken place. Loc Ninh, five miles from the Cambodian border, is the Viet Cong headquarters for the southern region.

At the instigation of the Canadians, the commission also has agreed to ask Saigon to allow the ICCS to visit areas where civilian detainees are held just prior to release.

The reason for the request appears to be concern over the conditions in which prisoners are held and a desire to make certain no detainees have been held back from release. The Canadian government has already expressed agreement.

Meanwhile, the Indonesian delegation urged member countries to set aside nationalist differences as more signs of dissension was reported in the commission.

Hungarians and Poles challenged the authority of the Canadians and Indonesians to forward reports to the JMC on investigations in which the two European states had not taken part.

After hours of haggling, the commission agreed such reports can be forwarded if the Hungarians and Poles are permitted to attach separate statements outlining their reasons for not taking part in an investigation.

The Indonesian statement, presented at a regular ICCS session, said three main problems facing the commission: differences were the result of the Paris agreement, the antagonistic attitudes of the parties to the accord and the "insufficient national interest of the member countries of the ICCS."

The statement said that when "negative elements of these differences are given a chance to come into play, we can be sure the question will be asked as to the necessity of our presence here. Let us hope this will not be the case."

"We have to find out, as far as our competence permits, every possible way to avoid the tragic fate that might befall this commission."

The Indonesians made no direct reference to the possibility of Canada deciding to withdraw from the ICCS at the end of this month but sources say they may have been hoping to forestall such a move.

"Mutual accusations between members of this commission will serve no purpose, but push this body into a quagmire of political embroilment, obscuring the true nature of the problems confronting the commission," the statement added in a clear reference to the division between the attitudes of the Poles and Hungarians and those of the Canadians and Indonesians.

U.S. Advances Million to ICCS

SAIGON (CP) — The United States government has agreed to advance $1 million to the financially-troubled international truce force, averting what many officials feared might be a serious military crisis.

Sources in the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) said today the South Vietnamese government is expected to match the U.S. contribution shortly.

Commission sources said the ICCS hopes to complete an interim budget before the end of this month and to draw up a formal spending estimate by the end of June.

Queen Sees Commonwealth Giving Chance to Break Bars

OTTAWA (CP) — The British Commonwealth provides practical opportunities to "break down the fences between peoples," Queen Elizabeth said in a Commonwealth Day message Monday.

"The Commonwealth is not for governments or statesmen alone. It is for the people, for all the people of the Commonwealth. And the Commonwealth will be what its people will it to be," she said to a message released by Government House.

The same message will be used June 2 in Great Britain when it celebrates the Queen's official birthday.

"The Commonwealth asks us to live up to its ideals of friendship and understanding. But it also provides us with practical opportunities to co-operate, to serve each other and to break down the fences between peoples. It calls for the interest, curiosity and concern of all of us and especially of the 400 million young people who are under 20.

"The challenges are ... very real and very demanding. If we fail to meet them, our successors will reflect sadly on a wonderful opportunity lost. If we succeed, we shall not only build a stronger and happier Commonwealth, but we shall also show that mankind is capable of living in peace and amity on a scale never achieved before."

Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener sent a short official birthday greeting to the Queen in return. She was born April 21, 1926, but was crowned June 2, 1952. The Canadian holiday originally commemorated the May 24 birthday of Queen Victoria 1819-1901.

Rich Union Nationale In Search of Program

QUEBEC (CP) — Two rival political factions met in Quebec province during the weekend, the one with the cash but only in the process of forming a political program, the other with the ideological context but short on money.

The Parti Quebecois convention in this provincial capital, separatist leader Rene Levesque announced that the party had rounded up $800,000 in a 45-day fund-raising drive to step towards eliminating money worries for this year.

In Montreal, meanwhile, the Union Nationale was working its way through a set of 600 resolutions aimed at giving the party its first fresh political philosophy since 1965.

Leader Gabriel Loubier would not say what his party's financial position was, except to refer to it smilingly as "very comfortable."

The party's coffers are generally supposed to be about $3 million, having been swelled by the sale of two turnstiles at the Quebec City and Montreal (which were former Union Nationale social clubs and by half of the party newspaper, Montreal-Matin).

The Quebec City meeting was described as a "peoples' festival" and attracted about 12,000 persons.

Burning Rectal Itch Is Relieved In Minutes

One of the most common afflictions is a condition known as "itching piles." It is not only embarrassing for the sufferer during the day and especially when trying to sleep at night.

If you want satisfactory relief—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance with the ability to promptly relieve the burning itch and pain. It actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing. In some cases, piles disappeared entirely. Doctors noted that complete relief was obtained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—developed by a world-renowned research institution. This substance is now obtainable in ointment or suppository form known as Preparation H. Ask for Preparation H Suppositories (convenient to carry if away from home) or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. ## New Report Links Saccharin, Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another report on the new federal report Monday suggested a possible link between cancer and saccharin, the only artificial sweetener remaining on the market since cyclamates was banned.

The Food and Drug Administration said it will not move against the sugar substitute due to a recommendation from the National Academy of Sciences.

Virgil Wodicka, director of FDA's bureau of foods, said the agency's two-year rat feeding studies show "unequivocal evidence" that saccharin caused cancerous bladder tumors in three of 48 rats fed saccharin as 7.5 per cent of their total diet.

"The first question we've posed to the academy is, 'Is it really cancer?'" Wodicka said. "Second, if it is cancer, 'Did saccharin induce it?'"

A six-member academy subcommittee on non-nutritive sweeteners plans to assemble again in mid-June.

Peterborough Plane Crashes

A Peterborough man remained in critical condition Monday following the crash of a home-made light plane on its maiden flight Sunday near Peterborough airport.

Joseph Rezac, 47, was in the intensive care unit of a Peterborough hospital with second and third-degree burns to 90 per cent of his body.

Police said the single-engined plane had just taken off early in the afternoon when it crashed and burned in dense swamp about 2,000 feet east of the end of the runway. It had been taxiing around in the airport for some time before it attempted to take off.

International Commerce Body Concerned Over World's Money

RIO DE JANEIRO (CP) — The long-standing problems of international monetary unrest and rising inflation were the underlying topics of concern Monday at the opening session of the International Chamber of Commerce.

About 1,300 world business leaders—including about 50 from Canada—are attending the week-long conference, held every two years.

Baron Hottinguer of France, president of the chamber, noted in his opening speech that there still is no clear idea of a replacement for the international monetary system which broke down during the past year or so.

Breakdown of the monetary system was followed with floating of many currencies and now there were pending trade negotiations.

"What is at stake in these negotiations is considerable," he said. "The aim is to undertake a genuine reform."

He said abandonment of fixed rates of exchange was regrettable from the standpoint of international trade, especially if they were allowed to float for long periods.

The September talks on trade liberalization, therefore, faced the danger of each part of the world, perhaps each country, withdrawing within itself.

"Protectionism can never be anything but a short-term remedy, and ultimately becomes a formidable obstacle causing harm both within and without national borders."

Baron Hottinguer said a new, more flexible and diversified international economic order must be established.

Private enterprise, he said, is the driving force in economic progress and must bear its share of responsibility in an effort to find a new international economic order.

Two Canadians were speakers at opening-day sessions.

F. W. Winser of Montreal, vice-president of Aluminum Co. of Canada, spoke of the need for streamlined documents and systems in international trade.

He said it was an anomaly that messages can be sent around the world in micro seconds and complicated rates and schedules can be computed in seconds, "and yet cargo is lying in warehouses and terminals awaiting delivery due to lack of information relating to the goods and their shipment."

J. W. Maix, vice-president (administration) for Massey-Ferguson Ltd., Toronto, spoke of the need for diversification of primary products in the developing countries.

He said private enterprise should concentrate on the "marketing approach," which has been instrumental in improving the quality and variety of food in developed countries.

"The marketing approach assures that the right product reaches the right market at the right time and under the right circumstances," he said.

"If this can be achieved, then diversification can provide for developing countries benefits of higher farm income and improved standard of living."

Stanfield For Easier Migration

EDMONTON (CP) — A Progressive Conservative government would make limitations on immigration and make it simpler for immigrants to assimilate into Canadian society, says Robert Stanfield.

Mr. Stanfield, national leader of the Conservative party, was speaking Sunday at the national convention of the Canadian Ukrainian Professional and Business Men's Clubs.

Notes for his speech were released in advance of delivery. As well as cleaning up "the mess and the conflicts that now exist in our immigration system," Mr. Stanfield also pledged a Conservative government to:

—Provide prospective and landed immigrants easier and fuller access to information on the rights and obligations in Canada.

—Investigate shortening the waiting period required for eligibility to become a citizen.

—Examine the possibility of making educational standards previously attained transferrable to Canada;

—Establish an independent national human rights commission to deal with all cases which the federal government has jurisdiction.

Mr. Stanfield said immigrants should be expected to learn one of the official languages — French or English—but added that "ample opportunity should be provided . . . and, thereafter, for acquiring other educational credits or skills."

In this same regard, he said all citizens, native-born or naturalized, should have full and equal right, status and opportunities.

Two Survive

NEW WATERFORD, N.S. (CP) — Two whimpering children huddled in a cupboard beneath the kitchen sink were the only survivors of a fire that took the lives of five of their brothers and sisters here early Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Longphee were out when the blaze erupted. Five of the seven children between six and 15 years of age died.

Monroe Dead

STUART, Fla. (AP) — Vaughn Monroe, 63, the bandleader and singer who rose to prominence in the 1940s with the theme song Racing with The Moon, died Monday in a hospital here.

Koney Dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Marshal Ivan Koney, the Soviet Union's celebrated Second World War commander who later became involved in Kremlin intrigues, has died at 75, Tass reported Monday. He had risen from private to commander of joint armed forces of the Warsaw pact states. As commander of the front south of Berlin in 1945, Koney had a role in taking the Nazi capital. But another hero, Marshal Georgy Zhukov accepted the German surrender and got much of the credit for the victory. In 1957, when Premier Nikita Khrushchev ousted Zhukov as minister of defence, Koney said he was the real hero of Berlin.

Taxes Cut

TORONTO (CP) — Homeowners across Metropolitan Toronto this year will enjoy property tax cuts ranging from $6.25 to $27, a survey of budget plans in the six boroughs shows.

EUGENE WHELAN

Under Fire

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — Jeremy Akerman, provincial New Democratic Party leader, has called for the resignation of federal Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan for what he called misleading the public.

Mr. Akerman, in a statement issued from his home here Sunday, said Mr. Whelan is protecting the real culprits in the controversy over rising food prices.

"By forging an artificial division between farmer and consumer, Mr. Whelan is, in effect, protecting the packing and supply sector," he said.

Mr. Whelan is travelling the country "like an old medicine man spreading confusion, distortion and dissension," he said, and is using a false proposition — that food "is too cheap" — to explain rising prices.

Cheese for All

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The Iroquois of the nearby Six Nations reserve celebrated Queen Victoria's birthday Monday by giving out 500 loaves of bread and 1,500 pounds of cheese. The distribution to all those attending the celebration dates from the reign of Queen Victoria when she gave money to the Six Nations to buy bread and cheese as a token of her appreciation for their loyalty during the United States War of Independence. When the money stopped with the Queen's death, the Indians carried on the tradition with their own funds.

Skydiver Dies

SIMCOE (CP) — A 16-year-old youth, whose father is the instructor at the local skydiving club here, died Saturday night when his parachute failed.

Anthony Victor Borghese of Guelph was skydiving with four other club members at Simcoe airport. His father, Victor, was on the scene at the time.

A companion, who left the aircraft before the victim, said he saw the youth's parachute open.

Police said the parachute apparently did not open properly and his second parachute, which skydivers are required to wear by law, did not open at all. The youth had made more than 100 jumps.

Overpaid

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Stuart and Jane Nilsson, a vacationing New Zealand couple, took 20,000 Japanese yen to change at a bank here and were startled to be handed tens of thousands of Fiji dollars.

They expected to receive only 98 Fiji dollars—about $106—in return, but they estimated they were given $4,000 Fiji dollars or about $104,000.

A bank spokesman said the amount given to the couple in error was "not anything like $4,000 Fiji dollars," but refused to say how much was. He said the teller mistook the yen for Hong Kong dollars and used the wrong exchange rate.

Four Slain

LONDON (CP) — A Canadian family of four, formerly of Richmond Hill, Ont., near Toronto, was found shot to death Sunday in their Wimbledon apartment.

All had been shot through the head and police said a pistol was found clutched in the hand of the father, Dutch-born Abraham (Van) Van Der Host, 48.

His wife, Monique, 40, and Canadian-born adopted children, Mark, 13, and Caroline, 12, had been killed in their beds.

Investigators at the scene of the shooting said the family had been dead for about two days. No other person is being sought in connection with the incident, they said.

Ersatz Tobacco

LONDON (AP) — A British cigarette company announced Monday it will soon be marketing a partial substitute for tobacco to make its products safer.

Anthony Garrett, chairman of Imperial Tobacco Co., said his firm and Imperial Chemical Industries spent seven years and about $8.3 million in joint research on the substitute, called new smoking material (NSM).

The search was prompted in part by a government ban on good-quality tobacco in the world.

NSM, however, will only replace about 30 per cent of the tobacco in each cigarette, Garrett told a news conference, and government permission for the additive still must be obtained.

Body Found

OTTAWA (CP) — The body of John MacDonald, 21, of Kingston, Ont., was found Saturday on the shore of the Ottawa River near the Rockcliffe boathouse.

Police sent the body to the provincial forensic laboratory in Toronto for examination to see no cause of death was immediately apparent.

Annoyed

REDDING, Calif. (Reuter) — Gerald Bishop, 42, was so angry because Bruce Pretzinger, 21, lost a baseball game he pumped 17 rifle bullets into his television set.

The bullets went through the walls of his mobile home and penetrated the walls of a house 300 yards down the road.

Lulu Jorgenson, in her 70s, was at home knitting and watching television when bullets began whizzing round the room.

After his arrest, Bishop asked policeman John Grimes: . . .

"Haven't you ever wanted to shoot your TV set?"

Ship Aground

MASSENA, N.Y. (AP) — Three tugboats worked Monday at freeing a 730-foot Canadian ship that ran around in the St. Lawrence seaway and slowed traffic on the waterway.

Plane Safe

CARACAS (AP) — A hijacked Venezuelan airliner returned safely to Caracas Sunday night with 25 passengers and five crew members despite reports the government's refusal to ransom it with 70 prisoners.

Three armed men and a woman took over the twin-engine Convair Friday night on a domestic flight to the capital. They threatened to blow up the plane and all aboard unless the government freed the 70 persons the hijackers said were political prisoners. But when the government refused even to negotiate, the hijackers settled for a flight to Havana.

Mixed Day

Temperatures are expected to vary from below normal in parts of Prairies, according to the 36a day weather forecast of the U.S. Weather Bureau. Precipitation is however expected to be moderate to light for most of the country with heavy precipitation expected in Maritimes. This is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. (CP Newsmap)

Police Arrest 80 Motorcyclists

LA SARRE, Que. (CP) — Police arrested about 30 persons here early Sunday following a night-long clash between police and about 80 motorcyclists in the streets of this community of 3,345 miles northwest of Montreal.

A provincial police spokesman said the clash began Saturday evening when the motorcyclists, from La Sarre and neighboring towns, began blocking traffic, breaking beer bottles in the streets and intimidating passers-by.

The municipal police and the La Sarre provincial police detachment called in reinforcements and blocked all roads leading to the town.

The 30 arrested were charged with resisting arrest, drunkenness or disturbing the peace.

LONG POINT, Ont. (CP) — Provincial police, reinforced by out-of-town officers, were called to Long Point Provincial Park Sunday to evict 75 to 100 young people from the area. . . .

A police spokesman said no arrests were made and no significant damage was caused.

McCord Will Resume Watergate Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — James McCord returns today to the Senate Watergate investigation and a possible clash with the man he says assured him President Nixon stood behind an offer of executive clemency.

McCord testified under oath last Friday that the offer was made by John Caulfield, a former White House law-enforcement adviser, and was intended to buy silence.

Caulfield follows McCord at the witness table in the Senate Caucus Room and will get a chance to repeat his denial that he ever mentioned Nixon's name in making a clemency offer.

McCord, the convicted electronics and bugging expert of the Watergate burglary team, has been asked by senators to tell all he knows of Watergate.

The big Watergate question remains that of any presidential involvement and it was tackled Monday in several other forums:

—The Senate foreign relations committee was told former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman used the words, "it is the president's wish," telling the CIA deputy director to move to block one phase of the FBI investigation into the case. The testimony came from L. Gen. Vernon Walters, the CIA deputy director.

—Former FBI acting director Patrick Gray was quoted in still another memo prepared by Walters as saying Gray told the deputy director he advised Nixon shortly after the Watergate break-in June 17 that the case "could not be covered up." that it would lead to top staff members and that all involved should be fired.

The memo's text was broadcast by NBC news. The White House repeatedly has denied the president had advance knowledge of the Watergate burglary or knew of the alleged coverup.

The Senate armed services committee was told Nixon's name was on a list of those to receive a secret 1970 intelligence plan which is reported to have authorized the CIA and the defence department to open espionage operations inside the United States with "no limits on the amount of burglary" that could be undertaken.

Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.-Mo.) said the plan was never put into action and that it had met vigorous opposition from J. Edgar Hoover, the late FBI direction.

A White House spokesman said that on the basis of news stories there appeared to be inaccuracies in the account given the committee in closed session by the plan's author, former White House aide Tom Charles Huston, now an Indianapolis lawyer.

Meanwhile, Richard Helms, former CIA director, hinted strongly he had not sought and did not particularly want Nixon to assign him as U.S. ambassador to Iran, the post he now holds.

Helms said he believes he could have served better by staying at his CIA post and concentrating on keeping the agency out of the Watergate affair.

Pipeline Project Would Disturb Market for Labor

OTTAWA (CP) — A natural gas pipeline along the Mackenzie Valley could prove a substantial unsettling operation, says the draft of a report to the federal government.

"Any employment impact of pipeline construction will be temporary only. Unless other projects requiring similar labor skills were developed at an appropriate time construction of the pipeline would have a destabilizing effect on a playment trends in the economy."

The report, marked confidential but made public today was prepared by the economic impact committee of the Task Force on Northern Oil Development established by the government in December, 1968.

The report, prepared under the direction of H. G. R. Taylor of the finance department, is dated Oct. 5, 1972.

Accepting that oil discovered on the North Slope in Alaska will be transported down the west coast to U.S. refineries, the report concludes that Alaskan and Canadian northern gas will be transported south through a Mackenzie Valley pipeline.

But, it warns, "most, if not all of the natural gas transported by the pipeline will be marketed in the U.S."

At the same time, "Because 99 per cent of the pipeline will be built through Canada, almost all of its long-term social and environmental costs will be borne by Canadians."

As a point of reference, the report says that while Alaska can be expected to realize about $300 million a year from "production of its oil pipeline at peak production, the Canadian government can expect to realize only $73 million annually from the proposed Mackenzie Valley gas line.

And while the intense activity will produce local inflation in the West where the line is being built and in Central Canada where the heavy hardware can be expected to be produced, other areas probably will experience light economic conditions.

The report projects that the pipeline, if let contracted between 1975 and 1978 and at peak production by 1980, would cost between $4 billion and $5 billion to construct.

Bid Made to Speed Monetary Reforms

WASHINGTON (CP) — World financial experts have decided to try to speed discussions on world monetary reform by setting up smaller study groups to look at some of the difficult issues involved in creating a new international monetary system, conference sources said Monday.

The experts form the Committee of 20 deputies, which represents the interests of all 125 members of the International Monetary Fund (IMF).

They are charged with providing the world's finance ministers with technical guidance on reforming the old financial system which collapsed in 1971 when President Nixon divorced the United States dollar from gold.

For five days this week they are concentrating on trying to draft an outline of a plan to reform the international monetary system.

No Sign of Early Decision In Debate on Death Penalty

OTTAWA (CP) — The long Commons debate on capital punishment resumes today with no sign of an early decision.

Since its introduction in January, the legislation to reverse the five-year partial ban on the death penalty has taken up seven days of debate with dozens of members still waiting to speak.

Party spokesmen say there are at least 30 Conservatives yet to speak, plus an undetermine number of Liberals and New Democrats. About half of the 16-member Social Credit caucus is also waiting.

The bill, yet to receive second reading, would reintroduce the ban on the death penalty for all but murderers of policemen and prison guards. The previous ban expired Dec. 29.

While the list of speakers might be shortened by party agreement, negotiations so far have not produced a solution for speeding the debate.

Two days of debate on the bill are scheduled this week—today and Wednesday. Government sources say the issue will be dropped until late June or early July if the legislation does not receive second reading in that time.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin suggests the government may change its mind and let the debate continue if it appears second reading could be reached by the end of the week.

All parties expect a close vote a nthe bill. As in 1967, when the first ban was adopted, a free vote is scheduled. The 1967 vote was 105 to 70.

If it passes second reading and goes to the justice committee a number of members will attempt amendments, including those who favor total retention or total abolition of the death penalty.

From there, the bill would return to the House for third reading, and the showdown vote.

A number of MPs who favor retention have indicated they are willing to let the bill go to committee. But they would vote against it on third reading if it remains unchanged.

The bill is just one of several contentious matters the government wants settled before Commons adjournment, expected at the end of June.

Others include the long-awaited corporate tax reductions, a resolution on bilingualism, electoral boundaries changes, coins-and-stamps financing legislation for the 197 Montreal Olympics and amendments dealing with immigration, family allowances and the Canada Pension Plan.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen says the government is prepared to sit into July to get the legislation through.

Both Mr. Baldwin and NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles agree that unless significant inter-party agreements are reached, it may have to.

Hees Says Canada's Reputation Is Low

BRUSSELS (CP) — George Hees, a former Progressive Conservative cabinet minister, says Canada's reputation among NATO countries "just couldn't be lower."

The quality and reputation of Canadian troops in Europe are high, Hees said. But Canada's "unilateral" cut of its forces in Europe four years ago "is very much resented."

"If everyone had followed our lead, there'd be no collective security," said the member of Parliament for Prince Edward-Hastings who was the Canadian representative at sessions of the North Atlantic assembly's military committee.

All this puts Canada in an impossible position when there is talk of European NATO countries being subjugated to do more to defend the West, the former trade minister said in an interview Sunday.

Liberal MPs, however, came away from weekend meetings with different impressions. The sessions brought together various committees of the assembly, an organization of parliamentarians from the 15 NATO countries.

Five Persons Killed By Memphis Rifleman

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — "I guess he just cracked," said William Edward Farmer Jr. "He knew my father—knew him well. We had been children together."

Farmer's father was one of four persons killed in Memphis Monday by a gunman who sprayed rifle bullets without warning along a quiet residential street. The man also killed a police officer before he was forced from a house by tear gas and shot to death.

Authorities said the gunman, identified as David Sanders, 30, was sauntering down the street with a lever-action .30-30 rifle when he suddenly whirled and shot to death four neighborhood residents. Four other persons were wounded as the gunman fired at passing autos.

CBS Dominates Emmy Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Television's biggest success of the season, The Waltons, and its most glamorous failure, The Julie Andrews Hour, dominated the 25th annual Emmy Awards presentations.

The Waltons, the CBS story of a rural Virginia family during the Depression, won six awards Sunday night—including best dramatic series, best actor, for Richard Thomas; best actress, for Michael Learned; and best supporting actress, for Ellen Corby.

Miss Andrews's show, cancelled by ABC because of low ratings, picked up seven awards, including best musical variety series and a number for technical aspects. Miss Andrews was reported abroad during the moment of triumph at the Shubert Theatre.

Norman Campbell of the CBC won his second Emmy in three years for his production of the ballet The Sleeping Beauty, The 90-minute color program won as outstanding single program in the field of classical entertainment. Another Emmy went to director Bill Davis' formerly of Toronto, for his work on the Julie Andrews Show.

There was whooping and laughing as he rushed to the stage during the telecast, on ABC, said: "While trying to think of something to say if I won, I destroyed my car."

Later, he explained he had wrecked his small foreign car while en route to the theatre.

Michael Learned, whose role as The Waltons's late first television appearance in the U.S., said: "I'm delighted. I'm thrilled. I was so busy crying and clapping for Richard Thomas, I almost didn't hear my name."

In the annual network rivalry, CBS won 25 awards, followed by ABC with 22. NBC won 10, and the Public Broadcasting System has 3 each.

Sunday's awards were for entertainment programs and achievement. News and documentary awards will be presented tonight in a ceremony in New York.

Laurence Olivier was named outstanding actor in a single performance for ABC's Long Day's Journey Into Night, and Cloris Leachman was named outstanding actress for an ABC Movie of the Week, A Brand New Life. Both also are Oscar winners.

The CBS movie, A War of Children, a portrayal of the Belfast Protestant-Catholic conflict in Northern Ireland, was named outstanding single dramatic program.

Scott Jacoby, 16, was named best supporting actor in a drama for the ABC movie That Certain Summer, in which he played a youth trying to cope with his father's homosexuality.

Mary Tyler Moore was named best actress in a comedy, and two performers on her The Mary Tyler Moore Show, Ted Knight and Valerie Harper, were named best supporting players.

Miss Moore had said earlier she had been practising her open "perennial loser's smile" and said backstage after the presentation: "I'm really surprised."

The Emmy from the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences for best comedy went for the third year to All in the Family. "I didn't think we'd win again," said producer Norman Lear. Not that we don't deserve it.

"When Mary Moore and two on her show won, I thought it would go that way."

Jack Klugman, co-star of The Odd Couple, was named the best comedy actor for his portrayal of a sloppy sportswriter. He won for the same role in 1971.

Another major winner was Liza with a Z. The NBC special starring Liza Minnelli was named best single variety show. It previously won a Peabody award.

When Emmy presenter David Frost read the name of the winner for best variety, he said with "He's done it again." He was referring to Bob Fosse, producer-director and choreographer of the Liza show.

So far this year, Fosse has won the Peabody, two Tonys for Broadway's Pippin and an Oscar for directing Cabaret.

America, the 13-part television on the United States by Alistair Cooke, was named the outstanding new series. The show, also a Peabody winner, was produced by the BBC.

Another BBC show, Town's Schooldays, was named outstanding limited series. Its star, Anthony Murphy, was named best actor in a limited series.

Susan Hampshire, who has won two Emmys previously, was named best actress in a limited series, the BBC's Vanity Fair. Both series were aired on Masterpiece Theatre on PBS.

Tim Conway was selected best supporting player in a variety show for an appearance on the Carol Burnett Show.

Emmys for outstanding children's programming went to Sesame Street: Zoom; the writers for the Electric Co.; he ABC Afterschool Special, the Last of the Curlews; and to Shari Lewis for A Picture of Us.

In sports, Emmys went to ABC's Wide World of Sports for its coverage of the Olympics at Munich, to ABC commentator Jim McKay for the Olympics and to the videotape editor for the Olympics coverage for ABC.

The Sleeping Beauty of PBS was named the outstanding classical music program.

In daytime programming, Emmys were presented to The Edge of Night and Dinah's Place, starring Dinah Shore.

Lloyd Bochner Would Like To Produce Film in Canada

HOLLYWOOD (CP) — Lloyd Bochner, if you count the years from his first appearance on CBC Radio, has been an actor for almost 40 years, and now he'd like to produce a film in Canada.

He has the story and the locale lined up. He thought he had the finances arranged. But he has run into snags on both sides of the border that make it difficult for him to proceed.

Without giving any secrets away, Bochner talked about his film idea over lunch on the terrace of Frascati's Restaurant on Sunset Boulevard. It would be shot in the mountains of Alberta and British Columbia, an outdoors drama.

But a recent Canadian government ruling has coupled with labor-union agitation here to now make it difficult for him to proceed.

Bochner made his radio network debut at the age of 11 in Toronto and before and after a stint in the Royal Canadian Navy and at the University of Toronto, where he graduated in sociology, he was a busy actor.

A list of the shows he has been in reads like a catalogue of the dramatic arts in Canada and the U.S.: radio, television and on the stage: the Stratford, Ont., Shakespearean Festival, G.M. Nicholas, Kraft Theatre, Studio One, Sonanza, Hawaii Five-O, the Richard Boone Repertory Theatre, Sunday at Nine. He usually plays the "heavy."

He proudly calls himself a professional Canadian actor and is generally acknowledged as the leader of the Canadian community here. Hollywood, though that community is only a loosely knit group. Many Canadians come here and immediately merge into the great melting pot.

But it galls Bochner a bit to find now, when he has a good idea for a film about Canada to be made in Canada, new difficulties have been thrown in his way.

The chief difficulty is a ruling by the national revenue department in Ottawa changing the way in which movie-makers have been able to write off part of their expenses against revenue for tax purposes.

The new capital-cost allowances have been generous—perhaps too generous, in the opinion of some politicians. The ruling severely restricts the write-offs.

This has hurt the movie-production industry in Canada and the government says it is having another look at the ruling. A modification may be made.

Bochner says the ruling penalizes people who want to make films in Canada. It now would be easier for them to make his film in Idaho or Washington state.

But, being a professional Canadian in Hollywood, as he says, he really doesn't want to do that.

Showbiz Shorts

LONDON (Reuter) — Rumors of romance between Lisa Minnelli and Peter Sellers appeared on the front pages of British newspapers Monday after Miss Minnelli said there were problems in her friendship with actor Desi Arnaz Jr.

Asked Sunday about the situation, Miss Minnelli promised a full announcement soon on her relationship with Arnaz, but denied there was a romance with Sellers.

"He's a charming, exuberant, marvellous man. I've been a fan of his for years . . . but he's nothing more than a friend."

Sellers, separated from his third wife Miranda, was asked about his reports of an Arnaz apartment.

"I simply cannot say anything," he said. "You'll know about it tomorrow.

"Actually I'm playing married to Spike Milligan.

Milligan is a comedian who was associated with Sellers in the now-defunct Goon Show.

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — High wire performer Vincente Cardoul, 25, died Monday of injuries suffered Friday when he fell 20 feet to the concrete floor of Brown County Arena.

Vincente, a native of Venezuela, suffered critical cerebellar injuries in the circus act he had been performing for five years without previous injury.

A spokesman said Cardoul, performing with the Zoppe family high wire troupe in the Shrine Circus, apparently lost his grip while hanging by his hands from a tightrope. The force of his fall threw him across the arena.

No Evidence Farmers Hurt by Tariff Cuts

OTTAWA (CP) — There still is no evidence that tariff cuts announced in the Feb. 19 budget have hurt domestic farmers and ranchers, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says.

But he reiterates that if that evidence does appear, the government can slap protective walls back up as quickly as it removed them.

Beef and pork, as well as a range of horticultural products, were allowed into the country either at reduced tariffs or free following the budget and farmer s complained that resulting increases in imports threatened their industry.

A three-cent-a-pound import tariff on beef was dropped as was a five-cent-a-pound tariff on pork.

U.S. tariffs on Canadian beef remain and the Canadian Cattlemen's Association has complained that this one-way free trade could adversely affect exports to the U.S.

And while the tariff cuts on horticultural products apply only during out-of-season periods, the Horticultural Council of Canada says they could hurt. Canned Canadian goods now must compete in the off-season with low-priced imports.

It has been suggested that Finance Minister Turner cann re-impose the tariffs until the have been approved by Parliament. But Mr. Whelan says he's sure "Turner can walk into the House right now" and re-estab lish the tariffs if there is any evidence farmers are being hurt.

"But we have not had that real evidence yet," he said in a recent interview.

Bank Robber Escapes

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Police throughout the lower Fraser Valley area spent the Victoria Day holiday Monday on the lookout for escaped bank robber John McCann.

McCann, 25, made a break from the B.C. penitentiary here mainland area, police throughout B.C. and adjoining Washington state were asked to be on the lookout for McCann, believed to be armed, possibly with a rifle.

The broadcasts over police radios said McCann was carrying a rifle-type weapon and had blood on his hands, apparently from scratches or cuts suffered in scaling the fence.

Track Talk

Trenton's Sam Klemencic (left) talks shop with Hugh Wemp, driver of his 5-year-old pacer Zorro Grattan and Junior West (right) driver of Canal View Way in the seventh at Monday's Quinte Exhibition Raceway 10 race card.

Raceway Results

Hugh Wemp trains 18 horses, but the 5-year-old horse entered in the ninth race at the Quinte Exhibition Raceway on the first holiday Monday card, didn't come by where the driver expected him to.

Wemp however picked the horse to beat — Muddy John, but his own charge, Zorro Grattan ended his role in the fourth position after having placed second in a 2:46.4 photo finish with Keystone Actor at Freetown Downs Wednesday. Muddy John took the ninth in 2:10.2.

After having won 98 of over 400 starts last season, Wemp has paced 19 this season in 1973. "I don't know how I got that many races in," said Wemp. But he has had enough time in the sulky to place second as one of North America's leading percentage drivers.

Wemp credited his win total to the quality of the stock, saying that a horse that makes the driver look good, but every one of the others don't get tougher. They're going faster."

Speaking of Zorro Grattan, one of three Wemp trains for Trenton owner Sam Klemencic, the driver said, "sometimes he creates a little on you. He can go a little more than he does. He's a good actor."

However, Wemp said when he is putting out, Zorro Grattan races better on the 5/8-mile track like Kingston's. "He's got more room then."

Though Wemp did not have as successful an afternoon as he had hoped, taking his only other charge, McPride, to a sixth place finish in the $2,000 Corbyville driver Al Vance drove two winners as well as placing his own 4-year-old mare Peaches to show in the fifth.

Vance drove Cecil Hutchenson's mare Beverly's Jane to a first in the opening outing of the 10 race card while pacing Billy Direct to the 4-year-old's second win over the holiday weekend. Vance inserted the oval with the gelding in 2:11.0 Friday at the Raceway.

Blue Gusto, driven by Sam Mulholland, also pulled into the winner's circle for the second time in four days in the second race, while King Lester driven by Ed Weeks won his first of the year after showing Friday in the seventh featured quinella.

Prior Excells in Meet Here

By AL ZABAS
Sports Writer

It would be ill-advised to mess about with the likes of Russell Prior, a 237½-pound Hamilton lifter, who is anything but a weakling.

The Hamilton Weightlifting Club member is now the Ontario Senior Weightlifting champion, as well as the Commonwealth champion in the snatch and the clean and jerk 342 pound class.

Prior competed in the Ontario Senior Weightlifting Championships and World Trials held at Moirs Secondary Saturday and came out of the competition with a pounds lifted total of 760-230 in the snatch and 430 in the clean and jerk.

His total was 80 pounds over the national standard and certainly makes him eligible for the World Championships to be held in Cuba in September.

Breaking provincial records he himself set with 225 for the snatch and 415 for the clean and jerk, Prior was shed a mere 80 pounds, as pounds go, from the world record set by Russia's Jan Talts in the latter lift.

In Prior's weight class, the Belleville Apollo Bar-Bell Club had two entries, brothers Bob and Gary Wall, but neither could match the lifting power of the Hamilton champion.

Gary Wall, who has had trouble with his knees over the years, according to his coach-Ken Carr-Brant, lifted a total of 670 pounds for an earn a third place finish behind brother Bob. The 242½ lifter snatched 290 while hoisting 330 in the clean and jerk to total up 680 worth of poundage.

Art Wall, lifting in the 198 pound class, ran into difficulty with his thigh muscles that resulted in his being scratch of the required Canadian standard for qualification for the World Championships.

"On his way up in the recovery of the clean, Art pulled some muscles in his thigh," said Carr-Brant who is one of Canada's Olympic coaches.

"This caused some minor separation of muscles."

Despite Art's difficulty, he still managed to win his class over Peterborough's Gary Bennett and Hamilton's Earl Jack. Art snatched 290 while in the clean and jerk 350 pounds left the mat.

Speaking of the members of the Apollo club, coach Carr-Brant commented that as a small club of 53 members, the Belleville chapter of the Ontario Weightlifting Association presented a respectable showing in the 24 lifter Ontario Senior Championships.

Of seven lifters entered in five weight categories, three won their respective lifting class. As each lifter must meet the standard set for his weight class by the OWA, is not minimal.

Jim and Bill Blight both of Weston will also paddle one-man canoe slalom.

The one-man kayak downriver squad is Harry Henrick of Millgrove, Don Irvine and Henri Bureaud of Edmonton, Alta.

In the kayak slalom class is Eric Munshaw of Weston, Reg DeBuristte of Toronto, Jan Stary of Montreal, Raymond Potvin of Montreal, Henri Bureaud, and Gilles Fortin of Montreal.

Paddling two-man canoe will be Ken Johnson of Mississauga and Rick Hobbs of Weston.

Canadian Olympic coach Heinz Poenn, who made the announcement following the weekend of races said he would be happy if the team broke into the top 10 in European competition. Winner of the weekend races and winner Ontario White Water Slalom Champion is Reg DeBuristte.

"They need a lot of shaping and practice before they will be ready," said Poenn.

Cost for each team member will be $1,500 for the month in Europe unless the Canadian government funds the trip. While in Europe the team will practice eight hours a day and attend at least two high calibre competitions before the world championships. The team will tour Italy, Austria and possibly Czechoslovakia during training.

Belleville Bobcats

Pride Hurts Less During Jr. Playoffs

By AL ZABAS
Staff Sportswriter
(Thirteenth of Series)

Though Joey Edwards was injured in the first Bobcats' pre-season practice, in the playoff opener against Kingsborough, the defenceman's pride was hurt less than his leg.

After receiving stitches in his upper lip and affixing a mask to his helmet for protection, Edwards was on the ice that night, but after two games he said, "to hell with the mask and the stitches, that's one thing.

"You're a born loser when you're wearing that thing," said the 17 - year - old Western Tyro after taking. "you can't see the puck when it's in your face without putting your head down. I had to turn my whole upper body to see anything at the sides, so going into the corners was killer's row."

After the first three games of the playoffs, Edwards said he lost his confidence. "but it wasn't the hit that made me lose it, I didn't get played as regularly, and I still don't know why."

As several other former Western Tire Juveniles had said before him, Edwards said that the one man who was a great builder of his confidence was coach Lou Senke.

"After learning the fundamentals while playing novice and peewee, Edwards was taught some of the finer points of defence and offence.

"Lou told me always to

JOEY EDWARDS
. . . sorely bitten

have two plays in your head," said Edwards, "so that if you see that one isn't going to work you've got another one to fall back on.

"He told me to take my time, not to rush things. He got me to play back to the forwards, but still have enough confidence to play offensively. He helped to make me into a hockey player."

Now that he has taught me about all that he can," Edwards said he will be trying out for a slot as a full-time Cat in the expanded Major WHA.

If he does make the team, he will be playing in what he considers to be an easier league. "I didn't feel any difficulty playing juvenile and junior," said Edwards, "though it is a little easier to play in junior."

"Players play their positions, as far as I'm concerned, there's nothing worse than forwards four guys around the net in front of you."

The Record Lift

With his third attempt at the 330 pound snatch, Hamilton's Russell Prior broke his own record of 325 pounds and set a new Ontario, Canadian and Commonwealth record at the Ontario Weightlifting Championships and World Trials held at Moirs Secondary Saturday. Prior also bettered his previous set mark in the clean and jerk for a total of 760 pounds in the 242 weight class.

Commercial Pitchers Sharp

A pair of 2-0 shutouts got the Belleville Commercial Softball League under way Monday at Victoria Park. Trenton Augger Men's Wear blanked Ellis Junkers in the first game of the twin bill and in the nightcap, Robins Construction held Howard and Robert Printing scoreless.

Trenton picked up both its runs in the bottom of the first inning. With one out, Roger Drake drew a walk. Wally Gill given up by losing pitcher Ron Hill and a pair of passed balls moved the runner over to third. Drake scampered home after the catch on a sacrifice fly ball off the bat of Al Ferguson.

Winning pitcher George Ferguson and battery mate Larry Mavety teamed up for the second run. Mavety connected for a two-out single and rode home on Ferguson's double.

The Juniors' Hill was sharp from that point on. He retired 13 in a row before Trenton third baseman Joe Theriault got to him for a single in the sixth. Theriault was cut down when he was caught between first and second on a relay from centre fielder Glenn Carleton to first sacker Stake Campbell.

With two away in the sixth, Al Ferguson banged a single but Hill logged his final out by getting Mavety on a hold to centre.

George Ferguson had a perfect game going after five complete innings. The Trenton right-hander mowed down the 15 men he faced in order. But after five, it suggested he was developing some soreness in the arm.

Scott Reid came on to pitch the final two innings and gave up the Juniors' lone hit to Dale Akey, the first man he faced. An error moved Akey over to third but he died there as Reid fanned Dave Dolan and John Romano and got Brian Garieny on a ground ball to third.

Ferguson struck out six and walked none while firing no-hit ball for five. Reid gave up one hit, fanned two and walked one.

Hill was touched for four hits. He retired seven on third strikes and walked only one.

In the late game, the issue was not decided until the ninth inning when Robins put together hits by Steve Ling, Ralph Plante and Paul Goodfellow combined with two Howard and Robert errors for the two runs.

That outburst broke up a tight pitching duel between the winners' Ted Waste and Howard and Robert lefty Mike Ethier. Each had a three-hit shutout going after five. Waste struck out five and walked out. Ethier had to settle for a five-batter in defeat.

Waste claimed 11 strikeout victims and walked two. Ethier struck out eight batters passed seven and walked one."

Robins' Steve Ling's stakes pair singles. Dave Akey and Dale Duval added one each to those efforts by Ling, Plante and Goodfellow.

Meanwhile Dwight Rathwell was the only player in the game to collect more than one safety. He had a double and a single in a losing cause.

The other losers of Robert-hits both singles, went to Larry Potter and Ken Generation.

T. Bailey Roofing Wins Ladies' Opener

Alderman Jean Smith pitched the first ball from the rubber at the Cheese Producers diamond to open the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League season Monday.

Not only did T. Bailey Roofing of Shannonville have the guiding hand of the Mayor's wife on the Recreation-Arena Committee on their side but also the whirl of Norg Barbeau-stock's wand as the directing factor in their 13-6 win over Bob Bland vs Red Barn.

Nora went the distance in using six walks and striking out eight batters to allow only six hits. Bland - Barn pitcher Suzanne Fobert, herself hitting a double, allowed 17 hits while walking six and striking out three.

Sharon Lumima earned the other double for the Belleville team while Sheryl Kelly, Sandra Rabain and Judy Sager hit singles.

Sluggers for the Shannonville team were Donna Bland with three doubles, Joan Watson with a triple and single, Debbie Reese connecting with a double and two singles and Evelina Hill with the same.

AOCO and Lenders Still Undefeated

Doug Boomhower and Gill Nesbit exchanged three runs' homers in Industrial Softball League play Monday, but their respective teams, AOCO and CNR, did not similarly end seven innings of play at the Corbyville Stadium second.

Despite CNR's six run rally at the top of the third, AOCO edged the visitors 10-9 to remain the only undefeated team, besides the Lenders, in ISL play.

Wally Hall, pitching four and a half innings for AOCO, combined hurling duties with Ron McCoy to allow nine hits with no walks and a single strike out. Performance - Edmund duties for CNR. Brian Plumb pitched four and a half for two hits, eight walks and five men left walking to the bench.

Both pitchers, Plumb and McCoy, hit triples while CNR's Barry Tamlin hit another for three bags and a single. Doubles for AOCO were smacked from the bat of Dennis Maher and Moe Brant, who also hit a single.

The other Industrial League games were tamer affairs, as least as far as the winners were concerned.

The Lenders won their third game of the season as they easily walked over Stewart Warner 11 - 0 after Jim Hen came in to relieve pitcher Fred Davis and gave up nine hits and eight runs in the sixth inning.

Mark Sheridan earned his keep with the Lenders with 11 men struck out in only 4½ lowing three bases on balls and two hits over a full seven innings.

Pitcher Doug Campbell went the distance, allowing four hits and nine runs to give the Independents their second win of the season and the third loss to Public Utilities.

Gary Mattier allowed 13 hits, saw four batters walk to first and struck out three to earn the 13-4 loss for PU.

Double hitters for Independents were Hunter Fournier, Wayne Craig, Paul Trumpour, George Piette and Dave Stelly.

Corby's 10-pin Event Draws 800 Entries

Over 800 bowlers from Ontario, Quebec and upper New York State vied for better than $3,000 in cash prizes in the seventh annual Corby's Handicap 10-pin Tournament which drew to a close Sunday at the Brunswick Bowl.

After four weekends of rolling, the bowlers have left for their respective cities and only the prize money has to be handed out.

But those in the entries who won can be paid their winnings, all averages listed by bowlers must be checked by their local city association secretaries, according to Ron Swatuk, manager of the Bowl.

"We have to check that the averages that they've given us are the right ones," said Swatuk, "if they're not then the bowler is automatically disqualified."

However, one team will not have to go far for verification. The men's team of Pat Glancey, Mick, Moreau, Stan Sawtelle, Ron Swatuk and Don Nugent. who comprised the Belleville Aces won the men's division of the 16-pin tourney. Once their averages are verified here in Belleville, they will receive a fair chunk of the prize money.

Ironically, the team was a pick-up team, one created to even out the rolling on the women's team side of the competition. In 3 competitions, a team generally prefers to bowl against another team, but since there were only 21 women's teams Swatuk had to form a team against which the ladies could compete.

That very team, oddly enough as Swatuk noted, won the tourney for Belleville for the fourth time in the tourney's seven year history.

On the women's side of the lanes, Toronto's Rollers took the team competition while Kingston's Betty Bawker and Dot Shangraw built up a 1256 score to win in the doubles' field.

Dot Shangraw also took the singles' crown with a high score of 689 over three games while Belleville's Frank Podrubesky rolled his way to victory with a 711 score.

Toronto's Carl Vanin took second place behind Podrubesky with one pin out of a tie while Frank Paropah rolled a 688 for London on third place while Ron Hesselgrave by Mayor Robin Jeffrey of London Day as far as bowling in Belleville.

Belleville's Bernie Balyk and Les Wynne teamed to take second in the men's doubles event, 14 pins ahead of fellow citizens Tony Pickard and George Malbranch.

In the women's singles competition, Pat Sawtuk earned second with 671, leading Barb Ward by two.

Mayor Robin Jeffrey rolled the first ball to open the final, weekend of bowling at the officially designated London Day in the seventh annual Corby's Handicap 10-pin Tournament at the Brunswick Bowl Saturday.

Moffitt Comes On To Get the Job Done

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When San Francisco Giants bring in reliever Randy Moffitt's game, set, match.

Moffitt, the second most successful athlete in his family—his sister is tennis star Billie Jean King—earned his eighth save of the National League baseball season Monday night, preserving San Francisco Giants' 9-4 victory over Houston Astros.

The nationally televised game was a bit on the loose side until Moffitt arrived on the scene and created some order out of the pitching chaos.

The young reliever allowed two hits in 3 1-3 innings work, nailing down the victory.

Pittsburgh Pirates nipped Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 in the only other National League game played. Chicago Cubs at Montreal Expos and St. Louis Cardinals at New York Mets were rained out.

In the only American League games scheduled, Boston Red Sox defeated Baltimore Orioles 4-1, Cleveland Indians battered New York Yankees 10-5 and Oakland blanked Kansas City Royals 5-0.

The Giants jumped out to a 5-0 lead, knocking out Houston starter Ken Forsch, in the first inning. By the sixth, that margin was down to 5-4, and when Astros loaded bases San Francisco starter Ron Bryant, Moffitt came out of the bullpen.

Billie Jean's brother, whose earned run average is a neat 1.35 in 20 games, got off the Astrs the rest of the way and the Giants put the game out of reach with the long blow.

Garry Maddox and Chris Speier ripped homers in the seventh and Ed Goodson added another in the ninth. Speier, who had a two-run triple in the first inning, drove in four runs with three hits.

The victory moved the Giants within five percentage points of first-place Houston in the National League West.

Pittsburgh wiped out a four-run deficit against Steve Carlton with homers by Willie Stargell and Manny Sanguillen and beat the Phillies on Richie Zisk's pinch single in the ninth.

Boston ended a four-game losing streak with Luis Tiant allowed Toronto only three hits. Luis Aparicio drove in two runs with a two-out, bases-loaded single in the seventh inning and Carl Yastrzemski doubled home two more in the ninth.

New York roughed up Gaylord Perry for four runs on five hits in the second inning, but Cleveland's ace survived the rally and the Indians came from behind and beat the Yankees.

Buddy Bell contributed four singles and George Hendrick had two singles and two-run homer for the Indians.

Jim "Catfish" Hunter scattered eight hits, pitching Oakland past Kansas City. Sal Bando had a pair of doubles, keying early rallies for the A's, and Deron Johnson added a two-run homer in the eighth.

All three National League doubleheaders played Sunday were split. The Padres downed the Reds 2-1, then lost 3-2; the Expos defeated the Cardinals 4-1, then lost 7-2 and the Braves edged the Dodgers 3-2, then lost 8-3.

The Astros edged the Giants in the day's only single game, while rain prevented Chicago from playing at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh from playing at New York.

On Saturday, Pittsburgh topped New York 4-1, Cincinnati swamped San Diego 10-4, Houston edged San Francisco 2-1 and Chicago and Philadelphia divided a doubleheader, the Phillies winning the first 3-0, then losing 7-6.

Atlanta and Los Angeles were stopped by rain after 12 innings, while Montreal and St. Louis were rained out.

On Sunday, the Yankees swept a pair from the Indians, 4-2 and 7-3. The Brewers beat the Tigers 1-0, then lost their second game 5-3 and the White Sox first pounded the Twins 9-3, then lost 3-0.

The Royals downed the A's 8-2 and the Angels defeated the Rangers 4-2. The Red Sox and Orioles were rained out.

In Saturday's games it was Minnesota 4, Chicago 2; Detroit 4, Milwaukee 2; Kansas City 5, Oakland 2; Cleveland 6, New York 5; Boston 4, Baltimore 1 and California 9, Texas 1.

Houston's Protest Disallowed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — National League president Chub Feeney announced Monday he has disallowed a protest filed by the Houston Astros in a game they lost to Atlanta May 21.

The protest was filed by Manager Leo Durocher in the top of the ninth, after Atlanta scored a run to take a 6-5 lead.

Astros first baseman Lee May took a throw at first base for the second out but, thinking it was the third out, flipped the ball to first base umpire Paul Pryor. The umpire caught the ball and held it momentarily before dropping it, and a runner scored.

Durocher then protested, but Feeney York in Secretariat which says, "If a thrown ball accidentally touches a base coach, or pitched or thrown ball touches an umpire, the ball is alive and in play."

Secretariat to Relax Before His Next Bid

NEW YORK (AP) — When Secretariat goes after the Triple Crown in the Belmont Stakes June 9, his main challenger once again will be Sham, trainer Frank (Pancho) Martin confirmed Monday.

"He came out of the race just fine and his next race will be the Belmont," Martin said of Sham, runnerup to Secretariat in the Kentucky and the Preakness, each time by 2½ lengths.

After Saturday's Preakness, Martin had indicated Sham would skip the Belmont, saying: "I have no plans for the horse including the Belmont."

But the trainer said he and owner Sigmond Sommer have decided to start Sham in the 1½-mile Belmont, longest of the Triple Crown races, because the colt had problems in the Derby and Preakness and they wanted to give him another chance.

In the Derby, Sham hit his head in the starting gate and loosened two teeth, which had to be cut out, but still broke two minutes in finishing second to Secretariat who ran the 1¼ miles in a record 1:59 2-5.

Then, in the Preakness, Sham hit the rail going into the first turn.

"It's tough enough to beat a horse like Secretariat without having trouble," said Martin. "I want to see him in a race like the Belmont with plenty of room."

Sham is scheduled to take it easy this week and then begin serious preparation for the Belmont.

Secretariat's trainer, Lucien Laurin, also said his Meadow Stable colt will relax at Belmont Park this week, then get to work for his bid to become thoroughbred racing's first Triple Crown winner since Citation a quarter of a century ago.

"He came out of the Preakness raring to go again," said Laurin.

Laurin also was informed Monday that Pimlico stewards had officially adjusted Secretariat's time of 1:56, tied fastest for the 1 3-16 Preakness, to 1:54 est. Canonero II set the record of 1:54 in 1971.

Laurin said "the change leaves me cold because it still doesn't give me the record. I've added he wasn't too fast because the victory was really counted.

The stewards approved the change after viewing tapes of the race and being told that E. T. McLean Jr., Pimlico's official timer, had recorded the 1:54 2-5 with a stopwatch.

McLean serves as a backup to the electronic timer, which during the current Pimlico meeting the two sources have agreed on all but two occasions.

Burlington Opens With Two Shutouts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bill Drennan and Al Few whiffed 28 batters, allowed eight hits and no runs during the weekend as Burlington opened its season in the Ontario Football League with two 3-0 wins.

Drennan displayed Burlington's mound power Saturday at home as he struck out 20 Newmarket players and allowed only two hits.

Drennan, formerly with the world-champion Richmond Hill Dynes, also had a run-producing single, one of four hits given up by loser Bill Lunney and Larry Marshall, his seventh inning replacement.

Few struck out eight and allowed six hits in St. Catharines Sunday as Hal Kemp came up with the big hit for Burlington, a two-run triple in the fifth inning.

In other league action Sunday, Newmarket spoiled the home-opener for Niagara Falls with a 6-4 win and Oshawa nipped Welland 2-1 in Welland.

Saturday, Toronto was outhit at home but scored the only run in a 1-0 victory over London and Keith Wagler pitched a three-hit shutout and struck out 11 as Kitchener downed Windsor stock 3-0.

Play resumes tonight with St. Catharines at London and Niagara Falls visiting Welland.

Ron Lahey, Rich Lunney and Dennis Leech had home runs for Newmarket in their win over Niagara Falls. Larry Marshall got the win and Jake Neufeld was the loser.

Oshawa picked up its win on two unearned runs. Barry Turnbers struck out 10 and gave up five hits in a winning role while Ken Rhorg lost, although he struck out 11 and yielded only four hits.

Joe Adams and Dave Fox allowed Toronto only three hits but John Rose's grounder scored the only runs enough to drive in Don Lee with the winning run. London picked up five hits.

In Woodstock, Wagler got the win as Dave Jones and Ian Reed lost inning when Frank Eichorn tripled home Pat Struck, who had singled.

MILAN UPSET

ROME (Reuter) — Juventus of Turin won the Italian League soccer championship on Sunday for the 19th time, defeating Roma away 2-1. The championship was not decided until the last game and A. C. Milan, which had alternated with Lazio at the top of the table for most of the season, was favored to win. With 44 points, one more than Lazio and Juventus, Milan had only to beat lowly Verona, 10th in the final standings, but in an astonishing result Milan lost 3-2 and Lazio was beaten by ninth-place Naples 1-0.

Norman Wins Eddie Shack's Tournament

TORONTO (CP) — Moe Norman of Tavistock, Ont., scored an even-par 66 Monday to lead a field of 85 golf pros, hockey players and celebrities in Eddie Shack's annual celebrity golf tournament.

One stroke behind Norman were golf pro Ken Fulton of Montreal, former National Hockey League star Andy Bathgate and Sid Hamilton of Brampton, Ont., runner-up in last year's Ontario amateur championship.

Low score among active hockey players in the tournament belonged to Gerry Meehan of Buffalo Sabres of the NHL. He finished with a 71, one better than Tim Ecclestone of Detroit Red Wings.

This year's tournament marked the opening of a new golf course operated by Shack-a forward with Pittsburgh Penguins.

Player Development Emphasized by CAHA

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Taking its cue from Russia, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association appointed Dr. Cecil G. Eaves of Calgary Monday as development co-ordinator.

Dr. Eaves, 38, a teacher at University of Windsor, Ont., was a consultant during the 1972-73 season for Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

Dr. Eaves said "we want to find what parts are necessary to make a complete Hockey player and also what ingredients are needed to produce a successful team."

He said his duties will involve co-ordinating efforts of all technical directors in the various branches across Canada.

"I recently returned from Moscow," Dr. Eaves said, "and after observing their system, I found what we said was no different from the programs we are planning."

However, he added, their physical culture institutes trained 70,000 coaches to work with different sports. Seven of the 23 institutes specialize in hockey.

"They create a cube hockey players from the age of four," he said.

Earlier, Joe Kryczka of Calgary, outgoing president, bitterly attacked the World Hockey Association, the International Ice Hockey Federation and Hockey Canada.

"I am distressed and upset that a person purporting to be the head of a professional hockey group (Gary Davidson) would report that the WHA terminated negotiations with the CAHA because its dollar figures were too high.

"We have encountered many difficulties in attempting to negotiate with the WHA. We had preliminary meetings with their officials two months ago and a further session during the Memorial Cup played in Montreal.

"I can't understand what Davidson was talking about when he reported that our dollar figures were too high-when in fact the figures discussed were brought in by members of the WHA committee.

"We will have to stand up and be counted and prove to the WHA or anyone else who cares to listen that we are the governing body of hockey in this country.

"The WHA apparently now is content to sit aside and steal our players and ... is attempting to drive a wedge between our branches," he said.

Kryczka was referring to rumors circulating Sunday that the WHA has offered the Western Canada Hockey League $70,000 a player for development purposes to acquire a pipeline to graduating age-group players.

Kryczka told the delegates to "incessant reports" that the Saskatchewan Amateur Hockey Association is spearheading a move to break ranks with the CAHA.

Kryczka said that during meetings in Romania, the CAHA delegates were "treated with contempt, insulted and humiliated" by IIHF President J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne and "we should have a long memory on that score."

"We have received poor cooperation from Hockey Canada," Kryczka said, "and I believe the time has come when we must decide whether to continue our association with that group."

During presentation of the report of the resolutions committee, Saskatchewan President Harold Arason was refused a bid to have the committee's recommendation voted.

Jones attempted to block a suggestion by Kryczka that the report of the structuring committee be deferred until a special meeting of the CAHA directors in Winnipeg June 23-24.

The resolution called for dissolution of the Thunder Bay and Ontario District Hockey Association branches.

"This is one of the more important problems we have to grapple with," Jones said. "I can't see why this matter can't be settled here from the floor. I think we owe it to the people from Thunder Bay and the ODHA to let them know now whether they are going to be executed or reprieved."

Kryczka also said the CAHA received a deficit in the extent of $80,000 net from the Russia—Canada hockey series. Total assets amounted to $200,000 as compared with $189,000 the year previous.

Executive-Director Gordon W. Juckes of Ottawa said 600,221 players were registered with the CAHA.

At a meeting of the rules committee, a recommendation was made that any player who stabs in the face of a referee or a linesman will be subject to a match penalty.

The committee also asked that all ice markings be identical to those for the National Hockey League.

PLAN NEW ARENA

BOSTON (AP) — The owners of Boston's professional basketball and hockey teams have agreed to a $20-million sports arena in the South Station area, the Boston Redevelopment Authority announced Monday. The agreement to build the 18,000-seat arena will be signed "early this week," said BRA director Robert Kenney. The building will be financed by Storer Broadcasting Corp., owner of the Bruins of the National Hockey League, and Robert Schmertz, owner of the Celtics of the National Basketball Association and the Whalers of the World Hockey Association. Kenney said the arena should be finished by early 1976.

Green Gaels Need Extra Time

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

For Oshawa Green Gaels, winning an Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A game just seems to take a little extra time.

The Green Gaels went into overtime Monday to edge Brampton Excelsiors 15-14. It was Oshawa's first win of the season.

In other league action, Etobicoke PCOs downed Rexdale Warriors 16-11.

At Oshawa, Stan Cockerton and Jeff Mason scored three goals each for the Green Gaels. Terry Lloyd, Doug Bannon and Chris Bowe scored two goals each. Single goals went to Ray Trudell, Dave Fitchett and Jim Dulgman.

Bramalea's top scorer was Ken Webster, with five goals. Ian Robinson and Bob Burke scored three goals each. Chuck Williams, Wayne Sterrin and Marty Lake added one each.

At Toronto, the PCOs were paced by three goals apiece from Bruce- Murdock and Randy Novak. Brian Howe counted two. Singles were tallied by Mike Fisher, Bob Boward, Brian Legree, Keith Cameron, Colin Aimer, Dave Pirot, Wally Cioza and Rob Hert.

Bob Ballihn, Don Walker and Blair Campbell each scored two goals for Rexdale. Bruce Bolithe, Bill Munn, Bill Peterson, K. C. Patterson and Matt Hardin each scored once.

Table Tennis Finals Dominated by Toronto

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Toronto players dominated the finals in singles and doubles title play at the Canadian table tennis championships here Monday.

They swept the women's events as the men's titles and formed five-sixths of the winning doubles combinations.

The only non-Toronto player to break into the winners' circle was Marian Domonokos of Chateauguay, Que., who teamed with Bruite Plucas of Toronto to win the women's doubles.

Domonokos earlier fell victim to Violetta Nesukaitis of Toronto in the women's singles final. Miss Nesukaitis held off a determined challenge to retain her title.

Earl Cvetano of Toronto moved defending Canadian champion Larry Lee of Weston, Ont., away from the table in a stout challenge to win the men's title.

Cvetano and Peter Gonda of Toronto hooked up in torrid five-game encounter with Lee and Paul Klewinas of Waterloo before scoring a 19-21, 21-17, 18-21, 21-18, 21-14 victory in men's doubles final action.

Cvetano and Nesukaitis took three closely-fought games to dispose of Gonda and Domonokos 21-15, 23-21, 21-19 for the mixed doubles crown.

In women's doubles, Domonokos and Plucas had a relatively easy time in defeating Violetta and Flora Nesukaitis 21-11, 21-16, 21-17.

In senior men's final play, Derek Wall of Toronto, a former men's champion, defeated Max Marinko of Toronto for the title.

Ontario won both the men's and women's team honors earlier in the three-day event.

Frank McCool Dead at 54

CALGARY (CP) — Frank McCool, 54, a former National Hockey League goaltender who became general manager and assistant publisher of The Albertan, died Sunday. He had been ill for some time with cancer.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday. The pallbearers will include Bill Dickie, Alberta's minister of mines and minerals.

Born in Calgary in October, 1918, McCool received his high school education there and then attended Gonzaga University at Spokane, Wash.

Joining The Albertan as a copy boy in the sports department, McCool at one time didn't consider hockey his bag.

"My mother never looked any indication that would point me toward a career in the big leagues," he once said. "I had even given up hockey when Lorne (Gorr (a former Toronto Maple Leafs winger) got me a tryout with Toronto.

He agreed to sign with Toronto "if they would pay for a $100 for coal I had bought for my wife."

"It was the only debt I had and I didn't like debts."

The Maple Leafs had themselves a bargain. McCool finished the 1944-45 season with a 2.92 goals-against average, second only to the great Bill Durnan of Montreal Canadiens, and collected a record four shutouts, three of them in succession. In the playoffs as Toronto won the Stanley Cup.

Ulcers ended his NHL career during the 1945-46 season. He had been discharged from the army earlier because of stomach trouble.

McCool learned to skate on an old canal that ran beside the Bow River near his parents' home and his stand-up goaltreeper style developed after someone gave him a pair of old skates.

"They had sharp points on the heels of the blades. I was from a poor family and couldn't afford pads, so my time'll fell down or went to my knees to stop a shot I was pricked by the points.

"It didn't take long for me to learn a goalie must try to stay on his feet.

Red Wings Sign Three

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Red Wings have signed three more of their amateur draft choices, general manager Ned Harkness announced Monday.

Coming to terms with the club were fourth-round choice Mike Korney, a defenseman from Winnipeg Jets; fifth-round pick Blair Stewart wing from the same club; and Dennis Polonich, a center-right wing from Tire Pine Bombers, an eighth-round choice.

The Wings signed their first pick, goalie Terry Richardson of the New Westminster, B.C., Bruins last week.

KEEPS CROWN

PANAMA CITY (AP) — Antonio Cervantes of Panama retained his World Boxing Association junior welterweight title Saturday night, knocking down Panamanian challenger Alfonso Frazer five times and stopping him in the fifth round of a scheduled 15-round bout. It was his third successful defence.

What the Stars Say

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, May 23

Aries (March 21-April 19): Friends continue to be helpful, although you must keep close track on them. Romantic impulses are strong, should be included in plans.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Resources are available from sideline activities. Speculative ventures are overexpanded, sold in most instances.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Make the best use of contacts with unusual people, opportunities to improve your mind—gather rare experience.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Circumstances turn in your favor. Look for details which normally pass unsuspected; seek technical advice where needed.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't let your pride get in the way of an offer to help. More is involved than the immediate sums would indicate.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Being an early bird pays, but plan a distinct break in this long, productive day—time out for a prayer.

Libra (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): Younger people fill the stage, inspiring both excitement and concern. Urge for expansion is apt to prevail.

Scorpio (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Now is an excellent time to cut through formal procedure, get to the core of any problem, stabilize your resources.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Seize any fresh opportunity. A thought for the morrow is well taken.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): At the moment, life has a tendency toward intense, poignant episodes. Useful news arrives; it's a memorable day.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be out early, meet people who may be helpful. Emotional concerns distract you at work.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Keep your own counsel, proceed quietly to the business at hand; get details squared away.

To Your Good Health

Milk's Calories Are 21 Per Ounce

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How many calories in an eight or 10 ounce glass of milk? We love it at home and have been drinking it—but we're putting on weight on. BUot don't blame only the milk. We are big eaters also.—F.O.

Figure about 21 calories per ounce, and you can do your own arithmetic, depending on the size of the glass.

The figure will be the same whether the milk is raw or pasteurized.

But if you are gaining weight, you can help yourself some by substituting low-fat or skim milk—the nutritive value will be the same, except that fat (high in calories) has been removed and some loss of vitamin A.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have angina pectoris. Can I have sex relations? And how often?—F.C.

Unless there are some special circumstances in your case, the answer is yes. The average angina patient ordinarily can continue at whatever has been normal for him.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Two years ago my wife, 24, had her womb and appendix removed because of pelvic disease. Is there such a thing as an artificial womb? We would another child desperately.—K.R.

I'm sorry, but no, no such thing. Have you considered adoption? That's the only answer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: True or false? If you take a child to a doctor each time it catches a cold, it will never build up any resistance to the germs?

We used to doctor our own children, but we had doctors say it didn't do any good, the germs just managed to survive. But they seemed to be less susceptible than those taken to the doctor all the time. Do they build up more resistance if not given too many penicillin shots? —C.B.

Your first question: No, a child doesn't "build up resistance" by not being taken to the doctor for every cold that comes along.

Nor does a child sacrifice resistance to colds by having penicillin. Colds are caused by viruses—not just one virus, but maybe as many as 200 varieties of virus.

Penicillin has no effect on viruses. Therefore, giving penicillin for a cold is a misconception we have been trying to overcome for years.

As to taking a child to the doctor for every cold: no, I wouldn't do it. It's a waste of time and effort. Put the child to bed, or at least keep his home and quiet, see that he gets plenty of rest and plenty of liquids.

If a secondary infection follows, meaning bacteria on top of the virus, then there's good reason for a doctor's help. Because antibiotics will combat bacteria—but not viruses.

These "secondary infections," if they occur, generally manifest themselves by fever and thick, yellowish discharges, rather than a "runny nose" with clear, watery drips.

Opening lead—queen of clubs.

When Sylvia first joined the club, she barely knew a spade from a heart in the ground. She thought a cough was something birds did, a pass something the boys made at girls!! and a double something you saw in the theatre.

But this didn't stop her from playing in the expert events, where of course she was outclassed. Her unfamiliarity with the niceties of the game was at times shocking and naturally produced horrendous disasters, but at the same time this very ignorance occasionally resulted in an outstanding triumph that would be discussed by the membership at large for weeks on end.

Take this deal which occurred shortly after Sylvia learned to finesse. This new found device was a fascinating revelation to her, and she relished each and every opportunity to use it with an unshakeable zest that scared her partners half to death.

West led a club. Sylvia won in dummy with the ♣A, ruffed a trump, and finessed the Jack! When this extraordinary gambit succeeded, Sylvia's expression of joy would have melted the heart of the Sphinx. She later had a heart a diamond and a club, but made four rooms.

East - West felt deeply aggrieved by the unaccustomed finesse, without which Sylvia inevitably would have gone down one. Yet, strangely enough, later analysis proved that Sylvia's play was correct and do only way to assure the contract.

Had the finesse lost to the singleton or doubleton queen, the contract would still have been firmly under control. The defense could cash a club and shift to a diamond, but declarer would win, cash a high trump, and play a heart to the queen and ace. South would then be able to discard a diamond on the king of hearts, using the three of spades as a sure-fire entry to dummy.

Victoria Couple Offering Canadian Reproductions

VICTORIA (CP) — A Victoria couple are interested in getting more Canadian art into more Canadian homes and they are doing something about it.

Charles M. (Bob) Nelles and his wife Gillian began their project of reproducing great Canadian works of art and distributing them about a year ago.

Their first venture was a series of six reproductions of early Canadian city views by noted artists and now is continuing with a series of eastern scenes by Cornelius Krieghoff plus an 1820 view of Victoria harbor by the noted painter Paul Kane.

Their work begins with research, poring through catalogues and listings in museums and libraries. Most choices are made the originals must be tracked down to private collection, art gallery or museum.

Then starts the correspondence to determine whether reproduction will be permitted.

This often takes the most time as some owners may not even answer letters at first and a different approach must be taken.

Once all the hurdles are cleared, Mr. and Mrs. Nelles pack their gear and head for originals—almost all in Eastern Canada.

They found their first set—Canadian cities painted in the 1850s—in three places: Toronto, by Edwin Whitefield, and Hamilton, by Robert Whale, in the National Gallery, Ottawa; Quebec City, by Hybert Clerget, in the Toronto Central Library; Montreal and Ottawa, by Whitefield, and Halifax, by J. W. Hill, in the Royal Ontario Museum.

These originals, whether lithographed and in watercolors or in oils, were photographed by Mr. Nelles, who later spent hours with a Toronto firm ensuring that the precise colors came out in the reproductions.

The same process was followed in the second series by Krieghoff and Kane with most of the originals found in the Thomson collection in Toronto.

These reproductions, under the title Canadart, are prepared for distribution by the Nelles' own company, Pandora Publishing.

They now are doing research for their next series.

One Theory on Progress

Spacemen Mated Cavemen, Producing Pyramids, Bible

NEW YOR (Reuter) — They came from a distant star many thousands of years ago and sparked intelligent life on this planet.

The notion that space travellers visited earth, mated with prehistoric man and left him with the technology to build the Pyramids and the wisdom to write the Ible is advanced in a series of controversial books by German author Erich von Daniken.

His proof? The baffling stone faces of Easter Island, cave drawings depicting helmeted astronauts and fantastic flying machines, a 2,000 year-old battery that still generates electricity and hundreds of other prehistoric mysteries.

In Chariots of the Gods? and Gods from Outer Space, the self-educated author says the beings came to earth several times and encountered man's distant ancestors. The "giants" managed to breed with a select group.

When the spacemen left for a time, von Daniken says, their offspring were warned not to mate with others (hence the later notion of original sin), but they did anyway and were "corrupted."

The space travellers eventually returned and destroyed the imperfect ones. They did this twice, with the Great Flood and again at Sodom and Gomorrah.

Finally the visitors were able to teach ancient man their secrets. Man was suddenly able to grind lenses, do sophisticated mathematical calculations, move massive stones and record what happened in our religious texts.

After lay left for the last time, man built huge landmarks (the great stone faces of Easter Island and the Pyramids, for example) and air strips in the hope that they would return.

How did such a mind-boggling idea present itself to von Daniken?

The 38-year-old Swiss-born writer says it began with his Roman Catholic high school education. Certain Old Testament passages puzzled him, such as the reference in Genesis to God creating man "in our image." Why "our" image and not "my" image?"

Some of the ancient enigmas that the author cites are:

—An electric battery on display at the Baghdad Museum which has been dated at 1000 BC and can still produce 1.5 volts.

—Old Turkish maps that depict Antarctic mountain ranges not discovered until 1952 and which he says match perfectly with aerial photographs of the earth.

—An Assyrian lens nearly 3,000 years old which he says he could see duplicated today with highly technical equipment.

—A 14,000-year-old bison skull found in Russia containing a hole which von Daniken identifies as a bullet hole.

—Various cave and tomb illustrations which he maintains depict astronauts, complete with helmets, spacesuits, and even aircraft with control panels, engines and exhaust systems. These, he says, can be found in South America, China, Western Europe and elsewhere.

—A 20,000-ton block of stone which he says was elaborately carved by the Incas, then turned on its head. He contends the Incas lacked the technology to remove it from its quarry and overturn it.

The gap between the theory and scientific acceptance can be exemplified in the case of the "air strips." The author says a strip of level ground 27 miles long and a mile across is a landing strip that primitive people constructed in the hope that the "gods" would return and land in their community. Archeologists call it a road. Von Daniken replies that such a road would have no function because it doesn't go anywhere.

Meanwhile, von Daniken plans further books and is currently involved in, editing his film, In Search of Ancient Astronauts, for worldwide commercial release after it is televised in the U.S.A.

(One of his published books, Gods from Outer Space, was written while von Daniken was in a European jail on fraud charges. He was later released unconditionally.)

The author believes that one day irrefutable proof of his theory will be unearthed. He speculates that the "gods" came to earth in the hope that they might find a new home, perhaps because their own planet had become uninhabitable. For unknown reasons this became impracticable and they departed.

Before they quit the earth, von Daniken says, they left future generations explicit data about their activities at what he calls a "mathematically logical point" on earth or in nearby space—a point that would eventually be discovered when mankind achieved the necessary scientific development.

To help in this development, the "gods" left clues, both in physical form and in ancient texts. Some day modern man will discover this "logical point," von Daniken says.

What if the "giants" return some day? Will they again be disappointed in our development? Will there be another Great Flood?

Von Daniken doesn't think so. "I think they'd be pleased," he says.

Jakarta Proposing To Cremate Moslems

JAKARTA, Indonesia (Reuter) — Jakarta's outspoken Governor Ali Sadikin has sparked controversy here by suggesting that Moslem dead should be cremated to ease the pressure for new burial grounds.

Moslem religious leaders, shocked by the suggestion, have been quick to reject it.

One prominent religious leader described cremation as a "great sin" and a noted Moslem scholar said no true ulama (religious leader) would agree to it. Islam teaches that man must return to the earth and bans the burning of bodies.

Sadikin, a blunt-talking marine lieutenant-general, said that Jakarta's graveyards were already overcrowded and new burial land was continually having to be found.

Dramatizing his appeal, he said that unless the idea that the dead must be buried was changed immediately, in 50 to 60 years about 70 per cent of the city area would be taken up by the cemeteries.

The governor, himself a Moslem, suggested cremation as the obvious answer and, in a bid to cut off the inevitable religious opposition, said that according to Islamic teachings, the dead are not allowed to trouble the living.

The religious affairs minister, Prof. Kakti Ali, a Moslem scholar, diplomatically suggested the idea should be discussed along with other proposals to overcome the shortage of burial space.

A leading Moslem scholar suggested the same graves could be used several times over once the body had decomposed. The Masli and Baki cemeteries in Mecca and Medina had been used continuously as burial sites for Moslems since Mohammed's time.

Belleville Tykes Top Thurlow

Although Thurlow tyke Jeff Beggie slugged a home run and added some flavor with a single, the Belleville Elliott Motors ball club won their fifth game of the Eastern Ontario Baseball Association season 16-8 under the pitching power of two knockers.

Belleville's Glen McQuaid and Rory McLeod both pitched three innings and allowed three runs while Brian Cronkright pitched one and allowed two runs to earn the season opener.

Thurlow's Mike Ledger and Jackson walked nine batters while together striking out six to suffer the loss. Steve Adams and Allan Jessup took a double and a single respectively from the Belleville hurlers.

Tony Parks and Cronkright each batted out a trio of singles among the 12 hits snagged by Belleville.

Fewer Unemployed

The number of unemployed in Canada in April was 570,000, a substantial drop from the previous month, according to Statistics Canada. The unemployment rate was 6.3 per cent of the labor force, compared with the March rate 6.8 per cent. (CP Newsmap)

Tony's of Cobourg Records Second Win

Despite the solid goaltending of Parsons' Al McNeil, Tony's Soccer Club of Cobourg dominated the second half of play to score three goals and earn a 4-2 victory over the Belleville club in Bay of Quinte Soccer Association action Sunday.

"Tony's outplayed us in the second half," said Peter Koutsoubis, Parsons' manager. "we didn't get a clean shot on net."

John Van Boken, Paul Allen and Walker Restana broke the back of a 5-1 Parsons' lead earned in the first half on Nick Del Grosso's two goals. Ben Venftas booted the only Tony's goal off the crossbar and into the net in the first half.

Tony's S.C., after an 8-2 season opener win against Bata Braves, will be in Trenton for an outing against Quinte Transport next Sunday while Parsons take on the Batawa club at Zwick's Island the following Wednesday.

CHARGE LINEMAN

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Linebacker Isiah Robertson of Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League faces arraignment on charges of hitting a policeman and resisting arrest in a connection with an incident at a weekend party, authorities say.

Gun Club Results

Bert Burgess added another perfect score to a growing list as he shot a perfect round of 25 at the Quinte Trap and Gun Club regular Sunday afternoon shoot.

Jack Rustan and Doug Johnston both missed a single trap from the five positions behind the house. Bill Pole, George Gerencser and Howard Wark each came up with 23 scores.

Gord Bates and Graydon Flindall (both with 22), Doug Scrimebaw (21) and Don Kleinsteuber (20) rounded out the top ten list.

Some of the better shooters in eastern Ontario will be participating at the Quinte Trap Club grounds in a registered shoot sanctioned by the Amateur Trapshooting Association this coming Sunday. Belleville area trapshooters next Sunday.

DIERKER RETURNS

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros placed reserve catcher Larry Howard on waivers following Monday night's National League loss to San Francisco and activated pitcher Larry Dierker for the first time this season.

PANTHER RECALLED

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Atlanta Braves of the National League announced Monday the recall of right-handed reliever Jim Panther from their Richmond farm club of the International League. Panther, acquired in a winter trade with Texas Rangers for outfielder Rico Carty, had a 1-2 record with a 4.50 earned-run average at Richmond.

WINS DRIVERS' TOURNEY

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Bill Vukovich, 39, of Fresno, Calif., fired a seven-over-par 78 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway golf course Monday to win the annual Mike Sullivan Indy drivers' tournament. Vukovich, 39, won for the second consecutive year.

TIGER WED

DETROIT (AP) — Norm Cash, first baseman for Detroit Tigers, was married Monday to Dorothy Maksoid, former roller-skating champion and sometime model. It was the second marriage for both.

TAKE CLUB TITLE

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (CP) — Three competitors from the Metro Club of Toronto won the club team award Sunday in a 25-kilometre race billed as the world veterans championship. Bill Allen and John Haddow of Toronto along with Art Taylor of Kitchener, the top three runners, picked up 81 points. Bill Stoddart, a 42-year-old Scottish lecturer, won the race in one hour, 23 minutes and 38 seconds. Allen was ninth in 1:27:21, Taylor 16th and Haddow 28th. Gord Dickson of Hamilton was 46th; Bob Borman of Woodstock 58th.

Bank Rate Increase

The Bank of Canada boosted the bank rate by one-half of one per cent to 5¾ per cent, a further step in the bank's effort to curb credit. The bank said that the new rate increase continues the policy outlined April 9 when the rate was pushed to 5¼ per cent from 4¾ per cent. The increase May 11 is only the second in the last 19 months. The central bank's interest rate tends to influence rates charged by other lenders. (CP Newsmap)

Yardmen Midgets Lose

The Belleville Yardmen midgets were not as fortunate in their season opener in Eastern Ontario Baseball Association play as were the Belleville tykes Sunday as they dropped a 14-2 decision to Cobourg.

Paul Bevan pitched six Belleville batters to first base on easy trips but struck out nine while being taken for eight hits. The Cobourg hurler went to first base twice as did teammate Gary Crookhrane. John Buckley added the finishing touches with a homer in the ninth inning.

Jeff Merrill and Phil Badgley both batted out doubles for the Yardmen.

With only three ballplayers back from last year, assistant coach Jim Crouchman explained that his club was still nervous on the larger infield than they were used to playing on. "But they are not thinking yet," said Belleville's Crouchman.

Nixon Explains
Security Behind Barring of FBI

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, acknowledging "apparently wide-ranging efforts" to cover up the Watergate scandal, says he intervened only to bar the FBI from looking into secret "national-security activities."

Declaring he will not resign, Nixon issued two statements Tuesday disclaiming any knowledge of or participation in illegal activities.

While conceding he is under heavy fire, Nixon said: "I will not abandon my responsibilities. I will continue to do the job I was elected to do."

The longer of the two presidential statements sought to deal, point by point, with much of the testimony and other disclosures widely deemed to be potentially most damaging to the chief executive.

In a 4,000-word defence of his conduct, Nixon argued repeatedly that "grossly misleading impressions" concerning his role can be explained by his concern for protecting national-security interests.

"In citing these national-security matters, it is not my intention to place a national-security 'cover' on Watergate," he said, "but rather to separate them out from Watergate. . . .

He said this is necessary because "sensitive documents are now threatened with disclosure."

In a series of denials, Nixon said he had no prior knowledge of the Watergate burglary; knew nothing about a cover-up; never authorized executive clemency offers to Watergate defendants; was unaware that his former personal lawyer, Herbert Kalmbach, raised money for the defendants; never attempted to implicate CIA in the scandal, and did not know until recently about the burglary of the Daniel Ellsberg case.

Here are other Watergate-related developments:

—The Senate Watergate committee recalled John Caulfield for intensive questioning today about the source of White House offers of executive clemency he conveyed to James McCord.

—The Senate judiciary committee had been expected to act quickly on Nixon's nomination of Elliot Richardson to be attorney-general. However, the committee abruptly reopened its hearings on the nomination Tuesday to investigate accusations raised as a result of the Pentagon papers trial.

Richardson told the committee that his efforts in the case were directed toward "maximum disclosure" rather than any coverup. Senators questioned whether he had known more about CIA involvement in the burglary of Ellsberg's psychiatrist than was disclosed to the Pentagon papers judge by former White House aide Egil Krogh.

In addition, Senator Robert C. Byrd (Dem.W.Va.) said "some question about appearances might be raised because a brother of Archibald Cox, Richardson's choice to be special Watergate prosecutor, is a lawyer for Howard Hughes, whose name has twice been linked to the scandal.

In his statement, Nixon said: "I considered it my responsibility to see that the Watergate investigation did not impinge adversely upon the national-security area." He said he was precisely surmised that "an unrestricted investigation of Watergate might lead to and expose . . . covert national-security operations" by a special investigations unit at the White House "now widely known as 'the plumbers.'"

In addition, he said, within a few days of the Watergate burglary "I was advised that there was a possibility of CIA involvement in some way."

As a consequence, he reported, he instructed recently-resigned aides H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman "to ensure that the FBI would not carry its investigation into areas that might compromise these sensitive national-security activities, or those of the CIA."

Said Nixon of Haldeman's interventions: "It was certainly not my intent, nor my wish, that the investigation of the Watergate break-in or of related acts be impeded in any way."

The president said again that he received repeated assurances that a White House inquiry by Lord counsel John Dean showed no involvement by anyone then employed by the White House.

"With hindsight," he said, "it is apparent that I should have given more heed to the warning signals I received along the way about a Watergate coverup and less to the reassurances."

Nixon conceded that on July 6, in a telephone conversation, Patrick Gray, then acting FBI director, "suggested that the matter of Watergate might lead higher" than the seven men ultimately convicted.

"I told him to press ahead with his investigation," said Nixon.

It was in this conversation, Nixon reported, that Gray told him Lt.-Gen. Vernon Walters, deputy director of CIA, had given assurances CIA was not involved in Watergate. The president said he had ordered Haldeman and Ehrlichman to co-ordinate national security limits on the FBI's Watergate inquiry with Walters and Gray.

Nixon said the special investigation unit was set up in 1971 under Ehrlichman's supervision and the direction of Krogh, then a White House assistant, "to stop security leaks and to investigate other sensitive security matters." Among the re-

Corroborated

Caulfield Backs McCord Except About Nixon Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Caulfield, who carried White House offers of executive clemency to Watergate burglar James McCord, faces intensive questioning today as the Senate Watergate committee seeks to pinpoint the source of those promises.

Caulfield already has corroborated much of his friend McCord's testimony to secret meetings and mysterious telephone calls. But McCord swore that Caulfield told him President Nixon was aware of their meetings and that "I may have a message to you at our next meeting from the president himself."

Caulfield said in his opening testimony Tuesday that he never named the president, only that he was conveying a message from the "highest levels of the White House." He told the committee the message actually came from presidential counsel John Dean, since fired by Nixon.

The president, in a detailed statement issued shortly after Caulfield testified Tuesday, said he never authorized, or knowingly, any offers of executive clemency for the Watergate defendants. Only the president has the power to grant such clemency in federal cases.

Caulfield is a former New York policeman who got himself a job during the 1968 Nixon presidential campaign that led to the White House post under John Ehrlichman. He brought with him another former policeman, Anthony Ulasewicz.

Ulasewicz, scheduled to follow Caulfield to the witness chair this afternoon, was first identified as the anonymous caller with a New York accent who McCord said relayed Caulfield's offers of executive clemency.

But it became clear Tuesday that he played a far broader role in the scandal surrounding the Watergate affair.

Caulfield testified that for three years beginning in July, 1969, Ulasewicz "performed a variety of investigative functions" for Ehrlichman and Dean under Caulfield's supervision. But instead of being paid on the White House payroll, Caulfield said, Ulasewicz "was paid on a monthly basis" by the law firm of Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's personal lawyer in California.

The Washington Star-News, quoting informed sources, says Ulasewicz investigated the personal and political affairs of potential Democratic presidential candidates and handled a wide range of other matters for the White House.

Cost-sharing Theme Of Premiers' Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — Billions of dollars and the balance of federal and provincial power are at stake as provincial premiers begin a three-day conference with Prime Minister Trudeau today.

The theme of the conference is federal-provincial cost-sharing—in particular the jointly-financed programs in medical care and hospital insurance. Other subjects are federal aid to post-secondary education and federal proposals to change the unemployment insurance system.

But on the basis of recent federal-provincial ministerial conferences, the most contentious topics will be medical care and hospital insurance.

The argument is over how much economic power Ottawa should give the provinces to get them to take over all of those programs, costs of which have been accelerating rapidly in recent years.

The federal government now pays half the cost of approved services under the programs. It contributed $1.3 billion last year to hospital insurance and $960 million to medical care.

Ironically, the shared-cost plans were initiated by the federal government in the 1960s over provincial objections. The provinces complained that Ottawa was invading their jurisdiction, forcing them to commit money to costly programs and restricting their freedom in determining the specific services to be included in the programs. As medical costs soared, Ottawa began seeking a formula to limit increases in its contribution.

It proposed that increases in its contribution be limited to roughly the increase in real gross national product (GNP), thus putting a limit of about 14 per cent on increases instead of actual growth of about 14 per cent a year. But the federal package was rejected by the provinces.

Then Health Minister Marc Lalonde and Finance Minister John Turner offered a new proposal at a May 7-8 conference of finance and health ministers, only to be rebuffed again.

Mr. Turner and Mr. Lalonde said the federal government has reached the limit in its offers to the province and will go no further.

Officials Confident
Skylab Rescue Mission Countdown Begins Today

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The countdown started today for man's first space salvage operation, and engineering and space officials confident they can repair the crippled orbiting Skylab and complete a 28-day flight.

Launch crews began the count on schedule at 5:30 a.m. EDT as they fed electrical power to the Saturn 1-B rocket and astronauts' Apollo ferry ship. Planned liftoff time is 9 a.m. EDT Friday.

"There is still a lot of work to be done between now and Friday," Skylab program director William Schneider said Tuesday night. "However, everything we are doing is on schedule.

"We are very pleased with the results of the crew training," he said. "It has given us confidence that we are go for a Friday launch."

He referred to extensive training sessions Charles Conrad, Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz underwent in simulators and a huge water tank at the Marshall Space Flight Centre at Huntsville, Ala., Tuesday.

Conrad and Kerwin practised deploying various types of sun shades designed to cool the Skylab vehicle. Th 8e5-ton lab has been overheated since it lost its heat shield during launching nine days ago.

Working in water provides some sensations of space weightlessness, and the 1.4 million-gallon tank contains full-scale models of the space station and the Apollo craft.

Weitz rehearsed a procedure in which he would lean out an Apollo hatch and try to free a jammed Skylab solar panel with a 10-foot pole that has a cutting tool on the end.

Late Tuesday, the astronauts flew to Cape Kennedy for final launch preparations. Thern, mission - commander Conrad told reporters: "The training is really supergood. We're ready to go."

Want Deadline On President's War Powers

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 120-day deadline on a president's power to commit United States troops abroad without specific approval of Congress was supported by the House foreign affairs committee Tuesday, 25 to 7.

But after backing that key provision the committee put off final action on its war powers bill—and an effort to attach a Cambodia bombing cut-off—until at least next week.

New Profumo Case

Health Minister Resigns, Admits He Knew Call Girl

LONDON (AP) — A junior minister in Prime Minister Edward Heath's government who resigned Parliament's confidence day to "a casual acquaintance with a call girl" but denied newspaper reports that national security is imperilled by the involvement of high-ranking officials in an international vice ring.

"There has been no high-life vice ring, no security leak, no blackmail; and so far as I know, no politician from any party is remotely concerned with these events," said Lord Lambton, who was undersecretary of defence for the RAF.

But Heath called his top advisers together to investigate the allegations of what sounded like another Profumo scandal. Scotland Yard was pressing an investigation; and informed sources said MI-5, the government counter-espionage agency, has been ordered to check whether national security has been compromised.

The Daily Mirror says one source close to the top level of the government told it that Scotland Yard's file on the matter was "dynamite."

"I behaved with credulous stupidity," said Lambton, 50-year-old father of a son and five daughters, in a press statement. He said he has been told the husband of the call girl with whom he was acquainted secretly took some photographs and sold them to newspapers.

Lambton said Scotland Yard interviewed him Monday and "persistently questioned me as to whether I had been the subject of blackmail."

"There has been no security risk and no blackmail, and never at any time have I spoken of any aspect of my late job," he said.

"All that has happened is that some sneak pimp has seen an opportunity of making money by the sale of the story and secret photographs to papers at home and abroad."

Police Contract Negotiations Now Will Go to Arbitration

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The Picton Police Commission has received notice of arbitration in its salary negotiations with the town association.

Commission chairman Jesse Mason said the police association has requested a 31 per cent increase in a one-year period plus additional benefits. The police commission's offer of a 15 per cent increase over a two-year period has been rejected.

Mr. Mason expressed surprise at the decision to move into arbitration and said he felt public relations with the police force had been damaged by this action.

"We felt bodily that they (the police association) did not come to the board on their own initiative without an outside man," he remarked.

The commission has rejected the arbitrator, Judge Rene Marin, proposed by the Negotiation and Arbitration Services for the Police Association.

At a press conference in the offices of Picton mayor H. J. McFarland, a police constable, McFarland, a police constable, Mr. Mason said a counter offer had been anticipated from the association.

The commission presented its offer and suggested that representatives of the police association should discuss it with all members of the police department. Two weeks passed before the commission was informed that its offer had been refused and arbitration would follow.

"We advised them we were prepared to continue the negotiations and meet with the local police officers involved and their representatives from the arbitration board," said commissioner Mason.

He observed that a first-class constable's salary is now $9,000 with the town police department and an increase amounting it to $11,800 is being sought.

It is also requested that the salary of the department's sergeant be raised from $9,222 to $12,300.

Extra benefits are being sought by police including an additional statutory holiday, Remembrance Day.

This proposal was approved by the commission in negotiations.

Police also asked for a maximum supplementary pension under the OMERS plan with a retirement age of 60 years instead of the present age of 65.

"This would cost the town several thousand dollars," commented Mr. Mason, explaining that it had been rejected.

A request was presented for 100 per cent payment of hospitalization and medical and extended care. The police commission offered payment of two thirds of the cost.

An additional $7,000 life insurance was proposed by police to bring their coverage to $20,000. The town was requested to pay the full cost. Mr. Mason said that this could have been negotiated.

In lieu of statutory holidays, police asked for 10 days' time off for each.

Mayor McFarland said every effort was made to negotiate and the taxpayers' dollar was a prime consideration.

He observed that when a two-year contract with police was negotiated in 1970, a 20 per cent increase was granted over a two-year period.

The police commission will meet again Friday to select a member as its representative in the arbitration.

The chosen arbitrator, Judge Marin, also will be rejected by the commissioners at this time. Members of the Police Commission include Judge Wilfrid S. Lane, Mayor H. J. McFarland and Picton retailer Jesse Mason.

Security Reasons Are Cited

cruits for the unit were Hunt and fellow conspirator Gordon Liddy.

The unit was created following the Pentagon papers leak and later conducted the burglary at the office of Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Nixon said that when he learned April 25 that Hunt clearly was involved in that illegal entry, he directed that the information be transmitted immediately to Attorney Matthew Byrne, who subsequently dismissed all charges against Ellsberg and fellow-defendant Anthony Russo.

The president said he had impressed upon Krogh "the vital importance to the national security" of uncovering all possible information about Ellsberg's associates and motives."

"I did not authorize and had no knowledge of any illegal means to be used to achieve this goal," said Nixon.

Nixon said because of the emphasis I put on the crucial importance of protecting the national security, I can understand how highly motivated individuals could have felt justified in engaging in specific activities that I would have disapproved had they been brought to my attention."

Nixon added that, as president, he must assume responsibility for such actions, nevertheless.

Nixon also reported on an "intelligence plan" he approved in 1970 and disapproved a few days later because of objections from the late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. He said it is this discarded plan that Dean placed in a safe-deposit box and eventually turned over to Judge John Sirica.

Drafted at a time of widespread bombings and campus disturbances, the plan as once approved included, said Nixon, "authorization for surreptitious entry, breaking and entering, in effect, on specified categories of targets in specified situations related to national security." He said the FBI had halted such activities in 1966.

Investigation Begins In Warkworth Escape

WARKWORTH An investigation begins today into the escape Monday of two inmates from the medium security institute here, following the recapture of the prisoners yesterday.

Both Monday, at 11 p.m., four inmates overpowered two guards, locked them in a room and, using the guards' keys, made good their escape after scaling a 14-foot chain-link fence in the prison yard.

A watchtower guard, armed with a shotgun, blasts fired in chance of hitting the escapees from his vantage point 1,150 yards away, but proved a deterrent to the fifth prisoner who had joined in the bid for freedom. This man gave himself up at the gate.

Shortly after 2 p.m. yesterday, the combined efforts of 40 institution guards and 16 provincial police officers from Brighton, Cobourg and Campbellford detachments plus Constable Fred Arthurs and guard dog Sabre from Belleville OPP, led to the recapture of the last two prisoners.

Gary Reginald Barnes, 20 and Andre Gerard Roy, 22, both of Toronto, were discovered hiding behind bales of hay in a barn on the farm of Charles Puddephat, three miles southeast of the institution.

A spokesman for Brighton OPP said footprints outside the barn led them to the hidden men.

What will go down in local prisoner roundup history as one of the fastest, started only 11 hours after the initial four men escaped.

John Gladu, 20, of Hamilton, was recaptured in a swamp near the institution and an hour-and-a-half later, Max Thomas Willis, 21, of Toronto, was flushed out of the same swamp. Both men were tracked there by Sabre.

The rash of prison breakouts from prisons across the country, police and prison officials have been somewhat touchy about the subject of security and rehabilitation in Canada's institutions.

But where police in Quebec have expressed little use for the prison guards there, the opposite reaction has been felt in this vicinity.

The Brighton provincial police spokesman firmly stated that "there is nothing but the best co-operation between our two forces whenever a need such as this arises.

"We've never had any trouble at all," he said.

Warkworth Institution Security Institute Director William Westlake this morning added his own words of co-operation between the forces since opening of the institution in 1967.

"It is always good when there is harmony between units. Sometimes we feel a bit embarrassed at having to call on Brighton OPP quite frequently because we don't re-

Thieves Interrupted With Safe in Marsh

TWEED — Police in Tweed and Belleville are investigating what looks like a well planned plan to steal the contents of a safe that contained the weekend receipts of a downtown grocery store here.

The safe, housing an undisclosed sum from IGA Supermarket, was found undamaged early Tuesday morning in a backwards at River and McGammon Streets, one-quarter mile from the grocery store.

Beside it were cutting torches, acetylene tanks, sledge hammers, wrecking bars, tarpaulins, flashlights and rain coats. The equipment is believed to be the property of Canoe Welding Gases of Belleville, which reported a break-in sometime between Sunday and Tuesday morning.

Two Tweed residents, on their way home from work at about 3 a.m. Tuesday, told town police Chief Don Thompson they saw flashlights in the bush and three or four men engaged in some sort of activity.

The chief Thompson and Constable Barry Wallace arrived at the scene minutes later but the men ran to a station wagon parked in a nearby driveway and drove off. The officers were able to get a description of the car although they could not make out the licence plate number.

The safe and equipment were transported to Belleville for identification Tuesday morning. Once there, however, police officials reconsidered the equipment as being similar to material taken from Canoe.

Thieves are known to have cut grates at the rear of the IGA store early Sunday morning and entered by crawling through air ducts. The safe, located at the front of the store, was transported out on a grocery cart which was also found in the marsh.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said his department received a call from Canoe Tuesday morning to report approximately $375 in welding equipment missing. Apparently a truck parked in the driveway crowded a screen for the thieves who removed the garage door to gain entry into the Sidney Street building.

RCAF Memorial Refund Promised If Site Shifted

Belleville City Council Tuesday received a copy of a letter from Mayor Duncan Mc-Donald of Trenton to Air Marshal C. R. Dunlap, president of the RCAF Memorial Fund, asking for the return of Trenton's $10,000 contribution toward the memorial.

"The Town of Trenton contributed, in good faith, the sum of $10,000, toward the cost of constructing an RCAF Memorial at Trenton Base," said Mayor McDonald. "It now appears the chance is 11% le likelihood of this being fulfilled.

"The town's wish is that under no circumstances does it want to contribute to such a structure in any location other than the Trenton Base," he continued. "If that is not the present intention of your committee, then please return the contribution made by the citizens of Trenton."

The move follows a similar request made recently by Major Gordon Jeffrey of Belleville. At the Tuesday meeting council received Air Marshal Dunlap's reply.

"Please be assured that if the RCAF Memorial is not built at CFB Trenton there will be no further disbursement of the Belleville contribution to any other alternative project without your prior consent," he wrote.

Regarding the contributions made in support of the RCAF Memorial, you will appreciate that certain administrative, fund-raising and other expenses were unavoidable," said Air Marshal Dunlap. "Considering the fact the original project was to have cost $2.6 million. It is understandable that administrative and funding expenses were geared to this amount, hence they were fairly high."

He said some portion of all contributions was applied against expenses as they were incurred and that it is inevitable any refund would be less than the original contribution.

"In other words, it would be pro-rated in relation to expenditures to date, adding expenses for the past six months had only been $3.

Arson Possible In House Fire

PICTON — An inspector from the Ontario Fire Marshall's office this week is investigating a house fire that broke out at 48 Church Street last Saturday night.

The home, owned by Bertha Lynch, received approximately $700 damage before firemen could bring the flames under control.

A spokesman for the Picton fire department has stated that it appeared the blaze was started deliberately from outside.

Council Accepts A Reduced Raise

In approving the City Budget Tuesday, Belleville aldermen turned down an eight per cent increase in their allowance, but settled for a five per cent increase.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds had suggested the eight per cent increase in his recommendations for amendments to the budget. "I move these be deleted," said Alderman Bea Corke on seeing the increase proposals.

"I would say that next year I will support a move to $3,000 for aldermen and $3,000 for the mayor," he said.

In 1972 each alderman received a $2,600 stipend for serving on council and the mayor $7,550. Other ex-officio stipends boosted the mayor's total allowance to $10,118.40.

Alderman Stu Meeks said he disagreed with Ald. Corke on the grounds that the small stipend was depriving a working man from serving on council. "If they were bigger there'd be more people running for council," he said.

"There's no election this year," said Ald. Corke.

Ald. Meeks found support from Alderman Jack Ireland. "I think it should increase to $3,000 for aldermen on a yearly system," said Alderman Jean Smith. "There should be a level-off at $3,000."

Mayor Robin Jeffrey called for a recorded vote on the issue, which was only complicated by a split vote. In favor of retaining the increase were Aldermen Ireland, Keegan, Meeks, Orr and Smith. Opposed to the increase were Aldermen Corke, Cox, Porter, Stock and Mayor Jeffrey.

A lesser motion calling for a five per cent increase was carried with five voting in favor and one abstaining.

Flooded Roadway 'Carp Crossing'

PICTON — Prince Edward County will make application for flooding assistance at Big Island crossing.

Keith MacDonald, chairman of the county roads committee, has informed county council that the area has been photographed and levels taken.

The district engineer, who is sector co-ordinator for flooded areas, visited Prince Edward last week and studied the causeway.

Residents of Big Island driving to the mainland are forced to travel through water on the road. A sign bearing the words "Carp Crossing" has been painted and erected by one flood-bound motorist in the area.

Building's Birthday Marked

Albert College headmaster Lorne Shewfelt, graduating class president Jo-Anne Willmett and Grade 13 student Neil Ramdehol inspect the trowel that was used 50 years ago May 22 for the laying of the college's cornerstone. While the existing college is just one half century old, the college has been in the city since 1857 when it was founded by the Methodist Episcopal community.

Hydro Proposal Protested

PICTON — Conservationists protesting an Ontario Hydro proposal to string a 230,000-volt transmission line across Hayward Long Reach will petition the provincial government to force withdrawal of the plan. The line would serve Prince Edward County.

The petition will be circulated by the Sierra Club of Ontario and a "citizens' group, Save Our Bay committee, chaired by James Madden of Napanee.

It calls for the following:

1. The Ontario Hydro publicly abandon plans for a crossing involving the Hayward-Long Reach area.

2. That Ontario Hydro publicly release all studies relative to the need for a massive increase of the load carrying capacity, into Prince Edward County. Hydro should also provide full disclosure of the load forecast and the exact uses that the load is to serve. Hydro should also release the technical data related to the transmission design.

3. That Ontario Hydro immediately announce formal plans for an "open planning" system to local residents and other concerned citizens on the planning process.

4. That Ontario Hydro be urged to consider withdrawal of plans for transmission at 230-Kv and to seriously study the possibility of upgrading the present 44-Kv lines up to 115 Kv, the latter having the advantage of being able to use existing rights of way and carrying the ability on wooden poles.
